FROM OVER THE LINE

(J. W. Rogers)

Coasting sleds galore and more. It has been so, since a month ago. "Ted" Kendall, Carlisle, with his genial smile, comes over our way now and then. While he is free to give ample assurance that it is better to carry insurance, he declines to give assurance as to final ends of political trends, or the break-up of cold winter weather.

"A February face, so full of frost, of storm, and of cloudiness."—Shakespeare.

Feb. 12 will be "Lincoln day." If we could imagine two great leaders Lincoln and Davis standing with clasped hands, representing Kentucky's seal, after the war between the states ,we might better appreciate the sentiment expressed by a poet, "But now the stress of war is gone, and from its clouds appear, our reunited foes again—in spirit both are here."

As we write we oftentimes express ourselves in simple rhymes. We do not claim to be a poet, and wish to have our readers know it. We may be emphatic, dramatic or ecstatic, but may we never be sarcastic, dogmatic, or fanatic.

"Love and cherish, keep and nourish: Tis more precious far than gold; watch and guard it; don't discard it, you will need it when you're old."—A good name.

HOPE

(Carol Wytemann)

If hope were banished what then would be left

To sweep us as the years speed on?

Life is short—but a whisper wafted on wings,

Heard vaguely, it seems, then gone.

With hope, the bleakest life is brightly lit,

Pain is endured, and hunger assuaged;

Against its strong yet e'er flickering flame

Satan's bitterest battle is waged.

Hope is candlelight revealing the path,

That our weary steps may not falter,

Guiding us safely on, till at last We find where it burns, on God's altar.

THE "DOCTOR'S WIFE" WRITES

Dear Folks:

Up here we are still in the cold iron grip of King Winter, whose white jeweled robe covers almost every inch of Dixie, and we are still fighting the ever increasing number of cases of colds and pneumonia.

The doctor, hurrying here and there, has had no time to answer my questions and, today, when he came to lunch, he brought along a little book called "Health Officers Say" and I'm home with Livengood, Officer, knowing how many quarts of milk I can ask about the needs of the day, sent it to me. I found in the article he had marked for me on Page 18 of so much interest to you, I am sending it on in my letter to you. It is entitled, "Public Malady Number One"—and was taken from Lola Maese Milam's article of the January 1940 Hygeia.

It states some of the facts that seldom fools the doctors—however, I hope you don't know very little about it—and fools matters of importance, though they think they know all about it.

The safest place, it seems, to go in the common cold is the Arctic—or was, anyway, until a band of unclanders landed in cold-free Spitzbergen. Within a week, the town had eighty-four cases of cold. Two months later I may per cent of the population was infected.

While there is much which we do not know about cold, there is much that we do know. For example, it seems pretty certain that colds are due to unseen but terrible viruses—and to because these sub-microscopic organisms are small enough to pass through a porcelain filter that would catch ordinary bacteria. Experiments conducted with chimpanzees, one of which was infected with the virus of a human cold, showed how the cold virus could be caught and spread.

Our friendly, gregarious habits make the travels of this virus easy and rapid. It rides the air on tiny droplets when we sneeze, or we may be conveyed by a handshake. Or we dine out and depart it on our napkin and tableware for the next person to pick up, since dish water is seldom hot enough to sterilize it. Scientists have worked hard to develop a vaccine against colds, but without much success. The biggest rival to perfect cold is specific is not other scientists but laymen, who have invented pet remedies than a cenlpede has legs. Aspirin, packs, gargles, mustard baths, skunk oil, sheep tallow, turpentine, liquor, and patent medicines of all kinds are just a few.

Gaps though there are in our knowledge of colds, the doctors yet know quite enough to prevent much of the damage and suffering caused by colds if laymen would only forget their pet remedies long enough to listen.

I put my order in today for Hygeia, the health magazine, so that I can keep myself and family informed and so that I won't have to pester the doctor with questions when he is so busy.

Yours for good health,

The Doctor's Wife

Hugh S. Johnson

He says of this column:

"As I see the duty of a commentator it is to comment, I am not looking for any office. I am not plugging for any party. Like the veteran umpires, Bill Klem, my job is to 'call 'em as I see 'em.'

"This column wouldn't be worth while if it had any duty to take a fixed idea and wholly bull out of everybody who disagrees, and to set up as angels all who approve. I am going right on calling 'em as I see 'em."

He covers national and world events from the standpoint of what he sees as American interests.

You may not agree with him, but you will enjoy his column each week. Read it.
