Witch-Hazel

Winter is looked upon as a season of rest for growing things. All deciduous trees have shed their leaves and herbaceous plants have withered and died. Many animals have crawled deep beneath the ground for a long winter sleep. The woods no longer ring with the songs of birds and the calls of frogs. The rustling of leaves as the furred creatures scurry to cover reminds us that some living things are still about us. Yet, winter is a time of quiet and tranquility which precedes great vernal activity.

Some plants remain green all winter but one plant alone is willing to ignore the cold gusts of wind and burst into full bloom even as the snow covers the ground. This shrub, witch-hazel, ordinarily is found growing on low ground near creek banks but sometimes it also may be seen on hilltops. The plant may reach a height of twenty feet. Its leaves are alternate and simple with an asymmetrical base and rounded teeth on the margin. Old fruit capsules usually remain through out the year. These capsules burst open with explosive force in late autumn, sometimes after a frost shots. This method of dehiscence allows the seeds to escape so that they may produce new plants.

Our lesson for the coming Lord's Day touches on one of the problems which causes many Christians to question God's love and care. They find that their efforts to testify for Him by word or life meet with a violent reaction from a bitter world, and they discover that such a life involves personal sacrifice and frequently results in even the members of their own families turning against them. Can this be God's way of dealing with His people? The answer is found in His Word. The Christian is to be

1. Fearless in a Hostile World (vv. 24-28, 32, 33).

Note carefully that he is not to be silent (vv. 32, 33). We deny our Lord when we fail to speak for Him when we ought to do so. Christianity is not something to be hidden in one's own bosom, a fire to warm one's own soul. It is good news which is to be proclaimed even from the housetops.

But, someone will say, when I do speak there is opposition and they call me names, they threaten to kill me. Yes, and what of it? "The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his Lord" (v. 24). They called Jesus a devil. They even crucified Him. Should we then expect to be borne on flowery beds of ease? God knows all about this, yes, even about the hidden and whispered plottings of evil men (v. 26). He will deal with them and judge them in due season.

We need not fear men. The most they can do is to kill the body. Let us consider the servant, God, who not only may take the life out of the body, but is able also to slay both soul and body into hell (v. 28). God is not as a theory, a far off pious imagination. He is real. He is almighty. He is also all merciful. We need not be fearful if we serve Him in faithful devotion.

II. Fearless in Personal Life (vv. 29-31).

It is one thing to be bold in the midst of battle. It is quite another thing to be fearless in the quiet of one's own room, or of one's own heart. Satan is expert at that point. He comes to us with his humiliating accusations of our unworthiness, yes, of our worthlessness. Sadly enough, not even knowledge of ourselves confirms his dismal judgment.

But wait! If we are Christians we are not our own. We are bought with a price, the precious blood of Christ. We belong to Him. He is our advocate with the Father. He is Him meet our accuser. What does He say? He tells us that He has numbered the very hairs of our head (v. 30). Not even a tiny little sparrow concerns Him, and that we are worth more than many sparrows (v. 31). We are His and He is our Saviour, Friend and Helper. Let us look up and be without fear.

III. Fearless in the Family Circle (vv. 34-39).

Here, after all, is the acid test of discipleship.

Christ did not come in order to stir up needless strife between members of the family, but He well knew that divisions would arise as the result of true discipleship. Men who are ordinarily kind and civil are stirred in their dealings with their own households to the point of hating even Christ, can become like venerable demons against any one in that circle who bears the cross of Christ and follows Him.

No human tie, no matter how intimate or precious, is to be permitted to stand between the individual and his devotion to Christ. If it does, Christ is evidently no longer first. He is no longer Lord of all in the life, and if He is not Lord of all, He is not Lord at all.

While it seems almost paradoxical to say it, Scripture teaches and experience demonstrates that if you keep your life for yourself and your own interests, it will die in your very hands and you will lose it. If you give your life in glad abandon to God, on the other hand, you will receive it back from His transformed, exalted, and graceful by the divine overshadowing.

SPREADING THE GOOD NEWS

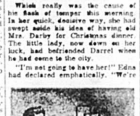
LESSON TEXT—Matthew 10:24-39
GOLDEN TEXT—Let him that heareth say, Come.—Revelation 22:17.

"Bowdlerment." That is the word which the president of a great American university recently said accurately described the present condition of the minds of men. Little wonder that the men of the world are bewildered, for they are like mariners who sail an unknown sea after having thrown away map and compass. Without Christ and without God's Word men cannot be anything but bewildered.

That which gives us even greater concern is that many who are Christians, who really know the Guide and who have the Guidebook, are also declaring themselves to be utterly bewildered. What is the reason? Obviously that they have not read the Book and have not talked with the Lord.

Christmas Dinner

By Katherine Edelman



The big man did not seem to hear him. His eyes were glued on a white-tiled staircase.

going to skip Christmas as much as possible—to eat and eat somewhere in the mists of the south seas.

"I think that's a darn selfish way of doing," Darrel shot back. "Christmas is a time for play, with a turkey, and a tree, and gifts, and above all, presence to share fun with all."

Then, without waiting to see the effect of his words, Darrel turned from the house, banging the door.

Now, he dialed the number three times, but there was no answer. Panic seized him. Had Edna believed that he meant what he had said? He had heard of young wives who had packed up and left for much less reason. What a brute he had been to face up as he did!

THE morning was unbearably long. Inwardly fuming, he hung up the receiver and answered inquiries rather from the inner office. It was about the tenth time that morning. If it hadn't been for Edna, Darrel would have been running around in circles, he often long ago. But of late it hadn't been in the same unly mood yesterday. Darrel knew that he herself would have been on edge this morning, and he wanted to make up to Edna as he had done. He blamed Whealey as much as himself.

"You sent for me," he said stiffly, his handsome face pale. Darrel's big man did not seem to hear him. His eyes were glued on a closely typed manuscript. "Look at this!" again. Then Darrel Wheatley looked at Darrel keenly. There was a sorry twinkle in Wheatley's usually cynical eyes. "Look at this and be going celebrating with a Mrs.—Mrs. Darby, or some such name. Also, you're going home a Christmas tree to your home a Christmas tree for your Saviour, Friend and Helper. Let us look up and be without fear.

MONEY TALKS

Frederick Stamm, Economist and Director of Adult Education University of Louisville

Our National Income

American shoppers will have more money to spend this year during the Christmas buying season than for some time, and indications point to the fact that they are already beginning to buy. Retail sales in small towns and rural areas for the first nine months of this year were eleven per cent greater than in 1938, and city department store sales are also up about five per cent. Shoppers should be happy because retail prices are slightly lower than last year, and their money will go further, that is, buy more.

Increased employment, longer working hours, and higher wages have put more money in the workers' pockets. Corporation profits, after declining, and those of those who are stockholders may look forward to larger extra year and dividends than for some time. Farm income and the farmers' profits have been bolstered by the war rise in price. Summed up, our national income should reach sixty-eight billion dollars in 1939, or two billion over last year.

The distribution of about $350,000,000 more than for many years in Christmas savings to over 7,000,000 Christmas Club members will begin the first week in December. Retail merchants should be optimistic about Christmas. Official estimate that at least one-fifth will be spent on Christmas purchases.

WHY DO WE HAVE TURKEY FOR THANKSGIVING?

(Laura A. Boyd, in Our Dumb Animals.)

Why do we have turkey for Thanksgiving? The usual answer to such a question is because the New England colonists ate turkey for their first Thanksgiving Day. There is much truth in this answer, but the beginning of the tradition of Thanksgiving Day goes back to the Biblical beginnings. The Pilgrim Fathers were not the first persons on this continent to find a day for thanksgiving. When the southwestern part of the present United States was settled by Mexican dwellers and other aboriginal tribes used the meat of the wild turkey for their evening feasts. The birds were wild but the Indians had domesticated them so they could be fattened before killing. Many wild turkeys roamed over Arizona, western New Mexico and southern Colorado as well as Mexico.

After the coming of the Spaniards the turkeys were given European markets and that is where the Pilgrim Fathers found them. Then, without waiting to see the effect of his words, Darrel turned from the house, banging the door.

Now, he dialed the number three times, but there was no answer. Panic seized him. Had Edna believed that he meant what he had said? He had heard of young wives who had packed up and left for much less reason. What a brute he had been to face up as he did!

THE morning was unbearably long. Inwardly fuming, he hung up the receiver and answered inquiries rather from the inner office. It was about the tenth time that morning. If it hadn't been for Edna, Darrel would have been running around in circles, he often long ago. But of late it hadn't been in the same unly mood yesterday, Darrel knew that he herself would have been on edge this morning, and he wanted to make up to Edna as he had done. He blamed Whealey as much as himself.

"You sent for me," he said stiffly, his handsome face pale. Darrel's big man did not seem to hear him. His eyes were glued on a closely typed manuscript. "Look at this!" again. Then Darrel Wheatley looked at Darrel keenly. There was a sorry twinkle in Wheatley's usually cynical eyes. "Look at this and be going celebrate Christmas at your home a Christmas tree for your Saviour.

"We certainly are," Darrel grinned sheepishly. "I'm to have a real old-fashioned celebration the day."

"I think your wife would object if you took a cranky old man to Christmas dinner."

Darrel wondered if he were hearing things, then the truth came to the surface. "If you really mean that, Mr. Wheatley, I can assure you that you're welcome. My wife thoroughly believes in having people for Christmas dinner. At least, I am sure she does now." The last sentence Darrel whispered to himself.

Gives Ages When Fruit Trees Bear

Don't be in a hurry to chop down an apple tree because it has not produced, for the first year and the Northern Spy, for instance, does not bear much before it is 15 years old, according to fruit men at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Most varieties common in Kentucky, it is said, begin to bear apples in commercial quantities when 8 to 12 years old. Yellow Transparent, Golden, Stayman, Winesap, Jonathan, Grimes Golden, York Imperial, Black Ben, Rome Beauty and Red Delicious.

Golden Delicious, on the other hand, begins producing apples in quantity when 4 to 6 years old, sometimes in the third year. Most peaches produce a light crop in their third year, and cherries begin to yield full crops about the sixth year.

Interest in installing pitcher pumps, sinks and other modern kitchen equipment continues among members of homemakers clubs in Caldwell county.

Dispelling The Fog

Among the other enormities with which the Democratic organization is charged is that it collects campaign funds from employees, rather the fault is found with its methods rather than the fact itself.

I am mentioning the matter now because we are again subjecting ourselves to reproof from the Republicans. We are actually asking the Democrats all over the country to contribute twenty-five dollars each on the occasion of Jackson Day observances, and included in the request is an invitation to attend a celebration, usually in the form of a dinner at a central point in every state. In some of the largest places there will be hundred dollar dinners, in accordance with the custom of the Democratic organization for some years past. It looks like the G. O. P. that we do not furnish a hundred dollars' worth of food for our guests, and we must confess that such is the case. The actual cost of materials and service at these dinners probably amounts to ten dollars; the rest is for the financial support of the government. Democratic campaign fund, is duly reported to the Clerk of the House of Representatives, and is disbursed in the ordinary activities of campaigns.

Our political opponents, on the other hand, do the simpler method of getting their campaign funds in globs, from those who were accustomed to get value received from Republican administrations, and one hopeful of a return of that blissful normal procedure. Not long ago the Financial Expert of the G. O. P.'s Committee revealed that Republican Campaign Liberty Loan had been assessed $4,000 apiece, and then come across with it. We know it was an assessment because they all contributed the same amount—that is, the millionaires.

There is no record available from which can be learned what is contributed on the sales of the vast Gennett publicity, for example, but for some occult reason Publisher Gannett's outfit does not report, as all political organizations are supposed to do, exactly how much money comes from, or for what it is spent.

Occasionally we find indications of the munificence of this help. For instance in Maine practically the whole of the Republican campaign fund was contributed by half a dozen imposing financial families of Portland, Deposits, dividends, profits, etc. Maine is mentioned particularly in the light of the statement issued by Republican National Chairman Hamilton after the recent elections, said Mr. Hamilton:

"The crushing defeats of the insane 'Ham and Eggs' scheme in California and the Bigelow plan in Ohio plainly indicate that people have become alarmed over crackpot schemes which are the result of inspiration in the recklessness of the New Deal theories."

I wonder what Representative Robert Crosser, Ohio; Clyde H. Smith and Ralph O. Brewster think about that. They are all Republicans elected at the Maine election with the help of the $50,000 contributed by the eminent philanthropists. Every one of them indorsed the Townsend plan, the father of both the "ham and eggs" and the Bigelow absurdities. I think there are about thirty other Republican Congressmen who similarly indorsed Townsend in principle and in sympathy with the Townsend program.

The President ridiculed the hamand-eggers project, and the Democratic Governor of California fought it. I cannot recall that the Republican Governor of Ohio did anything of the sort—which would seem to make these twin fantasies Republican rather than New Deal babies.

Incidentally, it was interesting to find Chairman Hamilton announcing that "the trend continues to point to a Republican victory next year."

About all the Republicans have to brag on is that they elected a mayor of Philadelphia by the lowest majority of the city's modern history, and they have, I believe, elected a Republican governor by fifty years without interruption. Even in the Roosevelt landslide periods the record was not broken. So, it would seem that even in Philadelphia the trend was toward Democracy. The Republican majority was by less than 30,000—his predecessor did nearly 20,000 better than that.

Mr. Hamilton did not mention that the Democrats swept Western Pennsylvania, including the Pittsburgh section, and he was equally silent about Texas, where the Democrats generally prevailed.

All the Republican victory does not come quite in the previously mentioned category. The Philadelphia Record recently disclosed the process by which Representative Hamilton Fish is trying to raise funds for his organization—so-called—to keep America out of war. Mr. Fish has hired a publicity agent to get wealthy folks, on a commission basis, which means that from 30 to 50 per cent of the contributions go to the agents. The newspaper quotes the personal letters that Mr. Fish is sending to the prospects dug up by the publicity agent. They begin: "Mr. A. H. Roberts, by associate, will be in—within the next few days and will telephone you for an appointment."

Doubtless the people to whom the Congressman writes will appreciate the circumstance that half the money they contribute to what is presented as a peace cause goes to the high-pressure agents.

More Income For Farmers In 1940

Improved income for farmers next year is the forecast in the annual outlook report of the Department of Markets and Rural Finance at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Farmers will not only have more money to sell next year, but they will receive higher prices according to the outlook at this time. This will be true especially in livestock, dairy products, poultry, fruit and vegetables. Tobacco, cotton and wheat growers may not fare so well.

Concerning the 1940 burley tobacco crop, the report says: "Prices of burley tobacco from the 1940 crop should be similar to those of the last two seasons if production is held close to the annual consumption of about 315 million pounds."

The use of burley tobacco apparently has settled down to about 315 million pounds a year, with no reason to increase production. The present carry-over of burley is considered not excessive, but might become excessive by the growing of a big crop next year.

Effects of the war are discounted in the College's report. "Export demand on the whole is expected to be somewhat greater in 1940. Hasty conclusions, however, based on experience during the World War, should be avoided.

The capacity of the world for the production of basic foodstuffs and raw materials is considerably greater than in 1914 and the supply and demand situation for particular commodities is materially changed.

The future for dark tobacco cannot be ascertain, the report sets forth. The war has disrupted trade. However, if foreign exchange is available, tobacco doubtless will be purchased. Stocks of burley and foreign countries are said to be sufficient for two years.

The outlook for sheep, it is stated, is more favorable than for any other livestock, due to lack of material increase in sheep numbers. The war may be expected to help the industry.

While beef cattle are increasing in the financial aspect of the situation head more than a year ago, Kentucky cattlemen appear to be in a favorable position, as the fall season, when most Kentucky cattle are marketed, is expected to be a relatively stronger market."

With hogs, as well as with other meat animals, improved demand for meat resulting from better times generally, may be expected to offset in a measure increased numbers.

Production of dairy products is expected to continue high, as the number of cows is increasing. However, there should be a gradual demand for dairy products as a result of improvement in business.

The outlook for Kentucky poultry raisers is considered rather unfavorable for the rest of this year and for the first half of next year. Heavy marketings of both poultry and eggs are expected, but prices should be better next year and lower than the 1928-37 average.

HELPFUL HINTS

Dip the stopper of a mucilage bottle in paraffin before putting it into the bottle and it will not stick.

Plants drink through their leaves, hence an occasional bath or spraying helps keep house plants healthy by washing the leaves of dust.

Rub equal parts of linseed oil and vinegar, well shaken, into leather chairs, occasionally. It keep them in good condition.

To a cheese cloth or paper bag filled with bits of food chopped in when cutting bread, nuts, etc., through it. Every bit will then be saved.

Nearly all house plants can be propagated from cuttings rooted in clean sand. The sand should be kept moist and covered with a piece of window glass.

When straining the pulp from liquid such as orange juice, if a piece of cheesecloth is placed in a strainer none of the pulp can go through.

To prevent gowns slipping from wooden coathangers, cover the hangers with velvet.

Keep the temperature of the room in which house plants are grown at 60 or 65 degrees. They do not thrive in a room that is too warm.

For a sweet muffin to serve with hot beverages, try adding a fourth of a cup each of chopped candied orange peel and candied cherries to your regular muffin recipe. Or try using a fourth of a cup of chopped dates and a third-cup of broken pecans. A third combination is to use a fourth cup each of figs and dates.

Chopped onions and celery, browned in chopped salt pork, improve the flavor of green beans or stewed tomatoes or carrots.

Steamed fruit cakes should be dried off by baking them for twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Such baking will glaze their surfaces.

Johnsons Predominate In U. of Ky. Enrollment

The Smiths and the Jones have taken a back seat on the University of Kentucky campus, and the Johnsons, a large group of Scotch-Irish descent, lead in predominance of names means anything. The student directory, issued at the close of faculty and students, indicates that one has to run no better than third to keep up with the Jonses, the Smiths having taken second place in the list of campus names by the margin of one "Smith."

"The Johnsons, assisted by their brethren the Johnstons, outnumbered the gallant, if genial Joneses, 38 to 32, and easily captured first place in a series of contest which has been raging for years on the University of Kentucky campus," comments the Kentucky Kernel, student newspaper. "Bill Jones, William Abbott, who heads the imposing list of student names, to Clement Anthony Zoeller, Hazard, Ky's, gift to the University of Kentucky Wildcat football team, who brings up the rear of the new class of some 3,000 names are listed in the 43 pages.

Students are listed from almost every state in the union and from Panama, Brazil, China, Maine and Vermont, Rhode Island and Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey in the east; Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, and the Carolinas in the south; Wyoming, California, Colorado, Idaho, and Montana in the west; and Michigan, North Dakota, Oregon, and Nebraska, to the northward, to mention a few of the 42 states besides Kentucky, represented in the enrollment.

U. S. Copies German Idea For Motorcycle Regiment

The War Department announced on Thursday that motorcycles, lighter armored cars and cavalry horses transported by motor truck would be combined in a special fast-moving scouting regiment which would set new precedents for the Army.

The latest development in current Army "streamlining" moves, the new regiment will be formed December 1 by reorganizing the Sixth Cavalry at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

Incorporating some of the advanced military ideas tested by the mechanized cavalry brigade, it will comprise about 1,100 officers and men. The unit will be given a thorough test next spring near the close of the mass training maneuvers already in progress in the South.

The announcement disclosed a general staff decision to employ motorcycles for the first time, and also represented official approval of the transportation overland of cavalry horses in motor trucks. This method, increasing the range and speed of cavalry has been tested experimentally for years by the First Division in Texas.

The regiment is to be formed to provide a corps commander of two or more divisions with means to make both near and distant reconnaissance regardless of the weather or of road conditions.

It will consist or two squadrons and a headquarters troop. One squadron, armed with rifles, will be equipped with horses to provide means of travel over rough ground and with motor trucks to transport men and horses quickly when good roads are available. The second squadron will be mechanized and will include two troops with motor cycles and one motorcycle troop. A pioneer and armament platoon is included, to build or destroy bridges.
