$94,644,338.00 Expended In Kentucky Last Year

Loans and outright expenditures of the Federal Government in Kentucky during the 1939 fiscal year which ended last June 30th, amounted to $120,928,008 according to a statement made today by Judge Lorenzo K. Wood, State Director for the Office of Government Reports. This compares with a total of $73,076,394 expended during the prior fiscal year of 1938.

Loans totaled $17,456,126. In addition, the Federal Housing Administration insured $8,827,649 worth of housing improvement notes and mortgages in the state. The largest amount of loans was made by the Farm Credit Administration, and the greatest amount of direct expenditures was disbursed by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, amounting to $38,775,867.

Loans were made to business, farmers, home owners, public housing authorities amounting to $14,852,587, and to individuals whose property or holdings were damaged by such catastrophes as floods or fires amounting to $66,217. Grants to farmers and for the construction of public roads and buildings amounted to $58,962,595. Relief was extended to able-bodied men and women employed on Work Projects Administration projects, to young men enrolled in the Civilian Conservation Corps, and by the distribution of surplus commodities amounting to $2,945,549 through the state relief agency. This amount also includes $12,000 in 525 pensions paid to war veterans and their dependents.

Judge Wood pointed out that an itemized account ing of the Federal loans and payments is available to persons interested in the functions of the Federal Government as they relate to the State of Kentucky, by applying to the Office of Government Reports, 511 Federal Building, Louisville, Kentucky.

Noted speakers at the meeting of the Kentucky Federation of Homemakers during the annual Farm and Home Convention at the University of Kentucky January 30 to February 2, include Dr. Louise Stanley, head of the Bureau of Home Economics in the United States Department of Agriculture, she will make two addresses.

Other speakers to the women are, Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, home economist, and Miss Ella Gardner, recreational specialist, both of Washington, D. C., and A. Drummond Jones, economist of the Federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

General sessions will be held the first and last days of the Farm and Home Convention, with special meetings Wednesday and Thursday devoted to dairying, stock raising, soils and crops, agricultural engineering, beekeeping, fruit growing, the rural community and rural church, agricultural adjustment, and control of stock diseases.

James E. Poole, Chicago livestock authority, will return to Lexington February 2 to address beef cattle producers attending the Farm and Home Convention.

Kentucky Master Farmers will be presented the first day of the convention, with recognition ceremonies conducted by Dean Thomas P. Cooper, of the College of Agriculture and W. C. Lassetter, editor of The Progressive Farmer.

New, Improved Motor Fuel Is Announced

Standard Oil stations and dealers are today offering their customers the new, improved Crown Gasoline — a popular priced gasoline that meets specifications for premium anti-knock performance.

Road tests have proved that this new gasoline gives motorists quick starting, faster pickup, smooth, even operation, more mileage, and is now high in knockless power. It also contains a unique solvent action, which helps to reduce the tendency of carbon formation.

Today's purchasers of popular price gasoline demand the performance heretofore obtainable only in premium grade at premium price, and the development of this new, improved gasoline was to meet this demand.

Roosevelt Asks New Taxes For Defense

A stronger national defense is demanded by new taxes, a continuation of New Deal policies, and a merchant marine reinforced by "common sense, tolerance and cooperative spirit," Congress urged upon Congress by President Roosevelt, in a message personally delivered to the newly convened session.

These things, backed by an extensive plea for the administration's authority to reduce tariffs by agreement with other countries, would not be sufficient, he said, to protect the nation against any tendency toward dictatorship at home and "worldwide forces of disintegration" as well.

For the rest, Mr. Roosevelt pledged anew his determination to keep the United States out of war abroad, and let it be known, to the ironical cheers of the Republican membership, that the budget submitted included a reduction in all important items except that of national defense.

Some of the highlights of President Roosevelt's address to Congress on the state of the union:

Peace: Avoidance of interference between keeping out of war and pretending that this war is none of our business. We do not have to do to war with other nations, but we have already got to be friendly with other nations to encourage the kind of peace that will contribute the trustor of the world, and by so doing help our own nation as well.

Defense: Because the government of the United States does so much for its own people, it should maintain the policy of the best neighborliness with other nations.

In almost every nation in the world today there is a true public belief that the United States has been a day of preparation for a point and active factor in seeking the re-establishment of peace.

The trade agreements act should be regarded as an independent part of the foundation of any stable and durable peace.

Even although these trade treaties we pursue to conquer peace in a world of chaos, the new level must likewise be prepared to take care of wrecks if the world can not attain peace.

In the field of continuing world security, I am asking the Congress for Army and Navy increases which are based on the strictest economies.

The most important increase in any part of the budget is the estimate for national defenses. Practically all other important items show a reduction.

The fact of unemployment of millions of men and women remains a reproach of a number of difficulties in our economic system not yet attained.

TO MAKE SAUSAGE

To make pork sausage, use three-fourths lean meat and one-fourth fat meat. Keep the seasoning delicate; a good proportion is three level tablespoons of salt, two of black pepper and one of sage to every ten pounds of meat. Mix the seasoning separately, and spread over the meat before grinding, which will result in uniform distribution. It is best to use a coarse plate in the grinder the first time, a fine plate the second. Many people prefer smoked sausage. Smoking should not be done for longer than two to four hours or it will make the sausage strong. Stuff the sausage into cloth bags 12 to 14 inches long, 1 1-2 to 2 inches in diameter. After the sausage has been smoked, if the bag is immersed in melted paraffin it will keep the product longer at high quality.

This sausage recipe, and others for pickled pigs' feet, boxed bacon, smoked meat, scrapple, lard and souse are given in Circular No. 261, "Killing, Cutting and Curing Pork," obtainable free from county farm agents or by writing to the Kentucky College of Agriculture, Lexington.

THE PROBLEM OF FORGIVENESS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:21-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.—Matt. 6:12.

Christianity and forgiveness belong together. Among the religions of the earth Christianity stands out as the one that is pre-eminently and adequately meets the problem of sin. In Christ is provided forgiveness for sin, cleansing from all unrighteousness, a new birth by which one enters into a life of holiness and power.

Since these things are true it would seem to be almost unnecessary to urge God's children to be of a forgiving spirit. But as Bishop Ryle says, "It is a mournful fact that there are few Christian duties which are practiced as that of forgiveness. It is sad to see how much bitterness, unmercifulness, spite, harshness and unkindness there is among men." Surely these things ought not so to be.

I. The Extent of Forgiveness (vv. 21, 22).

"How long do I have to stand it?" is the question of the human heart untouched by the spirit of Christ. The apostles of life, the offenses of our fellow men against us, all seem to pile up until the burden is about to crush us. What is the answer to man's cry?

The Jews had an answer. Three times is enough. Forgive once, yes. Again, yes. But the third time, no. Peter was instructed enough to more than double that allowance of mercy. He was told to forgive not just two or three times, but seven times. The point to be kept in mind, however, is not whether four forgiveness must three times or seven times, but that it is a matter of heart. . . . of keeping books, and of attitude. . . . bringing down of judgment upon the heads of the offenders.

The spirit of Christ swept all of that aside. He said that we should forgive 70 times seven. In other words, Christian forgiveness is to be unlimited, to know no weariness and have no boundaries. If one really forgives it is because he has a forgiving spirit and that spirit is not exhausted by any number of offenses.

II. The Motive of Forgiveness (vv. 23-34).

Two motives are given in our text, the first being that since we ourselves are daily and hourly in need of forgiveness at the merciful hand of God, we also should be ready to extend to our fellows who sin against us. Compared with our offenses against the law of God, we know that the misdeeds of our neighbors against us are mere trifles. Because the Lord God has done for you, and then when you were bereft of all hope, has graciously with your brother, remember his mercy of God.

The second motive is the remembrance of that a day of judgment is to come. There is always a time of reckoning ahead even as was the case with the wicked servant. Perhaps not only what God has done for you and is doing for you, but what you must yet expect Him to do in that day of judgment.

III. The Importance of Forgiveness (v. 35).

A man dealing with his fellow man and who think that it is merely a matter between man and man. We are not dealing with a straight line between ourselves and our brother (that was Peter's error), but with a triangle at whose apex is God Himself. If I expect God to forgive me, I must let that same forgiveness flow out to my brother. If I deal with him as though God had nothing to do with the matter, then I must not try to count God's forgiveness into the picture when I stand in defense before Him.

Here again we express a word of caution. Let no one suppose that our redemption is that of a contingent upon what we do toward our brethren. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast" (Eph. 2:8, 9). How does the truth of our lesson mean that we are approaching God to bargain with God, trading a bit of our forgiveness to our fellows for His forgiveness of us. God is not interested in such transactions. But it does mean that we cannot or will not forgive, you may well consider whether you are a Christian at all.
