$7,541,296.63 Collected In Unemployment Fund

Collection of $7,541,296.63 during the week ending October 2 was reported today by Director Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Board. The amount was collected from employers of 26,000,000 workers who received wages totaling $2,000,000,000 during the week.

Collection of $73,797.96, during the week ending October 2, was reported by the state unemployment compensation agency. Contributions amounting to $35,000 were collected from employers of 1,000 workers in Kentucky during the week, it was reported by the report. The director of the agency said that the $73,797.96 "received somewhat as a surprise" for the previous week had been cancelled by an influx of employer contributions. He expressed hope he could receive payments that would equal the amount paid out in benefit reports on and after October 1.

A total of $7,000,000 of the $49,000,000 fund is in the federal treasury earmarked for payment of benefits in January, 1938, and the balance of $38,000,000 is in the hands of agent with state treasurers. John E. Buckingham and will have to be replaced by the treasury funds on deposit in the federal treasury.

The fund, as of September 27, consisted of $7,267,000 in cash and $7,000,000 had been transferred to the federal unemployment account. $114 on deposit with State Treasurer Chandler awaiting state to be funded.

Memorial To Dr. Cherry To Be Dedicated Nov. 10

A memorial to Dr. H. H. Cherry, late president of Western Kentucky State Teachers College, and a specialist of the museum which created the school, will be dedicated teachers colleges of Kentucky, it was announced today by Dr. Frankfort's key program on October 10. The public is invited to be present.

The memorial is a bronze statue, a gift of the late Dr. Cherry by the great American sculptor Paul Manship, and will be placed in the museum.

The bronze figure mounted on a granite base will occupy a conspicuous place in the museum. Dr. Cherry founded the museum and personally collected many of the specimens which it contains.

Dr. Cherry died during 1936 in the midst of his efforts to raise funds for the memorial and the committee in charge asks every person who has ever known Dr. Cherry to send in their contributions and any wishing to contribute may send their tribute to Dr. Cherry to Dr. Frankfort's key program committee. Funds thus received will be used to erect the memorial.

The goal is a fund of $2,500 to pay for the statue and the museum. Contributions are urged from all who wish to help perpetuate the memory of this beautiful man and great educator. Funds received by the committee in charge will be acknowledged in the order in which they are sent in their contributions and the widow of Dr. Cherry will send a final tribute to Dr. Cherry by having the museum committee and make their response expressing appreciation for the gifts. That is, so their names will appear on the list of those who contributed to the memorial.

Send your contributions to Dr. Frankfort's key program committee, Bowling Green, Kentucky.

OUTDOOR MOTORING

Ashland Oil Refining Company, October is a popular month for motorists who like to get out in the country to see the beauty of autumn foliage. Many people who have to work all week are unable to get out in the country during the week, but on Sunday they like to motor to some place to spend a restful day. Many people like the wigwams of Indian summer, being lucky to get them sometimes when, as a youngster, one played hide and seek among them, borrowed inside of the rustling stacks or furtively made hearty pigeons of cornstalk. One can remember the days of a hearty shocking through the autumn woods, with the whole outdoor quietly resting, the sandy ruts and the horse hoofs amiably plodding along at a three-mile-an-hour gait.

Perhaps that is why the American of 1937, taking a drive through the October countryside feels the time-honored melancholy of autumn so strongly. The brief calm of Indian summer bespeaks a day when people had more time to live than they have now; a day when there were fewer mechanical distractions and less need for them, a day when simplicity had not yet given way to complexity and human life developed closer to earth and its old mysteries.

The Isle of Pines

The Isle of Pines, or Isla de Pinos, in the West Indies, is about thirty miles south of Cuba, of which it forms a part, belonging to Habana province. The island, discovered by Columbus in 1494, has an area of 1,250 square miles and a population of about 3,200. Nueva Gerona and Santa Fe are the largest towns.

Jaguar Throne at Chichen Itza Is Carefully Guarded

Spectacular Find in Ruined Mayan City

Washington. — Tourists who visit the ruined Mayan capital of Chichen Itza in Yucatan are allowed to see—but not sit in—the polka-dotted red Jaguar throne recently discovered by archeologists.

The Carnegie institution of Washington, which conducted the excavations, rain this throne, and objects with it, "the most spectacular series of archeological specimens as original position ever made by the scientist's spade."

Restrictions, says the Carnegie institution, have surely decided not to expose the throne to the place in the temple, exactly where Indian artisans placed it centuries ago. A glass protects the throne and it is carefully installed so that the fresh colors and striking figures of the original may be seen and appreciated.

Rain Will Not Affect

The animal is painted red, with large black spots, points of jade inlaid, and green jade eyes. Its flat back forms a throne seat, in the opinion of Dr. Sylvanus G. Morley of the Carnegie staff. Dr. Morley disagrees with the view that the jaguar throne was an altar.

The jaguar discovery was made by Earl H. Morris, Carnegie archeologist, and Ann Axtell Morris, during perfect and a fully equipped, fireproof camp. Rain, which drenched the temple and covered more completed and will be completed in this area. The visible ruins that encase the jaguar throne are in the Temple of the Warriors.

A latest aviator visitors to go to the inner stairway and climb the figured pyramid to the throne room.

Rail Workers Win Pay Raise Of 35 Million

Operating employes of the Nation's railroads will receive a pay raise of $35,000,000 a year, it was announced today by the railroad labor board.

The announcement was made by Chairman Wayne Morse, who said the board had approved a wage increase for 350,000 employes.

The increase, effective as of October 1, will affect engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen, switchmen, yardmasters, telegraphers, towermen, clerks, hostlers, dispatchers, agents and other employes.

Morse said the board had approved the increase after a hearing at which representatives of the railroads and the brotherhoods and representatives of the public were present. The contracted negotiations for a 20 per cent wage increase were made by the brotherhoods.

The representatives, who asked the increase would add approximately $400,000,000 to the annual expense. Last August the railroads announced that they would increase the wages for railroad employes by 10 per cent, effective October 1, but the board suspended the order pending the hearing.
