We present this week Keen Johnson, popular newspaper man and three popular Lieutenant Governor.

He was born in Lyon county at Eddyville, Chapel January 21, 1896. Father Methodist minister then serving group of county churches. Spent boyhood on farm in Livingston county. Graduated from Vanderbilt University of Kentucky with A. B. degree in journalism. Attended state officers training camp when U. S. entered World War. In service three years, nine months. Left service with rank of captain. Was county newspaper publisher when he left for war. Was editor of newspaper owned by his uncle, Governor Elisha Johnson, Mayfield, Kentucky. Father publisher of Mayfield Messenger. Married Miss Anderson Vinson, Louisville. Part time secretary to Governor Ruby Laffoon and editor Richmond Daily News, 1927-28. Past two years Kentucky Press Association. Active in American Legion. Secretary of the Democratic State Central Executive committee since 1932. Past presiding University of Kentucky alumni association, member board of regents Eastern Teachers College. Influential Governor. It has appeared that office which the lieutenant governorship of public affairs of any official in 25 years. Member Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity Elks and Masons.

By Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson

The principal duty assumed the lieutenant-governor by the Kentucky constitution is that of president of the state senate. In this capacity the lieutenant governor has opportunity to render his greatest service in formulating legislation and assisting in its enactment.

In event of absence of the governor of the commonwealth from the state, it is the duty of the lieutenant governor to serve as acting governor. While serving in that capacity he has full authority as chief executive.

Furthermore, a statement additional duties have been conferred upon the lieutenant governor by virtue of his membership as chairman of the Kentucky Disabled Ex Service Men's Board. For this service he receives no additional compensation. The board was created for the purpose of rendering assistance to Kentucky war ex crans, their widows and orphans, by aiding them in proper claims for benefits and in obtaining such as is provided by federal legislation. The board assists war veterans in obtaining hospital treatment, vocational training, and represents them before the Veterans Bureau in presenting their claims.

The most recent additional duty assigned the lieutenant governor is that of serving as chairman of the Legislative Council. This organization was created by the 1936 general assembly. Education Act. Purpose of the body is to study legislative needs of the commonwealth in the future, gather information which will be helpful to the formulation of legislation, and in suggesting legislation to the general assembly. Council is composed of eight members of the house of representatives, eight members of the senate and eight elective or appointive officials. Besides the lieutenant governor the governor designates the state officials who are to be members.

As chairman of the Legislative Council, the lieutenant governor has additional duties are quite important. Council has the influence to make a report upon the governor's message to the general assembly. Report may be made upon any recommendations that the governor may make. Council is not required to make a report upon the governor's message, but does not usually do so. Council may not make a report upon the governor's message unless it has been approved by a majority of the entire membership of the council.

Duties are important, and they have been expected to change from time to time as social and economic changes that farmers will be likely to be higher in prices. Indications point to higher prices for building materials, machinery, automobiles, fertilizer, feed and seed and other farm commodities. The building industry is likely to be higher in prices. Indications point to higher prices in production expenses have been in effect since August 1, 1939, and are expected to average about the same in 1939. They were markedly upward from 1933 to 1937, and have declined since October, 1937. The prospect for improvement in demand for farm products is not expected to halt this down trend. Any upward changes in wage rates on farm farm jobs also would tend to support wages of farm laborers. No shortage of farm labor is likely.

The marked advance in price for farm machinery that began in 1933 continued into 1938, and brought machinery prices to the highest level since 1929. However, reductions in farm machinery prices for 1939 already have been announced, and some further readjustment downward is probable for 1939.

In contrast, the trend in prices paid by farmers for building materials may be upward. According to the report, wholesale prices of building material declined about seven per cent between 1929 and 1938. In recent months, however, there has been some advance in wholesale prices for lumber which may be followed by advances in retail prices for lumber during the coming year. Building trade wage rates in rural areas probably will change but little during 1939.

It is believed that fertilizer prices during the 1939 fertilizer season "probably will average slightly lower" with the greatest decline likely in organic ammoniates. Fertilizer prices this year have been about the same as in

Production Expenses May Be Lower In 1939

Farm production expenses are expected to be moderately lower than in 1938, according to Agricultural Economics reports.

The production report for 1939 says that farmers will buy less feed and fertilizer, but more machinery, automobiles, fertilizer, feed and seed and other farm commodities. The building industry is likely to be higher in prices.

Indications point to higher prices in production expenses have been in effect since August 1, 1939, and are expected to average about the same in 1939. CARLISLE NET SQUAD WILL OPEN SEASON NEXT TUESDAY NIGHT

Six Battling For First String Posts; Average Heights Of Squad Very Short

GAME BEGINS 7:30 P. M.

Faced with the prospect all season of meeting opponents who will have the height and reach on them, Coach Bob May's Carlisle Musketeers have been practicing hard this week for the opening contest with Owingsville high school next Tuesday. Downs Bath, 6, which will give a fair idea of how the local boys can hope to progress this season.

Only three lettermen—Gunnell Crouch, forwards, and Lyman center, are present this year on the squad. Lyman is the only one who is more than average height. The remainder of the lads who will see action will not be more than the average height May said.

Nearly missed this year on the current edition of Ice Musketeers is Bobby Armstrong, son of Mrs. Armstrong, on whom most of the scoring burden fell last year. Bobby with the prospects this year what they are. May said that he had been hard put to it to find a man who could step into an efficient scoring machine.

So far, six men are battling for positions on the squad. They are Goins, Crouch, Lyman, Burton, Cloyd and Conley, and no one has shown enough class to be favored strongly over any of his other mates.

Backing up these men trying for top position are Stephens, Lawrence, Maxey, Hester, Harpert, Robbins, Hubert, Wade, Stanton, Crabb and James Wade. Some of these, if they show promise, will be given a chance to see action, May said, and all will act as reserves during the early season.

As to what Owingsville has to offer the local talent, May refused to be anything but pessimistic. "It's anything but a breather," he said, "although in our game with them last year we beat them by a top-heavy score. This year, with a team as small and green as mine, anything is liable to happen and the Owingsville game is no exception. If we win from we beat them, it won't be by such a large score."

Although his squad lacks size that May said would be a help on its speed and ability would offset this disadvantage. Goins and Crouch are fast and capable ball handlers, while his expected guards are fast and capable defensive drill has occupied their time of late and when they take the floor next Tuesday night they will be fighting with the idea of making their opponents work for every point they get.

Preceding the varsity game in the school gym will be a preliminary game between the second teams of the schools. This tilt, opening the season's play as well as the night's program, will start at 7:30 p. m.
