ENTRIES FLOOD IN FOR HORSE SHOW AT LEXINGTON JULY 20

Entries In All Divisions Close On Thursday, July 7, Says Manager

$10,000 IN PRIZES GIVEN

With the time for the opening of the Lexington Junior League horse show at Ruddell Mill Park, Lexington, July 20 less than three weeks off entries are beginning to reach horse show manager W. J. Harris and he predicts one of the most successful shows in the history of the horse show in Kentucky. He calls attention to the fact that entries in all divisions of the show close next Thursday, July 7th, and cautions that all prospective Carlisle exhibitors get in touch with him immediately in regard to horses they will show.

At no time in the history of horse shows in Lexington have exhibitors had an opportunity to show for so much money and for such beautiful trophies. More than $10,000 in prize money and a total of forty trophies will be awarded the successful exhibitors during the four-day show. There are classes for all types of horses besides saddle classes for mares and geldings there is a stake championship stake for the horse getting most amount of money offered and any show horse, Tennessee walking men who have this type horse should get them entered at once. Those who are interested in the Plantation horse classes last year will be pleased to learn that there will be more interesting this year. Those who entered them were disappointed because they did not get to show their horses. Entries will close on Thursday, July 7th, before July 7th will not be disappointed.

The breeding classes for saddle horses also appeal to the Saddle Horse breeders and lovers. Besides their open and qualifying classes there are championship stakes for weanlings and two year old colts and a championship stake for two-year-old fine harness horses. A breeder with a good colt or weanling can pay his way at the show and have a tidy sum left for his keep, account.

The larger show stables of the nation will join the local smaller stables to give Kentucky people the finest saddle horse exhibition ever staged in Kentucky from ground to ground in Lexington. This is the first time everyone in the state where all exhibitors want their entries.

PSYCHOLOGISTS TRY TO ADJUST SELVES IN MAMMOTH CAVE

Mammoth Cave, Ky., June 26.—The scientific attempt to break down man's normal habit of living on a 24-hour cycle, being carried on by two Chicago University scientists living in the deep recesses of one of the caves here, entered its fourth week today. With the experiment already half-way mark, only one of the two men has become completely adapted to the new 28-hour cycle, of six days a week.

Bruno Richardson, graduate student in physiology, who entered the cave June 4 with Dr. Nathaniel Kleitman, director of the experiment, is now definitely on a 28-hour routine. On the other hand, Dr. Kleitman has shown no change whatever in his natural inclination to sleep at normal bedtime hours and maintains a normal wakefulness in daytime hours, though the schedule may call for sleep.

During the past week the two men have conducted several devices from their normal routine of sleeping and eating, reading, writing, and cave sightseeing. The first departure came on Tuesday when they engaged in one of several rubbers of bridge. Wednesday they established the first direct contact with the outside world, when they telephoned Chicago and reported on emergency telephone line to find out the score of the Louis-Schmeling fight. This morning they rose on schedule—6 a. m.—and engaged in a special religious radio broadcast in a rotunda of the cave known as the "Methodist Church." The service, sent out over WHAS, Louisville, was conducted by the Volunteers of America, under the direction of Major Joseph Mack. Dr. Kleitman, with a corps of musicians assisting.

The purpose of their experiment is to determine how easy it is for man to shift his habit of living. Man's efficiency curve is clearly indexed by his temperature and by fatigue. Dr. Kleitman points out adding that this temperature varies more than two degrees. The variation follows the exact 24-hour cycle. In addition has lived since time was first measured astrologically. It usually reaches its lowest between 2 to 3 p. m. and lowest about 3 a. m. It is felt that if adaptation to a different cycle, perhaps a six-day or eight-day week is feasible, it may be of great advantage in arduous mental tasks to adopt a new schedule so as to be doing the work when his efficiency is greatest. Subsidiary to this interesting future variations have already switched to the 28-hour schedule. Their watches were neither attached to the beds of the two men remaining on the 24-hour cycle, for which is particularly important to them when they sleep and eat or abnormal hours. By this time Richardson has found it comfortable to sleep for as five consecutive hours of quiet rest. Kleitman has found as five consecutive hours of quiet rest. Sleep during the "wakeful" hours, while Kleitman is unable to sleep for more than a few minutes. He remains wakeful until normal bedtime arrives and then is able to sleep at once. He can fall to sleep until 19 hours later, when he is again wakeful for hours to ward off drowsiness for the two men place of natural existence during their 19 wakeful hours is the only departure from normalcy. They undertook the experiment in Mammoth Cave to escape the three major variable factors—light, temperature and moisture—that are part of similar experimenting in Chicago. Here they follow rigidly a 28-hour sleeping schedule as follows: Sunday from 12:01 a. m. to 6 a. m. Monday, 4 a. m. to 10 a. m. Tuesday, 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. Wednesday noon to 9 p. m. Thursday, 1 p. m. to 1 a. m. (Friday, 8 p. m. to 5 a. m. (Saturday).

Their food follows the same variety as the menu from Mammoth Cave hotel, from which point hot dishes are sent down usually on Sunday only. On Tuesday, because they sleep until 5 p. m., their three meals for the ensuing 19 hours are given down at one time. On that day breakfast is at 5 p. m., luncheon about six hours later, and dinner at 6 a. m. Fruit and milk are important factors of their diet, while both boast continued good appetites, neither admitting of having gained weight.

When asked which of the seven days they are dining in their six-day schedule, they replied that because they did not wish to count any one day, they are giving numbers to the six days of their abnormal week.

Social—Society

FRIENDSHIP

(Ralph Waldo Emerson)

A ruddy drop of manly blood
The surging sea outweighs
The world uncertain comes and goes
The lover rooted stays.
I fancy he was fled
And, after many a year,
Glowed unashamed kindliness
Like a returning sphere.
My carefree heart was free enough,
Of friend, my bosom said,
Through thee alone the sky is arched,
To thee the rose is red,
All things through thee take nobler form
And look beyond the earth,
The mill-round of our face appears
A sunpath in a worth,
Me too thy nobleness has taught
To master my despair,
The fountains of my hidden life
Are through thy friendship fair.
