THE GARDEN

WINTER STORAGE FOR VEGETABLES IV

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

Last week, the constructing of an "outside cellar" was described, of 12 inches, and the sides and ends of planks, with the front hooked to the angle at the top. The bottom 6 inches of the floor should be detachable, or hung by hinges so be raised to serve as a fresh air intake, as needed.

Earth should be put on the roof of the "cellar," to a thickness of 12 inches, and the sides and ends should be banked to the angle of repose" for the "angle of repose" engineers call it. Usually, it is about 30 degrees, though for sandy soil the slope is more flat. It is of desired advantage to cover the whole with old sacks, propped on, to hold until the grass roots take hold.

A door, preferably of tongue and groove material, to make it air tight, should be hung on the in-cellar" is now complete, except for complete change of air.

In the early autumn or late spring when the days are warm but the nights cool, the vent and the "intake" at the foot of the door are left open during the night, and the outer door, for morning notice. To raise the inside temperature, as when the night temperature is severely low, air is admitted about midday, a folded piece being set before the intake vent.

It will be observed that as the decaying tissue refer storage room, the outer principles about are given off by the stored vegetables cause to raise, and escape through this vent in the ceiling, and fresh dry air flows in to replace it by way of the intake at the floor line. With vents placed as described, the process is automatic. The earth cover serves as insulation, even though it is only a few feet in depth, though if it should freeze cold that might harm the vegetables so absorbed, so many persons will recall who have protected vegetables from freezing in house cellars, by placing a wash tub filled with water next to them.

This concludes the description of structures designed to keep the stored crops through the winter. Next week a "warm crop" storage house, as for sweetpotatoes and squash, will be described and the following week the time-honored method of "burying" potatoes, turnips, and the like, in "pits," will be described, but with improvements.

PUBLIC SALE OF
75 ACRE FARM AND PERSONAL PROPERTY
ON THURSDAY, SEPT. 1, 1938
At 10 O'Clock A. M.

We will offer for sale, on the premises, the 75 acre farm of Mr. Chas. G. Talbert, situated on the Lower Jacktown road, 2 miles south of Carlisle.

This is a splendid community in which to live and is in one of the best agricultural sections in the Blue Grass region, only 2 miles from Carlisle on a State Highway. This farm is in a high state of cultivation. Practically all of the land is in blue grass and has been for many years. It is strong limestone soil; every acre can be cultivated and its productiveness is inexhaustible.

The Dr. Kendall Silex Co. dug on the far several years, have found enough to believe that all of the land is underlaid with this chemical. We have had the analysis made and find that it does contain some of it in extra good state of purity. The use of marl is increasing rapidly and is one of the most economical fertilizers to use. Lime and other fertilizers are also used.

There are about 6 acres of timber on the farm, which is fenced with pretty good watering facilities. Water is piped to all fields and lots.

The following personal property will be sold:

1 good horse, 1 saddle horse, 1 2-h. in. 8-speed, 1 2-h. in. 8-speed, mowing sled, mowing machine, narrow, deep, buggy, set of harness, 1 set plows and small implements, several ton of alfalfa and clover hay, bed room suite, double and single bed, dining room table, several chairs and small tables.

ANTIQUES: 1 four-poster bed, chest of drawers, writing desk, corner cupboard.

Possession of this property can be given on or before January 1st, 1939. For any information relative to this property see the undersigned agents or Mr. Chas. Talbert, Jr., who resides on the farm.

Terms made known on day of sale.

Plant Winter Cover Crops Early, Says Expert

Farmers who make plans for planting their winter cover crops early, like merchants who display their fall goods well in advance of the season, are likely to get best results, according to D. O. Williams, of the Soil Conservation Service of Carlisle, Kentucky.

Winter grains planted early will make good growth before cold weather comes and will provide better protection for the land against erosion, he pointed out. Late planted crops will not make sufficient growth to provide protection during the winter months when the protection is needed most.

Farmers who have their seed on hand and their planting plans made well in advance will be in a position to plant their crops when at the first possible moment that moisture and other conditions provide the right "season." If they are not ready, they may have to wait a long time to get the right season again.

Prisoner Escapes!

Guard Killed By British Officer In Daring Escape From German Prison Camp

Hunted by all the police in Germany, he found refuge in the heart and home of this lovely little girl of the Berlin streets . . . Calmly, bravely she faced the police and lied for him—lied for an enemy of her country whom she had known but one short night . . . Not even the threats of certain death could break her devoted loyalty to him.

You'll be held breathless by this exciting story of escape from a German prison camp. You'll be thrilled and fascinated by this romantic girl who took such desperate chances to hold the only tender, sincere love she ever knew . . . No wonder the late O. O. Kentucky Farm News

By gradually increasing his herd of hogs and raising the quality, Clarence McAtee of Trigg county has one of the state's best small herds. Last month, 39 pigs two to three months old gained an average of 35 pounds each at a cost of only 3½ cents per pound.

Analyses of flock records kept by Fleming county farmers show that profits are made in poultry when good breeding, balanced rations, sanitation and good management are features of the work. Of the chicks started, 97 per cent were raised.

Ten-litter projects started by Douglas Graham and Ray Carlwell, Hopkins county, were sized been brought into the county and as demonstrations at a recent meeting. Eleven Chester White pigs were found to weigh 2,000 pounds at the end of 165 days, and 11 Duroc Jersey pigs weighed 2,460 pounds.

Rockcastle county farmers are coming to believe that there are profits in sheep raising, as during the past month 200 sheep have been brought into the county and more are on the way. Hitherto the county has had practically no sheep.

Soil tests, soil building practices meetings, and orders for TVA phosphate show Union county's increased interest in better soils, as a result of demonstrations. W. W. Jones, who is handling the limestone business, reports record orders.

Hard-hit by recent floods, Elliott county farmers found that their burr crops survived well. Considerable tobacco and 1,200 acres of other crops were destroyed.

21 Farmers Ready To Sell Good Eggs

For four years, 21 farmers in Edmonson county obtained baby chicks from accredited flocks, culled their pullets fed balanced rations and provided good quarters for their flocks. Now, says County Agent Walter B. Ashby, they are ready to sell hatching eggs at premium prices, and arrangements are being completed with accredited hatcheries to take their entire output.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD McAFEE COX, D.D., Dean of The Bible Teacher Training School of Western Theological Seminary.

Lesson for August 28

ELI: RESPONSIBILITY FOR OTHERS

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 1:19-28; 4:10-18.
GOLDEN TEXT—Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.—Proverbs 22:6.

FOR NEXT WEEK—Study the Books in a Year.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Training Up the Child.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Challenge of Christian Fatherhood.

The responsibilities and privileges of fatherhood need special emphasis, and the lesson of today gives excellent opportunity for such consideration. Too often the training of children, which is almost inevitably largely in the hands of the mother, is entirely delegated to her, and the father becomes the man who pays the bills, occasionally exercises out a severe act of discipline, but otherwise is almost a stranger to his children.

Girls as well as boys appreciate and respond to the loving and understanding fellowship of a father who really improves the opportunity to build himself into the lives of his children.

Eli is a striking illustration of a man who had attained an honorable position in life, and who had discharged his public duties with success, but who failed lot even boys, because of weak indulgence. But a few Christian workers have followed in Eli's path.

I. A Weak Father and Vile Sons (1-10).

The sons of Eli were wicked men who dared even to use the service of the temple for the gratification of fleshly appetites and lusts. (See 2:12-17,22.) Eli's conduct against their most flagrant sin (2:22,24), but evidently he had lost his influence over them, for they did not heathen.

It is not always true that the wickedness of a son is the result of weakness in the father, nor is it always the case that weak fathers have vile sons. Often the sons live far better lives than their fathers, and frequently a godly and faithful father suffers the heartbreak of having a wayward son. But usually "like father, like son" is true. Boys learn from their fathers—not so much by words of admonition, as by deeds. Let us tell our boys how to live by first living a consistent Christian life, and then lovingly but insistently require of them during their days of irresponsibility conformity to the standards of God. We need to build moral fiber into American youth, if our country if it is not to fall into the decadence of the civilizations of the past.

II. Judgment—Personal and National (3:12, 14; 4:17).

Sin brings a horrible harvest of sorrow, suffering and judgment, not only to the individual but to his family, and ultimately to the nation. No man can ever divorce himself from his relationship to his family. His people will suffer for his waywardness, perhaps more than he suffers himself. The nation is made up of homes, and consequently when the family suffers the nation will suffer too.

There is a strange theory current that social and political entities have an existence apart from the people who make them up, that our people can drink and gamble and steal and kill, and yet somehow we will still be the "land of the free and the home of the brave." America is what the families in your community and mine are, and our families are what we are. May God help us to be better fathers, mothers, brothers, and sisters.

III. Responsibility and Opportunity.

This division of our lesson is drawn from no special portion of the Scripture lesson, but is presented to place squarely before us the fact that we (and we are speaking specifically to fathers) have a plain and inescapable responsibility for our family life, as well as to emphasize the fact that this is not a responsibility of which we should be afraid. It is God's gift of glorious opportunity.

Eli was a personal success as a priest. He had many commendable qualities, not the least of which was his gracious recognition of the ministry of Samuel, who had grown up in his presence and yet who was to be recognized by Eli as the messenger of God. (Compare Mark 6:4 and 1 Tim. 4:12.) But he missed life's greatest opportunity by losing his own boys. Sad to say, many a father has followed him, yes, even we are sorely tempted to make our business (and it may be the "business" of the Lord) the thing of primary concern, and let our children fit in where they may, or not at all.

Let us look on the brighter side by closing our study and recall the inspiring contributions that has been made to our material life, to our spiritual life and our social advancement by those who have come out of the most humble of homes, with the most meager worldly advantages, but with the rugged characters—physically, morally, and spiritually stalwart—which have been nurtured in a true Christian home. It pays, not only for the present and for the family, but also for the nation, to have Christian fathers.

Irrigated Potatoes Return Big Yields

Irrigating potatoes just at the time they most needed water, John Fister of Fayette county produced 500 bushels to the acre from a 4½-acre field. He pumped water from a pond near the patch, running it down the rows with a minimum of labor and expense.

This is thought to be one of the largest yields on record in Kentucky.
