SAINT NURSERY BARLOW

In the Middle Ages nearly every activity had its special saint. There was a saint of horticulture, St. Julian, and there were saints for every kind of business, who were called upon to give the customer guidance for goods and services. In the Middle Ages, the saint of the nursery was St. Julian. He was a young man who was killed by a bear while he was in the forest. He was a young man who was killed by a bear while he was in the forest. He was a young man who was killed by a bear while he was in the forest.

Much Forest Land Now in Farm Ownership

Syracuse, N. Y.—More and more, the remaining and new-growing timber lands in the United States are being sold to farmers. It was pointed out at the National Agricultural Conference here by Frank A. B. Ringer of the United States Forest Service that there has been a steady increase in the number of acres of forest land now in the hands of farmers.

Dry Years Certain to Return After Heavy Rain Period

Washington—Years of drought may be ending now, but long-range forecasts will tell us whether the weather will be as good as it seems. The National Agricultural Experiment Station here has issued a report that the weather will be as good as it seems.

Farmers Must Adapt To Soil Conservation Program

With frontiers closed to further agricultural expansion, American farmers must adopt a pattern of conservation. This is the message of the National Agricultural Experiment Station here.

Set Out Principles Of New Farm Program

Discussing the new farm act, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace here today set out the principles of the new farm program. He said that the program was designed to provide farmers with a more stable income.

Early Man's Relics Found In Britain By Two Scientists

Paris—Traces of early man's existence have turned up in a new way. Two scientists here have discovered the remains of a man who lived in Britain during the last ice age.

Lights of New York by L.L. STEVENSON

Old Paris occasionally has been the scene of the most dramatic of the world's great events. It was here that the lights of New York were first seen.
