British And Greeks Rout Italian Army; Grab Forts

seem now to be definite for the remainder of the war. Further it now appears that they will find it difficult to protect Ethiopia where revolt is reported under way since the return of Haile Selassie recently.

In Albania the Italians have not as yet been able to do more than slow down the Anglo-Greek advance along their last defense line from Elbasani to Durazzo within the mountain area. Meantime the Greeks have taken Port Edda and are advancing upon Valona which they have under fire. It is reported that the only ports they retain. Valona and Durazzo have been made useless for shipping and the reception of reinforcements from Italy. Naples and Rome and other Italian cities have been subjected to heavy night bombing attacks. Considerable political unrest is reported as visible in Italy. The battle of Britain goes on as it has for the past week. In France Pierre Laval has been placed under arrest by the Petain government at Vichy. In the occupied countries resistance is reported increasing.

"It Has Been A Pleasant Year," Gov. Johnson Says

"It's been a pleasant year, but it's also carried a bit of tedious work," Gov. Keen Johnson said Thursday as he signed off his desk and announced he was going to spend the afternoon of his first anniversary "with my wife."

"I guess I've acted like any country newspaper editor would in the governor's office," he reflected, indulging in something rare for him—talking about himself.

"I've tried to look after a large volume of detail. I've tried to keep expenses down and at the same time get efficient administration. I've tried to bring full reports from department and division heads. And I've read them and tried to improve upon what was being done.

"I dislike the idea of so much detail, but just show me how it can be avoided."

Friends and supporters sent congratulations and several bouquets of flowers—the latter going to the Executive Mansion.

The governor's office itself, windows partly open and about 10 degrees cooler than any other room in the well heated capitol, showed no difference in appearance than on any other day.

Commanders Of Home Guard Units Commissioned

Men who are to organize and command a new home defense force while the Kentucky National Guard is in federal training were commissioned by Gov. Keen Johnson Thursday.

Twenty-one of the men chosen as "senior military officers" of their counties, all with military experience and most of them around middle age, went there for their commissions and discussed plans with State Adj. Gen. John A. Polin and Lieut. Col. Harry E. Fischer. The latter is a United States Army officer assigned as senior instructor of the Kentucky National Guard.

After thanking them for their evidence of patriotism in undertaking the new duties, Johnson declared: "I am sure that under your wise and discreet leadership it will be possible to recruit state guard units which will be adequate to meet any emergency and which will be of such nature as to make both officers and men proud to join them."

Plans call for organization of companies with a minimum of 50 and a maximum of 100 persons in the thirty-two counts in which Nationl Guard armories in which to store the new Kentucky State Guard's equipment.

Colonel Fischer said the federal government would furnish 1400 rifles and possibly some pistols. Questions of uniforms and other equipment and whether or to adopt the new Army drab or the National Guard olive drab instead age was left to the discretion of the individual county commanders as long as it is within the legal limits of the law.

Colonel Fischer recommended that officers and men should be called for Army training under the Selective Service Act be given opportunity for some preliminary training in the new state guard. Former National Guardsmen and World War veterans also were mentioned as likely recruits. He suggested that efforts be made to complete organization by February 1. He recommended that no rank such as lieutenant, sergeant or corporal be conferred until individuals had demonstrated their ability.

Greenleaf announced the commanding officers would be selling in each county agency and all company members would at first except that no case they were called to active duty that arrangements would be made to pay them. Enlistment will be for two years, as required by the Congressional Act authorizing the new force. The Kentucky State Guard will be under Adjutant General Polin.
