"Ye have need of patience"

MANY persons are ready to admit that they have need of patience. Some are earnestly striving to cultivate it, and occasionally someone may feel that he has measurably succeeded in realizing it. One arrayed in any legitimate pursuit may exercise this quality in the sense of perseverance or endurance in working toward some desired end. But in other respects it enters into one's attitude toward affliction, discipline, or unkind treatment, as a passive endurance as also one as a positive, Christ-like meekness, and unresentful trust in God. It was in the truer sense that the writer of the epistle to the Hebrews, after referring to the "great fight of affliction" which they had endured, said to the Christian readers: "Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward. For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise" (Hebrews 10:32, 35, 36).

The world has witnessed many fine examples of forbearance of one toward another, in view of another's seeming faults, infirmities, or need for comfort or care; examples of courage necessary to face difficult situations with a calm expectation of some good to accompany, and of a blissfulness unknown in all merely carnal states. Indeed, in many circumstances of discipline, there were no equivalent to an undaunted confidence in something higher and better than the troublesome error. And this shows that good is ever present, and that it is in some measure grasped and manifested by right thinking persons.

Much greater, then, is the impetus toward "patient continuance in well doing" (Romans 2:7) when, through Christian Science, good is discerned as divine Principle to be understood and demonstrated; when it is seen that we need patience toward ourselves, as we seek in calm perspective to gain the true spiritual reality, so that after we "have done the will of God" we may "receive the promise."

What is the will of God, and what are the promises to be fulfilled in our thoughts as conformed to His will? Those are questions we need to consider, that we may learn wherein we "have need of patience." Cultivating a calm, steadfast character is praiseworthy; but gaining true patience means more than this. It means persevering in the effort to understand God and man, so that in all our common or unusual experiences we may express the truth which we know to be real, and thus bless others as well as ourselves. Such patience with power, the power of reflected love, which heals disease and conditions.

This view of patience as a quality we need in working out our own salvation from material sense in one sense, helps us to be truly forbearing toward others, for in striving to conform to divine Principle we more clearly see as unreal the conditions which tempt us to impatience, discomfort, weariness, resentment. And in healing our own thoughts we are in that measure bringing the healing truth to discordant conditions and to all involved therein.

The great need is to understand God and man and faithfully apply our understanding, looking to good will, unconquerable hope and love. In so doing we must do this alone helps to overcome our difficulties. Mary Baker Eddy says in Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, "The Divine Being must be reflected by man,—else man is not the image and likeness of God. Patient, tender, true, he (or she) 'abideth forever,' but to understand God, to do the work of eternity, and to demand absolute consecration of thought, energy, and desire."

We must not be impatient with ourselves when we feel that our footsteps in knowing God are halting and our progress slow. We must remember the perfect beauty of the goal. And since we are working out this great problem of being in association with others in all manner of human affairs, we have need of patience as kindliness of heart which furthers our own realization of good and our own release from false belief, while it also extends the healing influence of the divine Love to all concerned and ameliorates the friction of human wills.

In his epistle James speaks of the husbandman who "waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain;" and from this lesson he draws the admonition, "Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh" (James 5:7, 8). The great purpose to know God and man aright, to be and do the false sense of self, calls for the sublime serenity which is ever supreme by the assurance that whatever is unlike God is being conquered. — The Christian Science Monitor.

Stability

THE temptation to feel, with Hamlet, that "the time is out of joint" is common to many of earth's inhabitants today. And unassailability, sometimes with less provocation, sometimes with more, such has often been the opinion in the past. Men normally desire safety, stability, security, and have looked for them in human governments, persons, investments, position, professions, and achievements of all kinds. But have they found these things? No! Not in any material plane or possessions, however lovely wise or good, have permanent safety and security been found. Certainly not in what we call our times have these been experienced. And that makes all the more interesting a statement which is found in Isaiah for more than two thousand years: "Wisdom of knowledge shall be the stability of thy times," he said. Not gold, not armaments, not organizations and unified materiality, but "wisdom and knowledge" will bring stability.

True knowledge, really helpful knowledge, consists in understanding spiritual and eternal facts. If all men everywhere would unanimously reflect the wisdom of divine Mind, the intelligence and integrity, the discerning judgment and complete love which is God, there would be no more confusion and distress, no more hate and fear, no more greed and insecurity. It all men are not consciously of this mind, nor do the majority even yet ready to do so. Therefore, those of us who are in the minority spiritually ready, must do our part particularly well, that we may lead this world to see that it is not primarily our times but the times of God in which we live.

He who dwells on high, who habitually thinks from above the worldly and material, the dishonest and the false, finds that he is in a different atmosphere above the fears and distractions of sweeping material winds. He who understands even partially the omnipotence, the omniscience, the only real power, and that God is knowable and available, has in this understanding the only sure foundation of stability.

The fact of losing good, the belief of fortuitous good, produces a sense of insecurity and instability. The individual who understands that the source of all good is the divine Principle is aware of all true life, happiness, action, and substance, and therefore is free from fear.

How safe and undisturbed was Jesus in the midst of the great disturbances, ignorance, and confusion of his times! Was not this because of the spiritual understanding expressed in his words, "I and my Father are one"? Understanding knowledge of God, love with knowledge of good, gave him a sense of security which was a real and eternal security as an individual idea to live for and to express.

Today, mankind must learn that just as matter but its image is insecurity; that it is hate and fear, selfishness and ignorance which are also for instability, and that love and understanding, goodness, wisdom, and intelligent helpfulness bring security. Learning this, they will begin to appreciate as a present possibility the statement found on page 587 of the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, thus, "Harmony, the reign of spirit; government by divine Principle; spirituality, blue, the atmosphere of God."

Then the nations will see that true riches are mental; that valuable possessions are spiritual; that a country's real need is not exemplified in armaments, but in spiritual instruction. Then they will realize that the only security sought is the assurance of good founded on the rock, Christ Jesus. Then sterling energy is evil—ignorance of God; then the only salvation is the law of God intelligently applied, and that spiritual understanding, the knowledge of God constitutes the only stability of our era or any other time.—The Christian Science Monitor.

The fight from which the indictment resulted occurred at the store of Tom Hunt at Cowan several weeks ago.

Fred Huffstetter, well known farmer of the Jacksontown section, suffered three fractured ribs and bruises last Friday night when his automobile overturned near Judy while he was enroute from Mt. Sterling to his home. Mr. Huffstetter was brought to his home and was later taken to a hospital in Lexington for treatment, and was able to return home Wednesday.

The Nicholas circuit court reconvenes Monday after a week's recess. Willard Bradford and Roy Jenkins, of Mason county, were indicted Tuesday on charges of attempted robbery in connection with the alleged slugging of W. C. Dayton, 18, near Ellisville on May 7. They were placed on trial in circuit court Wednesday morning and the trial was in progress when The Mercury's forms closed.

SPRING SONG

(Louise Driscoll)

This is the incredible
Time of the year.
The apple tree blooms,
The catbird is here.
There's down on the cherry
And snow on the plum,
And black and gold bees
Are beginning to come.

The lilac is budded
And nobody knows
Where her color will go.
That clutched Wintertime goes;
Daffodils, trillium,
Tulips that hold
In every gay cup
A coin of pure gold.

Red sprouting peonies,
Bridal wreath long,
And white-throated sparrows
With their harp song.
White throat and white crown
And speckled breast brown
This is the time
When song sparrows nest.

The wind in my garden
This morning was cold,
The grass was all spangled
With dandelion gold
A catbird was singing
"May is now here!"
This is the most wonderful
Time of the year!"
