Suppressed Anger Is Cause of Malignant High Blood Pressure

By JANE STAFFORD
SAN FRANCISCO.—If you get mad at the boss and tell him, you will probably have a high blood pressure. If you get mad at him for years without boiling over at him, you are probably developing your arteries and building up a dangerously high blood pressure.

Recently suppressed for years the malignant high blood pressure is the fundamental cause of the most general cause of death in the United States. The doctor who has cured the most cases of high blood pressure has found that the cause of the disease is suppressed anger and the doctor who has cured the most cases of high blood pressure has found that the cause of the disease is suppressed anger.
