New Steel Trap Law Effective In Kentucky

The trapping regulations under the new Anti-Steel Trap Law in Kentucky were issued this week by Major James Brock, commissioner of the Division of Game and Fish. They are as follows:

"Only those devices are to be used which either take the animal alive unhurt or kill it at once. A distinction is to be observed between the trapping of land animals and of water animals.

"Land animals: fox, opossum, raccoon, skunk, weasel and wildcat, are to be taken with the live, injuring Verbail chain-loop leg hold or Belgian stake, with 16-60 odd-fashioned deadfall, or the home made box or cage trap, or with inclosed killers set in burrows or holes.

"The two water animals, muskrat and mink, may be taken with the No. 1 Verbail chain-loop or leg-hold trap always in drowning sets. Though this is not to kill the animal without pain or hopeless suffering, the continued pressure becomes painful. For this reason and also because drowning sets prevent wrongful and unjustifiable cruelty, they are always to be used with it. It is done for the skin of the land.

"No person shall set any trap on the land of another without written permission from the owner of the land.

"A fine of not less than ten or more than fifty dollars is the penalty for any violation of this law.

"There is no open season on beaver or otter.

"The trapping season for 1940 will begin Nov. 25th and end January 5th for all furbearers except red fox, which season will begin December 1 and end January 31."

A TEETLESS PLAIN

Lexington Leaders

Kentucky's splendid feed crops have been produced on a smaller acreage each year, which means that enough they are not being replaced with young growth. Farmers are given character to the landowner by practicing soil conservation, using approved methods and having rotated legumes. Other unfavorable factors which has driven yields from the world they are being permitted to pass away leaving the land in a teetless plain, like Kansas and Nebraska.

How can the indifference of the farmer be solved? Some say by putting a tax on land which they allow to run to trees? Do they think that will help them? Would it be better to see the land productive except as wild cherries grow? Or to see the acres and acres of black locusts, that are scattered over the hills, grow? Such a reckless landscape will be more pleasing to tourists? Do they care what stock needs to shade?

The use of planting and protecting trees on farms should be a matter of interest to every farmer, and in a little while losers suffered will be recovered by the trees thus planted yields for more in the value of the farm than the original cost of planting.

Hardwoods are to be preferred for beyond softwoods. They do not grow quite so fast, but they are long-lived and much more beautiful. Among the best trees for planting in this region are pin oaks, red oaks, tulip poplars, elms and sycamores. Among the small-size trees are redbuds, dogwoods and hawthorns. March and April in the spring and November and December in the fall are good months in which to plant.

Farmers, even though they may not be so much interested in improving conditions for themselves, should think of posterity. Every thoughtful man should wish to preserve the inheritance nature has passed on and which preceding generations have enjoyed for those who are to come after. It is a solemn obligation laid upon the living to think of the unborn and to add to the world's wealth.

Christianity

Christianity is a scientific thinking because truth is the basis of its profession. This is the crusade of personal religion. It is a conviction that comes from that faith in matter which is known as the Christian Dominion, on the other hand, is that which is known as the Christian error. It would not be consoling to the sick to be told that there is no earth, as it is in heaven, where it is written that there is no more sickness, sorrow, nor pain. To make this life likeness, is humanly impossible. Jesus' great healing was done with love and opportunity. Jesus' great healing was done with love and divine power. His healing of the people as a whole proved that the Divine Principle of all healing is the Christ, and that real existence is governed by spiritual law.

The above figures are for the county seat only. Reports from the county districts are not complete but indications are that the number of cases will be greatly increased.

Amid worldwide turmoil, or when the world is in a period of unusual nature, we often find it hard to behold God's presence and His loveliness to Him. Then, however, we can learn that the fog obscures and we see nothing accurately, and cease to look for our problem in the midst of frightening scene impressions and a new way of living and loving unfolds.

Upon an understanding of God as Divine Principle, divine Love, comes the force of the statement, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." There is no room for fear. Divine Love corrects and casts out fear. Divine Love corrects and casts out fear. Divine Love corrects and casts out
