FROM OUR READERS

IS IT FAIR.

Anyone at all familiar with Nicholas county knows that there is an overwhelming dry sentiment concerning the liquor question.

The local option election held last year proved this conclusively. Yet, because of a technicality, Nicholas county Republicans will have a full ticket on the election. Then, to add insult to injury, there was an election, not county wide, for school trustees. The great majority of the people voted against the entire election. Yet because these same people voted power left to them the time when over two thousand dry votes were cast, with a majority of over four hundred, say they favored a dry county, we have to have another election. Then, to add, the Court of Appeals sends us word we must pay cost in the above thirty days of $550.50. That is not all. We have an election that one of the leading liquor men of the town admitted we won as fairly as an election can be won or lost. He said, "We know we have no use for the county is overwhelmingly dry, but we want to sell sixty days longer at least." Even the wets saw that. But the Cliffeens came in and urged the appeal, promised to pay all expenses if they lost so the fight could be made. Anderson and the county had no chance to lose. But Lute Cline and Sam Wilson will have the moral and spiritual welfare of the county at heart have to pay the bill for the injunction and then pay the bill for the liquor election. Is that fair? Is it fair to the taxpayers of our state, Nicholas county, to make us pay? Is there sense enough to know the letter of the law? Is there sense enough to know the intent and interpretation of law? Does any one of sound mind think they can stop us they are among? Shall we get an honest lawyer to guide us safely through our next campaign? If we have to go outside the State of Kentucky to get him. I trust that there is a little justice left in this old State. Friends of the dry cause, send your money to Joe Sweazy. We will pay the bill and what is more we will fight for the last ditch. If these judges can control twelve people voting in a county election, I say with no political election I certainly would have very little faith in their hands. I am sure it would take two thirds of them to send me to the electric chair for what I have done. I feel that I am at least entitled to more than I can say on this election. With high school boys and girls drinking in ever increasing numbers and with state officials condoning the thing in this way, God pity the men and women of today.

I ask you again, is it fair? Is it fair?

BERNIE A. SHIVELY SUCCEEDS WYNNE AT UNIVERSITY OF KY.

Head Football Coach Resigns Under New Athletic Program For University

KIRWAN NAMED COACH

Resignation of Chet A. Wynne as athletic director and head football coach of the University of Kentucky was announced Tuesday and simultaneously the Athletic Council voted to oust itself from control of the institution's athletic program.

Although Coach Wynne's contract which the University had two more years to run, his resignation came as no surprise. Several days before a group of alumni had met and demanded the discharge of Wynne and Shively from posts in the athletic council.

The athletic committee will meet Friday and it is expected that it will accept the resignation of Wynne. The athletic program at the University has been moved toward a climax during the week after the close of the 1937 football season when the University varsity coaches, Tom Gorman and Porter Grant, resigned.

The University of Kentucky's athletic council, in its final act before disbanding under the new scheme, late Monday recommended Bernie Shively to be athletic director of the University, and his approval by the executive committee of the board of trustees. Thursday is considered a mere formality.

Mr. Shively immediately announced that Ab Kirwan, assistant coach, would be the new football coach.

Mr. Shively, former University of Illinois football star, was assistant coach at Illinois before the Kentucky football team for several years. He resigned last year and was appointed to the position of head of the physical education department at the University.

Kirwan graduated from the University of Kentucky in 1932 and remained there the following year as assistant coach. He then accepted a position as assistant coach at Louisville Male high school and in 1932 was named head coach of the school.

Local CCC Forester Offers Helpful Suggestions

Farmers who realize the desirability of building up herds for beef production or high butter fat yields often overlook the same principle in building up their woodlands, according to Charles B. Orcutt, forester of CCC Camp SCS-18, Carlisle, Kentucky.

In selecting an animal for home use the farmers usually sit down and take the best specimen, but save the best for breeding or sale, he said. Yet in woodland operations, the same men often cut the finest trees for fuel or posts and leave standing the crooked, weak and inferior trees. Mr. Orcutt declared that by following proper woodland management the farmer can build up the quantity of income and receive a reliable annual crop.

Take out the injured and dead first was his suggestion. Then remove the inferior and less desirable species that are using the crop trees and compete with them for growth. In this way, Mr. Orcutt explained, valuable trees have to other timber products. may be harvested, and the best trees left to grow a more valuable crop.

Winter is the time to start a woodland management program, he said, since cold weather at this time frequently leaves the farmer with time on his hand that may be put to work at a nice profit.

The CCC Camp, which is operated by the Soil Conservation Service, is interested in woodland management because of the benefit to topsoil on the land and prevent it from being washed away, he said. The Service is also interested in woodland management practices on the farms of Wood & Grigsby, W. M. Insko, and C. C. Rankin, in Nicholas county.

Chandler And Rhea Confer At Nashville

Gov. A. B. Chandler of Kentucky met Tom Rhea, his 1935 opponent, in a conference at Nashville, Tenn., Monday, that was regarded as significant in view of recurring reports that Chandler would seek Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley's seat.

Neither would comment on the conference, but members of Governor Chandler's party intimated it had important implications.

Rhea, a former chairman of the Kentucky Highway Commission, and a leader in his faction of the party, was for Barkley six years ago, members of the Chandler party said.

Farm Moratorium Act Extended For Two Years

Congress approved Tuesday a two-year extension of life for the Frazier-Lemke Moratorium Act designed to help farmers avoid mortgage foreclosure.

Senate acceptance of House amendments sent to the White House a bill to make the act effective until March 4, 1940. The expiration date of the original act was next March 4.

Under the Frazier-Lemke Act, enacted in 1933, farmers whose payments on mortgaged lands are in arrears may prevent foreclosure for three years by meeting certain conditions, among them payment of "rent" to creditors.

The old log cabin built by Daniel Boone on Brushy Fork in Nicholas county as it looks today. This cabin is on the McKeehan farm, which was purchased last year from Mrs. Zelia Secrest South, and was owned by Mrs. South's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Secrest, for several years. The cabin may be moved to Kentucky meantime, and the gap now filled might have remained empty forever except for the facts about the cabin learned by Mrs. Charles F. Norton, librarian at Transylvania College.

Authenticating the cabin and Boone's residence in Kentucky in 1795-6-7, Mrs. Norton cites the following extract from a Draper Mss. in quoting Boone's own words:

"In the spring or summer of 1795, Colonel Hancock and myself, his son, Nathan, descended the Ohio, landed at Limestone and thence proceeded to Bourbon county, and settled on a tract of unimproved land belonging to Daniel M. Boone on the waters of Brushy Fork of Hinkston, in what is now Nicholas county, and about 12 miles from the Lower Blue Licks on the upper road leading to Lexington. Bought provisions for the first year—a few deer, and occasionally killed one, both by Colonel and Nathan Boone—lived mostly on mutton. Colonel Boone and his son Nathan cleared some 10 acres and raised two crops there—1796 and 1797. First fall and winter preparing for crop."

Courtesy Lexington Leader

The cabin is located on the exact tract of land described in Boone Nicholas's statement, and the tract was then owned by Daniel M. Boone, another son of the pioneer, other records show.

Further evidence, if needed, of the fact that Boone lived there at the time stated is furnished in the following letter which he addressed to Governor Isaac Shelby on February 11, 1796:

Log Cabin Built by Daniel Boone in Nicholas County In 1795 is Still Standing: May Become a State Shrine

By C. Frank Dunn in Sunday Lexington Herald-Leader

The recent discovery and authentication of a log cabin in Nicholas county, built by Daniel Boone 143 years ago, supply a gap in the pioneer's biography. The pioneer's life that historians have overlooked heretofore. At the same time an opportunity is offered Kentuckians before it is too late, to restore and preserve what possibly is the oldest log house still standing positively by the only cabin of Boone's own construction remaining in this state.

The records of the Boone Family Association, Inc., show only that Daniel Boone's pioneer left Kentucky in 1788 to locate in Kansawwa country and Missouri and Virginia, and from there departed for Missouri in 1799. There was no record of his having returned to Kentucky meantime, and the gap now filled might have remained empty forever except for the facts about the cabin learned by Mrs. Charles F. Norton, librarian at Transylvania College.

Boone on the waters of Brushy Fork of Hinkston, in what is now Nicholas county, and about 12 miles from the Lower Blue Licks on the upper road leading to Lexington. Bought provisions for the first year—a few deer, and occasionally killed one, both by Colonel and Nathan Boone—lived mostly on mutton. Colonel Boone and his son Nathan cleared some 10 acres and raised two crops there—1796 and 1797. First fall and winter preparing for crop."

The cabin is located on the exact tract of land described in Boone Nicholas's statement, and the tract was then owned by Daniel M. Boone, another son of the pioneer, other records show.

Further evidence, if needed, of the fact that Boone lived there at the time stated is furnished in the following letter which he addressed to Governor Isaac Shelby on February 11, 1796:

"Sir—After my best Respts to you Excellency and family I wish to inform you that I have sum in mention of undertaking this New

Legislature In Last Full Week

Lively Contest Expected Over Purgation Bill And Liquor Control Bill

Both branches of the Kentucky General Assembly faced major fights Monday on the eve of the last full week of the regular 1938 legislative session.

The fateful bar administration's registration and purgation bill, approved by the House of Representatives, rested with the Senate, which did not reconvene until Wednesday afternoon.

Despite apparently growing opposition to the bill in the senate branch, Governor Chandler insisted that the administration bill be passed the same ease with which it passed through the House last week.

Among those reported unfavorable inclined toward the bill was Senator Ralph Gilbert of Shelbyville, administration floor leader. Senator Gilbert himself declined to affirm or deny the reports and turned them aside with the assertion he had not even studied the bill.

Proponents of the measure contend that its passage would be considerably dimmed should Senator Gilbert oppose it, as the senator enjoys a position of unusual influence in the Senate.

The bill would create a state registration and purgation board which would appoint county registration and purgation boards with power to remove names from the registration books in any county before the August, 1938, primary election in which Governor Chandler is expected to oppose Alben W. Barkley for the Democratic senatorial nomination. The state board would be appointed by the governor. The proposed new law would repeal the model registration law under which Louisville has been operating.

The registration bill has not been given first reading in the House and cannot be legally voted on there before Friday. While the liquor control measure, likewise could not come up for a Senate vote until Friday.
