THE BLACKSMITH SHOP

As the horse is becoming less and less important, the blacksmith shop, so intimately connected with horses, is becoming rare. There was a time when the shop shared with the general store the honor of being a loafers' joint. Ostensibly the people who gathered at the blacksmith shop had come on business, but one was in no hurry to get his work done and leave the fascinating conversation that was always going on.

The blacksmith shop had its own peculiar odor. The coal used in the forge was a semi-powered, vile-smelling stuff that made a heavy smoke. Soon the whole building was saturated with this odor and the smell of horses' hoofs. This odor was distinctive for the shop as was the odor of the smoke-house or the livery stable. No one seemed to mind it and probably was not aware of it.

The blacksmith was a man-of-all-work. His stock in trade was, of course, shoeing horses and welding iron; hence his name. There was still, a generation ago, something of the mediaeval wonder at the blacksmith's art; not everyone could weld iron or do the many other skillful things that the blacksmith found a part of the day's work. Most blacksmiths' flocks and will encourage farmers and could repair or even make any of the furniture in the average home. Making V harrows was just an ordinary part of the art of working in iron. Our Fidelity smith also ran a grist mill on certain days so that his shop could turn out nearly everything not grown on the farm or bought at the general store.

The small boy who went along with an older brother or his father to the shop was sometimes allowed the privilege of working the bellows. How big he felt as the horseshoe or bit of iron became red and then nearly white with heat, while the flames danced among the cinders! Then the sport continued with the black-smith's hammering on the hot metal, while the sparks flew in all directions, sometimes falling on bare feet. How the iron sizzled when it was dropped into a tub of water to temper it!

All blacksmiths could "tickle the anvil," that is, add a lot of grace notes by striking the anvil between beats on the iron being hammered. Nothing sounded any more like music of the numerous notes associated with old-fashioned ways of working. If one had not developed this form of skill, he was still regarded as an amateur.

Our blacksmith was a sort of philosopher. I suppose that his daily association with horses and mules gave him a goodly portion of horse sense that we all admire, whether it is borne by man or beast. He had the rare gift of laughter. Many a man would have cursed man and the earth for what he had drawn as his lot in life, but he laughed his way little giggle and went ahead. When political or religious prejudice got others in a stew, the blacksmith laughed again, often clearing the atmosphere for the rest of us. On Sunday morning at the country church, when some fine point of theology was about to disrupt the community, again he laughed, making some of the brethren feel ashamed that such outbursts of fervor (another name for temper). Who knows but that the philosophy of the toiler at the forge was just what we all needed? For some reason I remember that simple smith and have forgotten many another person who owned more and had more notice.

Lesson for February 6

CHALLENGING THE SOCIAL ORDER

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:13-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—I came not to call the righteous, but sinners—Mark 2:17.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Has Dinner With Matthew.
JUNIOR TOPIC—When Jesus Passed By.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Helpful by Being Friendly.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Crusading for a Christian Society.

"Crusading for a Christian Society," is one of the topics assigned for consideration today. Everyone who is right thinking would be glad if the social order of which we are all a part might be made Christian, for it is far from it now. But foredoomed to failure are the attempts to Christianize society by some great program of "social regeneration." God's way is to save the individual who makes up the social order. When a man is right with God he will be right with his fellow man.

The Scripture lesson for today is full of outstanding spiritual principles of the greatest practical import to both Christians and the unconverted. It should be studied by the guidance of the Holy Spirit and taught in his power.

I. One Sinner Becomes a Servant (vv. 13, 14).

Capernaum was so situated that it provided an excellent location for the collection of the Roman taxes which the Jews so hated. These at the "receipt of custom" sat a Jew named Levi, who was no doubt despised by his neighbors because he had grown rich in the distasteful business. To him came the gracious Lord with the words, "Follow me." How different would be the history of the cause of Christ on earth if every other man who thus was called had done likewise. To follow the Master means sacrifice and breaking with the old life, but it also means peace and glory.

II. Many Sinners Meet the Lord (vv. 15).

Levi, who now becomes Matthew, showed his love for the Lord by desiring that his friends might also meet him. So he prepared a dinner for them in his own house, to which he also invited Jesus.

It is always dangerous for a Christian to maintain social contact with his former companions in sin, if he does so for his own enjoyment or advantage. But to be their friends that one may win them to Christ, that is most desirable.

III. Some Righteous Folk Miss the Lord (vv. 16, 17).

Sin is an unspeakably horrible thing that separates men from God, but it is not an insuperable barrier, for the moment a man confesses his sin and calls on the Saviour he is saved. But self-righteousness—that is the impassable barrier. God can do nothing for the man who rests his hope of salvation on his own good character, high morality, and respectable position in society.

IV. Fasting and Feasting—When and Why (vv. 18-20).

God established one fast day for Israel. They established many, especially the Pharisees. Religion that loses its spiritual life and power clings with tenacity to outward observances and symbols.

Should we fast? Yes, to the true follower of Jesus there come times when the urgency of soul concerning the problems of one's own life, or the lives of others, the needs of the world, shuts the door of interest to anything as ordinary as food for the body.

Feasting and rejoicing—are these spiritual and uplifting? Christianity is a joyful faith. It is not to be thought of as damp, dark cloisters; it thrives in the sunshine, in the happy laughter of a child, in the cheerful shout of the saint. The Church is the bride of Christ. If the friends of the bridegroom were to rejoice (v. 19), should not the Bride shout for joy?

V. New Things versus Old Things (vv. 21, 22).

The Pharisees wanted the gospel of Jesus to conform to the narrow channels of their interpretation of the law. Was not the law good? Yes. Jesus said he came not to destroy it, but to fulfill it (Matt. 5:17). He bore the curse of the law that we might be free (Gal. 3:13, 14). But he also brought in the new covenant of assurance and grace.

The mixing of grace and law, or the effort to do so, has continued even to our day. Let us be clear on that point—we are saved by grace, not by the works of the law (Eph. 2:8, 9). We work because we are saved, not in order to be saved.

Prayer

If the eye is fixed on God, thought may roam where it will without irreverence, for every thought is then converted into a prayer.

Need Exercising

The only way to restore a weakened will is by exercising itself in details of duty.

Constant Joy

"Rejoice evermore," says the apostle; let your joy be constant and durable.

HEADQUARTERS

Rev. H. W. Landreth preached here Sunday morning but owing to the inclement weather there were no services Sunday evening he was the dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Giffin.

Miss Ruth McDonald returned Saturday from St. Joseph's hospital in Lexington where she underwent a tonsil operation Friday.

Eugene Gaunce spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Earlywine recently.

C. M. Poisal is improving from a recent illness.

Mrs. D. E. Wilson has been confined to her room with flu.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Childers have returned home from Knox county where they were called by the illness and death of his mother, Mrs. Childers' brother, William Smith, accompanied them.

PUBLIC AUCTION OF

70 Acre Farm, Livestock, Feed, Implements And Furniture

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1938

At 10 O'Clock A. M.

Sale to be held on the premises located 2 miles north-east of Carlisle on the Scrub Grass pike. Bad health forces Mr. Morris to quit farming and move to town.

Farm, containing 70 acres of land, is one of the finest and most productive farms in Nichols county. The land is all in grass with the exception of ten acres that being sown to grass. This farm has a fine productive orchard which annually supplies an abundance of fruit. Everlasting water, good fencing and good location, all help to make this farm very desirable as a dairy or tobacco farm.

The 5-room house is in excellent repair. Other outbuildings, a tenant house, tobacco barn, and stock barn makes it attractively improved. This farm is only 2 miles from Carlisle and has not been on the market for more than 40 years, is being sold now only because ill health is forcing Mr. Morris to move into town.

At the same time and place we will sell the following described personal property:

1 team work mules, good workers
1 cow, fresh by day of sale
18 head of sheep, now lambing
1 wagon, 1 sled, 1 new harrow
1 mower 1 hay rake
Several sets work harness
All kinds of plows and tools
1 cane mill with vat
300 bushel picked corn
125 shocks fodder
3 stacks hay
3 dozen hens
1 excellent range stove
Some household furniture
Terms made known on date of sale.

BUY AT HOME!

EVERYBODY has a certain amount of civic pride—that sort of pride which helps make a village a town, and a town a metropolitan city.

The growth of any community is dependent upon the support given by its citizens. If you fail in your co-operation the town either stands still or retrogrades.

If you uphold the town by sustaining it wholeheartedly you help yourself and the community. The theme of this advertisement is: "Help your city; buy at home."

Divide your dollars among your merchants and others who have the interests of the populace at heart. Help them and they will help you to greater values — for increased volume means decreased costs.

The town needs your support and you need the support of the town. Let's get together and share our prosperity.
