BALD HILL

(Laura Ogden Dotson, Cor.)

I am supposed to write the Bald Hill news, but when there is none to write what must one do? We know people get tired reading about the visiting, which is naturally tiresome, not only to the readers but to the correspondents who write it. Some of the correspondents may be, like the one from Little Rock, poetic, or capable of philosophizing. I'm sure the proof reader becomes both physically and mentally exhausted at our efforts to egg all the visiting in, and who cares any way, who visited and who didn't, but we have to write something, so we wonder if the Mercury staff would like a change from the various communities. A poem, a bit of philosophy, theology, well anything, but what we do write. Could we have some suggestions from our news editor, or proof reader whom we are glad he was come back to his rightful place? We are weary of the sameness.

Perhaps a little community history would be more interesting. Anything pertaining to church or school should be of interest. We hope the following will be of interest to some one.

This is the story of a man who made 40 cents and lost $2.47 on the same deal:

The story is all wrapped up in a bag of Dairy Feed. One of our regular customers ran out of Tuxedo Dairy on a Saturday. He couldn't get to town until night, so when he came, our place of business was closed. He had to have a bag of feed and reluctantly bought one of another brand.

But why worry? He had saved forty cents. He bought this bag of feed for 40 cents less than he had been paying us for Tuxedo. However, he did begin to worry when he found his next week's supply of milk dropping, and when he received his check it was $2.47 short of his receipts for previous weeks.

It is evident that this shortage in milk production was due to the inferiority of the bag of feed he used, for the next week his cows were back on Tuxedo, producing the normal amount of milk, which brought the regular check.

This is the experience of one of our best citizens who doesn't think it pays to save 40 cents and lose $2.47. Therefore he will never be caught short of TUXEDO DAIRY FEED again.

THE CARDINAL

(Retitled)

When first the gods gave fire to earth
The people said, "Ah, they are lovely things,
Those little flames that dart and dance and climb,
They look almost as if they might have wings."

The wandering flames leaped upward, higher still,
Ruby, red, and singing with delight;
No hands could stop them with a net entrap,
They flung their scarlet selves into the night.

Next morn a clear song broke the quiet dawn,
And one looked up and called to others, "See,
A young flame has come to rest and sings
Upon the topmost branch of your tall forkiest tree."
