SONG OF SEPTEMBER

(Caroline Parker Smith)

Now moon-swept by autumn And lazy with yawns! Full-crowded with the fast hours An hour as a sparrow.

To slow over meadows Down past the deep oak-mouth Out where the cream-lead vines Are widowed and bald. Harsh

Is indigo blowing In all brittle and burning Across the fall morning Now comforted and mourning

Comes song of September To sharpen our dreaming Almost, we remember And feel autumn's scheming!
