Paris To Celebrate 150th Anniversary

Notables Of Nation To Gather For Four Day Celebration Of Sesqui-Centennial

The celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Paris, scheduled for September 3, 4, 5 and 6, promises to be a gathering of notables from all over the United States. Both United States Senators and all of Congress are planning to attend, if possible.

The first paper which Paris stands was preempted by John Wood of Maryland, November 15, 1784, and Samuel Lyons of Virginia, in August, 1786. Lawrence Protzman, a native of Germany, got Reed's preemption and built Lot No. 1 on the corner of Main and Hopewell. The Virginia legislature created a separate setting aside 250 acres at the court house for Bourbon county as the site for the town.

This was three years before Kentucky became a state and the great county of Bourbon embraced later Kentucky counties. Hence the Fire town of Hopewell, which was changed to Paris in 1790, was the county seat of the fifth county formed in the mother territory.

Pageants depicting historic incidents in the past will be seen each day, created by a nationally known producing company. Many of the thirty-three counties which were a part of Bourbon county ago will have decorated floats in the parade and perhaps each of the counties will be offered a special day. Each day's Bourbon again gathers her children from the counties which were formed from Bourbon.

VERY long ago all criminals were required to take the palm of the hand. In court of law all witnesses when taking oath were compelled to bare and hold the palm of their hand their right hand, palm out, in order to disclose whether or no they had a criminal record. Although the branding was stopped, the custom remains unchanged to the present day.
