His Of Truth

Men who stand before the bars in the saloons will stand behind the bars in prison. One drink will destroy your self respect. Let the father remember when he takes a drink of whisky he applies the knife to own heart. The Christ tide floods the human soul the moment the old self is thrown down. He who would help others must first mastly his own infirmities. A politician may not be a politician but he has a strong hand. Tools fight in vain for the past.

Mrs. Jane Cordsford says: We had a fracius last Sunday nite about meetin. Hank Duckbill and Tater Smith wanted to take Jay Jay Ann Dooly home. They had a fite about it and Hank thinkins took Jully Ann home. Hanks new koat was split to the kolar and Tater's nose looked like sumthing awful had happened to it. When Sammuthy was a gal I took her home from meetin and no uther boy ever butted in. If he had it would have been bad for his health.

Dispelling The Fog

By Charles Michelson, Director of Publicity, Democratic National Committee

Business generally, as distinguished from "Big Business," has this opportunity last week to present its views as to what government could do to improve economic conditions and to counteract the present recession. The big fellows in industry and finance had had their shot at it, the important financial people were scheduled, and it seemed only fitting that the average fellow in commercial life was also entitled to a hearing.

There was a natural difficulty in selecting a group out of the millions of dealers and manufacturers in 48 states, so the executive committee of arranged a list from those who had indicated sufficient interest in the situation to write to the President or to the Department of Commerce. There were thousands of such letters. Obviously, it was not practical to have all the writers down to Washington. So there came up the problem of selection.

What the administration was looking for was a representative group that would be typical and sound out in advance those chosen, the gathering would have been partly a waste of time, for unless that it was hand-picked, which would have destroyed its democratic complexion. So the committee selected more or less at random, except that the contents of the letters, where they indicated the character of the writer, was at least a partial guide. As most of these letters agreed with some such phrase as "I am a manufacturer of notions, employing thirty men," or "I am the owner of a store which supplies fish and such a community as mine," I am the president of a small manufacturing business, etc. there was a little information as to the status of the letter writers. No attempt was made to select a body of the letter endorsed or assailed the government's policies. Obviously, among a thousand invitations picked by chance or fashion, there were bound to be a few cranks, a few violent radicals, and perhaps a greater number of hide-bound reactionaries. All sorts and conditions of people wrote to the President of the United States. Whether because of grievance, real or fancied, or because of that typical American instinct that makes a man feel better after he has written to see further through a millstone than anybody else, and declare themselves accordingly.

However, the net result of the invitations to Washington was pretty good. The resolutions presented to the President were all sensible, in presenting a point of view, and it is not impossible that the ideas contained at least the germ of an idea that will help business. At all events, there are of a character that commands attention and merits consideration.

Unfortunately, the newspapers in their reports of the gathering emphasized the grotesque and the incongruous incidents, and so the country possibly got a very twisted idea of the deliberations of this business group. It cannot really complain because the members of my craft followed this precedent. A newspaper reporter invariably writes with headlines in view, and in the report of a movement in the suppression of a disturber finds in the straight recording of ordinary proceedings. This circumstance may be regretable, but it is quite understandable. We are familiar with the same sort of thing when we report sessions of Congress. We all remember that the diatribes of Huey Long, and before that the fulminations of Tom Heflin, got all sorts of prominence in the newspaper reports, even when the importance of the subject which they were supposed to be speaking was barely referred to and in many cases got no mention at all.

It all depends, in estimating these things, on the point of view as to the function of the daily newspaper. Is it the paper's chief business to entertain its readers or to instruct them? Judging from my own experience, I am very think that the circulation depart ment of any important publication would have no trouble in answering that question.

At all events, the idea of the gathering was to get an expression from a vast group of our population especially engaged in marketing and other elements of business which had suffered that it had as much right to be heard as the great capitalists and corporation heads.

Unquestionably, pretty much every group looked at the problem of improving business from its own point of view, and that is quite natural. Few in the majority of cases, has a basis of probability in accomplishing the result. There is no doubt, for example, that universal high wages would, by refreshing and enhancing the public purchasing power, give a great stimulus to business. On the other hand, the people who are employed and sell things put their problem first. They want the market established so as to be assured of high profits, as a precedent to high wages. The bankers want to feel certain that the enterprises they are called upon to finance will be successful before they let out any money. All of these things are desirable, of course, but it is something new in our economic history for people to demand a governmental guarantee on their investments.

Proposals are rather proud of the chances they have taken to serve. It is doubtful if any American fortune has had its foundation on such a principle. Robert Fulton took a chance on the first steamboat; the Vanderbilts took a chance on railroads; Henry Ford had no guarantees on mass-production of cheap cars when he developed Model T. Radios, telegraphs, telephones, air navigation were all born out of the minds of men who had faith in their ideals and in themselves. The successors to these "rugged individualists" seem to have little of the quality on which were builded the great American enterprises. Perhaps in this circumstance lies the answer to "what caused the business recession."

Sure-things are as scarce in business as at the race tracks.

Locally

Walter George has sold his farm of 70 acres near Miranda to John F. Sugg at a private price.

After enjoying spring like weather for several days, Old Man Winter again paid a visit to this section last week.

Next Wednesday, March 2, is Ash Wednesday, which marks the beginning of the Lenten season. Easter this year falls on April 17.

John McGinley, of the county, purchased this week the residence of Mrs. John Shannon, on Main street, for $4,000. The property was sold at a private price.

Employees of the State Highway Department were here last week erecting sign markers on State Highways 32 and 36, which pass through Carlisle.

Advertising has paid dividends for C. R. King. Since the first of the year Mr. King has sold and delivered thirteen Speed Queen washing machines.

The grocery stock of the Sexton store has been disposed of and new fixtures and equipment are being installed to convert the store into a variety store.

Several local members of the American Legion and Auxiliary will attend a district conference to be held at Olive Hill Sunday. A luncheon will be held before the business session.

Real estate dealing has been more active during the past month than at any time in several years in Nicholas county. A large number of farms and city property have changed hands.

Mrs. Clara M. Shanklin qualified in county court last week as executrix of the estate of her husband the late W. P. Shanklin, no bond being required under the terms of the will of Mr. Shanklin.

Charles Osborne, of Mt. Olivet, purchased at public auction last Friday the farm of the late Jesse Stony Creek, belonging to Henry Yarnall, for $33 per acre. The sale was conducted by the Scott-Kendall Sales Co.

The county board of tax supervisors is still in session this week going over the assessment of the county. The board will probably complete its work this week and adjourn until a later date to hear complaints of taxpayers whose assessments have been increased.

The quarantine at the local CCC camp has been lifted by the Nicholas County Health Department. Only one case of the disease was reported at the camp and this patient was immediately taken to a Lexington hospital. The camp was quarantined as a precautionary measure.

"Junior's Moustache," a one act play given by the Carlisle high school will be presented before the P. T. A. of Moorefield graded school on Friday evening, February 25, at 1:30 p. m., in the school auditorium. No admission will be charged and the public is invited to attend.

An article in last week's issue stated that Robert G. Huey, who has been elected superintendent of the city schools at Paintsville, was superintendent of the Flemingsburg city schools since 1927. Prof. Frank D. Scott, native of this county, has been superintendent of the Flemingsburg schools for the past three years. Prof. Huey, who was formerly superintendent at Flemingsburg, has been principal at Ewing for three years.

FEBRUARY LOVE SONG

(Jay G. Sigmund)

That Beauty once had nestled here
Your soul can scarcely dream,
The scarred hills huddle, cold and sere
Along this shackled stream.

That Love and Life a tryst had known
Among these sodden leaves
Before the clean-winged thrush had flown
No soul today believes.

This is the place, my love, the same
Where we were so entranced;
The sumach here unfurled its flame—
The lovely maple danced.

This is the river, love, where we
Come down to watch the stars,
When pearly mists were trailing free
Above these pebbled bars.

Joy may have gone a little way
But we can lure her back;
Give us the spring and warm lipped May
When fields are furrowed black.

Give slopes a chance to green once more,
Then, love, you will not weep;
These are the same hills as before
Only asleep . . . asleep.

Mr. W. W. Scott, 81, died at his home in Lexington Monday following an illness of several days. He was a son of the late George and Elizabeth Baxter Scott, and was born and reared at Greendale, Ind. He had been a resident of Lexington for 14 years and was a member of the Christian church.

Mr. Scott is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alice Wrigsby Scott; one daughter, Miss Mary Wallace Scott, Lexington; one sister, Mrs. Elnira Alexander, Carlisle, and a number of nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were held in Kerr Brothers Funeral Home Wednesday morning with Rev. Lorin and Boynton officiating, and burial followed in the North Middletown cemetery.

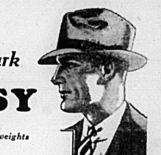
HAMM

Mr. John Parker Hamm, 49, died at his home in the county early Sunday morning following a long illness. Mr. Hamm was a son of Nicholas county and a brother of the late Henry Hamm and Mrs. Sallie Hamm, of the Taylor's Creek section. He was a veteran of the World War and a member of the Spears Baptist church.

Besides his mother he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Leona Russell Hamm, and two sisters, Mrs. Robert Lemons and Miss Lizzie Hamm, of this county.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Carlisle Christian church, conducted by Rev. A. B. Watson, of West Union, Ohio, and Rev. James Cummins, of Harrodsburg. Burial followed in the family lot in the Carlisle cemetery.

The Stylepark GIPSY



smartest of lightweights

SO LIGHT—you scarcely know it's on your head—a scant two ounces of cool and comfortable felt for warm weather wear.

SO SOFT—you can crease it, dent it, punch it easily into the shape that suits your mood of the moment.

SO STURDY—you simply can't destroy its smart style. It's oven-baked to give it extra long life.

SO SMART—you can wear it with casual distinction anywhere. A beautiful example of hand-made distinction.
