ON SCIENTIFIC DISEASE

Modern medicine by scientific methods has advanced beyond the wildest dreams of the ancients. It is now possible to cure diseases which were once considered incurable. The scientific method of medicine is based on the study of the human body and the use of the latest scientific instruments. This has led to the discovery of many new drugs and the development of new surgical techniques. The result is that many diseases which were once fatal are now curable. This is a great triumph for the human race and a testament to the power of science.

CHRONOLOGY OF THE YEAR 1937

Compiled by H. P. FISHER

DOMESTIC

The year 1937 was a year of significant events in the United States. The economy continued to show signs of recovery, with a steady increase in production and employment. The government implemented various policies to stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment. The year also saw the passage of several important laws, including the Social Security Act and the National Labor Relations Act. These laws had a profound impact on the lives of millions of Americans. The year ended on a note of optimism, with many people looking forward to a brighter future in 1938.

INTERNATIONAL

The year 1937 was a year of international events. The world was in a state of tension, with the threat of war hanging over Europe. The League of Nations continued to work for peace, but its efforts were hampered by the actions of several major powers. The year also saw the signing of the Kellogg-Briand Pact, which aimed to outlaw war. Despite the challenges, the year ended with a sense of hope for a more peaceful world in 1938.

DISASTERS

The year 1937 was a year of disasters. There were several major earthquakes, including one in California that caused significant damage and loss of life. There were also several major fires, including one in New York City that destroyed a large portion of the city. These disasters had a profound impact on the lives of millions of people. The year ended with a sense of tragedy and a call for more disaster relief efforts.

SPORTS

The year 1937 was a year of sports. There were several major sporting events, including the World Series and the Olympic Games. The year also saw the rise of several new sports, including basketball and tennis. The year ended with a sense of excitement and a call for more sports events.
