What's the Answer?

WHY IS IT DIFFICULT TO WALK, STRAIGHT WITH YOUR EYES CLOSED?

BECAUSE one of your legs is shorter than the other one and unless the eyes are open, enable the brain to direct your feet through the eyes, the course of one long step and one short step will cause you to walk in circles unless you have trained yourself through daily gait practice to pursue a straight course. If you don't believe me, get a tapeline and measure your two legs from hip to feet and then close your eyes and take a walk—without getting off from where you land!

FROM OVER THE LINE

(By J. W. Rogers)

A good name. Love and charity, keep and nourish. So many good promises for than and shall guard it, don't discard it, you will need it when you're old.

Don't sow your seeds of discontent among the people, there are many problems they don't know what to do. Energize, inspire and encourage them, one they'll take one, if not, they'll do the best they can.

We recall vividly our last conversation with Mr. Ellis Justice, December. We were sitting together, when we felt impressed to tell him some things we had learned since Pres. Hoover, then a candidate for President. He seemed to enjoy the compromise, and remarked, said, "Others have told me that."

Here's fond wishes for the continued success and long life and endurance of Mr F. B. Berry. We found him firm to the cause and age, at the close of a fine valedictory address when he declared on a school closing program at Concord, Nicholas county.

We regret that we have to converse frequently with the late Mr. Ellis Justice, but in his front yard home, in Cynthiana, during pleasant fall weather. He was cheerful and reasoned well for one so old. We found a friend and wife acquaintance in Nicholas county, where he was born, and in Hinkston and Mount Carmel.

We deplore the death of Curtis Green, Barterville, mentioned in last week's issue. He was one of close friend and neighbor while we taught school there.

LITTLE ROCK

More than a month of the new year has passed and Resolutions, January entered full of promises and hopes and dreams for all. Promises of another springtime, of apple blossoms and purple breezes of verdant fields with dots of red-headed cardinals echoing the songs of hundreds of voices, spontaneous which is lovetime!

Yes, because nature has started it so, since the beginning of time, many, many still dreams have and home. Some dreams will endure the test of married trials and troubles and heartaches. Others will fade like the rose—perhaps blooming again in the future to new. So just for amusement we have this thought for the day—this is a literary style not to be confused with the recipe for a cake of kitchen for two.

10 A DISH PAN

On top of pans' Your potent charm,
Like a siren's plaintive call
Chains many an unsuspecting mind
To a veritable prison wall.

You lure with pictures bright to see
Of a love nest built for two
When troubles fade, and music is rife
In the hopes of using you.

Sometimes you fail to weld the chain
To know white hands now free
When found to beauty in your depth
And escaped while they could flee.

But you are true old pal of mine
Since my girlhood days began
The essence of a happy home
Is known to you you recite.

For painted neath your creamy suds
Are dear lands and fame
Where we may remember far away
For that illustrious name.

Or we may see a slope of green
Or a cottage large and neat
Where all is love because of you
Who charmed our lily hands.

Oh lowly pan! Within your depth
As in the crystal blue
Where in the gloaming, dusky dreams
Are dreamed of love and you.
