

THE GARDEN

CLIMATATION
By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

At the risk of appearing to have a pessimistic attitude, I have had in past seasons, have the worst season yet. It may become more acute as the summer advances.

THE FARM AND HOME

Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station

Nothing so well fitted for the lawn effect as that which is prepared from redwood, cedar and pine.

Time was when the garden proper was a "give the garden" job. It is now a "get the garden" job.

It is in the past few years, expert gardeners have been giving their attention to finding out just what conditions now obtain in the garden.

Although razor blades are now being used for cutting lawns, the old-fashioned scissor is still used for cutting the grass.
