TO THE ROBIN

O Robin gay!
On this spring day!
We hail thy joyful song
Amid the trees,
Borne on the breeze,
First of the chirpted throng.

Thy rosy breast,
They say, was prest
Against the gory'd side
Of Christ, when dead
The crown of red
On thee must needs abide.

While winds are chill,
Upon the hill
From contact from retreat
To greet the spring
With fleetest wing
And festive song most sweet.

The sparrows burn
At thy return
With quiet zest and with spite,
Because they know
When wild winds blow
Curtailed will be their might.

Through all the cold
Of winter's hold
They cheerful held the field.
But now their reign
Is o'er in pain
To robin they must yield.
