THE "DOCTOR'S WIFE" WRITES

Dear Folks:

When I was a child I never feared the dark because I had been told that angels guarded my sleep. That was a long time ago, and it worked. Today, I learned of flesh and blood guardian angels. They perhaps would prefer not 'to be called angels, but nevertheless they do a lot of mighty helpful guarding, and because of them I am not afraid to eat, sleep or travel. I refer to the personnel of the Food, Drug and Hotel Bureau of Kentucky's Department of Health. But for these alert workers and their wide-awake chief, disease would be far more widespread than it is. It is their business to see that the State Food and Drug Law of 1918, controlling the sale of food and drugs within the state, is observed; that no food contaminated with filth, that no food which is the product of diseased animals and that no fish not rightly inspected be allowed to reach an unsuspecting public. They work with the Federal Food and Drug Administration in preventing the sale of adulterated foods and drugs from being shipped into Kentucky. Hotel keepers and restaurant owners are required by inspectors to maintain sanitary conditions at all times to protect the public from the spread of disease. Mumps, tuberculosis, measles, diphtheria, common colds, scarlet fever, whooping cough, tular pneumonia, trench mouth and cerebro-spinal fever may be contracted from dirty drinking and eating utensils. Because of this danger, the Bureau of Food, Drug and Hotels requires that all glasses, spoons, and serving utensils in public eating places be cleaned in bactericidal solutions, with washing powder and running hot and cold water. In many places, waiters, busses, grocery clerks, bakers and milk handlers are required to pass an examination proving they have who disease that is transferable.

Since the passing of the Federal Food and Drug Act in 1918, another problem has loomed ominously upon the horizon. This concerns the sale of cosmetics in which American women invested two hundred million good solid American dollars in 1939. During this period of thirty-three years, the Federal and State authorities discovered that all that came in beauty boxes did not produce beauty—corrosive eyelash dyes, at times caused blindness; freckle creams containing mercury that seeped through the skin producing a slow poisoning; depilatories that were "no hing but thallium acetate" a rat poison, whose use resulted in baldness skin injury and other dangerous conditions crea ed the necessity for a law governing the sale of cosmetics. So, January 1, 1940, a new Federal law, called the Food, Drug and Cosmetics Act, became effec tive, renewing my faith in American angels. Now the Health Department of Health is asking the General Assembly to pass a new state food, drug and cosmetic law to provide the needed protection in our own state.

Now I can still sleep without being afraid of the dark, and, in addition to this blessed privilege, I can eat with a feeling of safety in public places displaying certificates showing they have passed state inspection! I can travel by train and stay overnight in hotels that protect me from disease and, last but not least, because I am a woman, I can buy my cosmetics with confidence.

Yours for good health,

The Doctor's Wife

Trojans Leading In Intra-Mural Games

The Trojans, captained by Steve Atkinson, is leading in the intra-mural basketball program in the Cortelyou Gym. The Trojans defeated Bulldogs, captained by Charles Hawkins, last Friday by the score of 6 to 5. High point man was Steve Atkinson with W. J. Smart with 4 points, and for the Bulldogs, Captain Hawkins with 3 points. In the other game the Fighting Irish, captained by W. C. Crawford defeated the Yellow Jackets captained by Elmer Clark, by a score of 5 to 3. High point man for the winners was Crawford with 4 points and for the Yellow Jackets was Captain Clark with 4 points.

The Wildcats, captained by Bob Cunningham, were idle.

Following is the standing of the teams:

MONEY TALKS

Several months ago it was stated in this column that we would have no great advance in prices due to the European war. I also stated that, with the exception of a few war products especially airplanes, we would not see feverish industrial production to supply Great Britain and France with war material.

To date, these predictions have proved true. Industrial productions is not much if any above normal and early December and has dropped a little in January. Stocks of finished goods in the manufacturers' hands are the highest since May, 1938. Stocks of raw materials have gone up for three consecutive months.

Prices of grains, cotton, wool, leather, copper, and other important raw materials, although high, are from a year ago, have declined from their recent highs. The stock market prices have gone down sharply in the past week, reflecting the downturn in industrial production and commodity prices. These facts illustrate the instability of war-influenced prices.

Great Britain and France are buying sparingly, for they know buying now in large quantities would force prices higher. And they want to get as much as possible after they recover, we can't blame them for this.

The bright spot in the American economic picture is the recovery in industry. Their production, largely for domestic use, is up above or even over last year. they have stepped up their output of rubber tires, etc., and this is keeping plants busy and men at work. It also illustrates this:

If we are to have good times in American demand for our own America demand for our own products. Good times based on war are short lived; good times based on peace are enduring.

CLOSES SHOP

(Fleming-burg Gazette)

Last Saturday saw the end of a long business house in Flemingsburg that had served the people of Flemingsburg and Fleming county over a period of fifteen years, or longer.

The Gazette has never inquired as to the reason for closing up this house but it is to be assumed that it was due to lack of business.

Until about three or four years ago this firm was doing from all indications, a good business. In fact, several years ago a larger building was leased to make more room to take care of the ever-increasing trade. They had local men, who were acquainted with the people of Fleming county, as managers of this store. And, they were running frequent ads in the local newspaper telling of the products they had for sale.

As time went on the ads became fewer and fewer apart and finally stopped altogether. The editor of this paper talked it over with the manager, a local boy, about why the ads were discontinued. He stated that he would like very well to have an ad real often, but that the firm had written said they were depending on a Maysville paper to carry the message to the people of Fleming county.

Evidently this method of approach didn't work. The ad was carried out but most of the people never read it, did their shopping in Maysville.

After the, local boy lost his job and managers were sent in so fast that very few of them had time to become acquainted before another was came in. The final result of it all sums up to this—the store went out of business last Saturday.

The Gazette is not talking "sour grapes." We do not say that if a local ad each week would have saved the store. What we are trying to say is—that stopping advertising in the local paper was a contributing factor to its demise. There were probably several other factors that also contributed.

Nine times out of ten a business has something to sell and when the people, through regular advertising, what it has to sell, will never be forced to close up under ordinary conditions.

Urges Hay, Grain Feeding For Ewes

The shortage of winter pasture calls for liberal feeding of hay and grain to bring a good lamb crop in the spring, according a statement from the College of Agriculture at Lexington. Ewes, as a rule, should gain 15 to 25 pounds when bred ing to lambing, and should never be allowed to lose weight.

Where plenty of good legume hay is fed, a variety of concentrates may be used. Corn alone and legume hay make a good ration. Richard C. Miller of the college says that where ewes are wintered on dry grass or are hay fed, about 2 pounds of silage or bright straw, they should receive 2 pounds of legume hay a day and a half-pound of one of the following mixtures.

6 parts corn, 3 parts oats, 2 parts bran, 1 part linseed oil meal.

3 parts of oats, 2 parts of corn, 1 part of linseed oil meal.

6 parts corn, 2 parts bran, 1 part linseed oil meal.

2 parts oats, 1 part corn.

Corn, oats and bran, equal parts.

Where legume hay is scarce, corn, and cottonseed meal or soybean oil meal for linseed oil meal.

Feed for ewes nursing lambs should be increased gradually as the lambs begin to take feed and milk. Unless green feed or other succulence is available, ewes with single lambs should have about a pound of grain daily, and ewes with twin lambs may require more. Hay also may be increased. Good water should be in plentiful abundance, and coarse barrel salt kept before the ewes.

Male Incontinency.

Philosophers and poets have mused on the incontinency of a woman, but very little on the incontinency of man. Tradition pictures man as a great positive creature selecting a goal and going straight for it of knowing exactly what he wants and getting it.

How different is this from the man that every wife knows! Try as she may to do the thing that pleases him she will find herself going continually wrong. His only constancy is she sure thing is his inconstancy.

Does a husband complain that he is dragged away from the quiet and comfort of his fireside to much at night? Let his wife arrange to go out without him and he will feel hurt and insist upon lagging along.

Every husband tells his wife that certain of her kitchen preparations he has no taste for. The same detested dishes serve away from home he will eat with relish and embarrass his good wife by demanding in company to know why she never cooks such delicacies. Moreover, the appetites and tastes of the inconstant male are as variable as the color of feminine hosiery.

Let men speak wisely of the business barometer and underlying causes, and trends and tendencies. Wives know that these are just the result of the ruminations of husbands who haven't the faintest idea of what they want, and no wives about to tell them.

CHICK BROODING SUGGESTIONS

"Precautions and Suggestions" on brooding chicks, taken from the Kentucky College of Agriculture extension circular No. 357, "Brooding Chicks Artificially."

Keep the fire burning in the brooder stove for two or three days before putting the chicks in to the house and regulate it so as to provide the proper temperature. Overheating must be avoided.

Feed the chicks when they are put into the brooder house, for if the chicks are not fed immediately they may eat some of the litter, which might cause digestive troubles.

Use only feeds of good quality to make up chick rations.

Allow sufficient feeder space to avoid crowding. Provide at least one inch of feeder space for each chick during the first three or four weeks and two inches there after.

If liquid milk is used, clean the feeders daily.

If liquid milk is not available, dried buttermilk or dried skim milk may be used, and the chicks should be given clean water to drink.

If a commercial mash is fed, do not feed any milk, but give the chicks water to drink.

Cleaning the house once or twice a week is usually sufficient to maintain health.

Clean litter and clean feed are means of preventing diseases.

Strong, healthy chicks are easy to raise, weak ones are not. Consequently, put only strong chicks into the brooder house.

Provide ample ventilation. Do not make the mistake of having the house closed tight.

Move the house each year, or follow a range rotation, to maintain the health of the chicks.

Practice cleanliness at all times. It pays.

Put in low roosts when the chicks are 3 to 4 weeks old.

HELPFUL HINTS

Before washing a dark dress, baste around the edge of the stains with white cotton. In this way one is sure of removing all the soiled parts which otherwise are difficult to detect when the garment is wet.

Candlewick spreads should be washed in the gentle suds of water and soap suds. They should then be rinsed several times in clear warm water and hung up in the shade to dry. When they are perfectly dry they should be placed, tufted side down, in a cotton blanket and pressed gently with a warm iron.

Hotbeds are coldframes with heat added. This may be from animal manure, hot water or electricity. The difference between the two is the presence of the heating unit.

Keep brass articles from tarnishing by covering them with a thin coat of clear varnish. The varnish will form a lacquer which will not wear off unless the brass is handled frequently.

Hooked rugs will lay flat if they are dried properly. Place them, top side down, on papers spread over the floor. Allow them to dry thoroughly.

"JESUS DRAMATICALLY PROCLAIMS HIS MESSIAHSHIP"

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 21:1-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.—Matthew 21:9.

The official presentation of Himself to the Jewish people as their King, their rejection of Him, and what was even more solemnly meaningful, His rejection of the Hebrew nation because of unbelief—such are the stirring events which face us as we enter with our Lord into the last week of His earthly life. The first event in that sequence is the one we study in our lesson for today, namely, the coming of the King to Jerusalem. Jesus on this occasion did a very dramatic and unusual thing, a fact which indicates that here is an incident of extraordinary importance which we do well to give careful study.

I. Preparation and Presentation (vv. 1-7).

The King comes, but even in His hour of royal triumph He gives to His followers the unexplainable but very thrilling privilege of serving Him.

1. "The Lord Hath Need" (vv. 1-4). In the need of disciples who would do His bidding without question or hesitation—of obedience well, and did even as Jesus had appointed them" (v. 6). How many of us lack obedience! Let us also go and do what He commands.

He needed the ass and the colt. How simple and lowly was that need, and yet how glorious that it was ready to meet it! God's plans are carried out in the little things as well as the great. Prophecy is being fulfilled here (see v. 5) by a little thing. Is God waiting for very small or even great purpose through some little thing which you are withholding from Him? Why tarder Him any longer?

2. "Behold Thy King Cometh" (vv. 5-7). Though He had not come with the pomp and trappings of an earthly potentate, the King of Glory came to His people to offer them for the last time the opportunity to receive Him. He asks you to yield your life to His Kingship. What will your answer be?

II. Acceptance and Rejection (vv. 8-11, 15, 16).

1. "The Multitude Cried Hosanna" (vv. 8-11). The fact that before the week was over many of the same voices cried, "Crucify Him!" should not obscure the fact that there were childlike believers (v. 16) who really had faith in Christ. There is something inspiring about that picture of enthusiasm and devotion. Real faith in Christ ought to result in a fervor of spirit which will stir our hearts and our cities. Are we not altogether too dead and formal in much of our worship today? Do we not need more holy enthusiasm for Christ and for His Church?

2. "The Chief Priests and Scribes ... Were Sore Displeased" (vv. 15, 16). Small wonder, for not only had the children put them to open shame by recognizing the Christ whom they had ignored, but He had in turn ruined their polite religious racket which produced for them such a lovely profit. Mark this—when anyone is displeased with Jesus or with His children or with His work on earth, you can be sure that there is a reason, and not a holy, upright or good reason either!

III. Judgment and Compassion (vv. 12-14).

What a remarkable picture! In the midst of flaming judgment and destruction we find loving compassion upon the blind and the lame. Folk who think that Christ has no message but love need to look on Him as He cleanses the temple. On the other hand, those who think that He has no word but judgment need to behold Him as He stands in the midst of the overturned tables and drives out the buyers, the money-changers and the sellers. God is love, but He is also absolute holiness.

1. "Jesus Cast Out . . . and Overthrew" (vv. 12, 13). Is there where to begin to cleanse the city. He started in the temple. Absolutely right is the man who suggested that the place to start to clean up a city is not in the slums but in the churches. You will be ready to clean out the tavern or that other low place where the gang hangs out in your town after you have cleaned out the church. The same is true of the individual. A regenerated heart will bring a reformed life, not vice versa.

2. "He Healed Them" (v. 14). The very tasks which had just overthrown the tables and cast out the money-changers now gently touched the lame and the blind with healing. The agents which had blazed with holy indignation now shone with love and compassion. The scene of judgment and wrath became the house of prayer and of answered prayer. On the very spot where one man had received condemnation, another received healing. Each one received that which he sought by his action. How will you, my dear reader, meet Jesus—as your Judge or as your Saviour? You must make the choice.

Dispelling The Fog

By Charles Michelson Director Of Publicity, Democratic National Committee

Some thoughtful people have harbored a belief that this is a crt ical period in our history. They figure it is going to require statesmanship of the highest order and the most efficient administration of public affairs to pull us through. They ought to be relieved mightily.

According to the Republican aspirants for the presidential nomination, the remedy for all our troubles is astonishingly simple. Not only have they the remedy for the familiar ills the Roosevelt administration has been warring against for seven years, but like wise they have the solution of the new problems brought to us by the advent of war in Europe.

These mighty discoveries were revealed by the utterances incident to the recent barnstorming tours of County Prosecutor Dewey and Senator Taft—not to mention the ex comic relief afforded by the comedy teams of Ham Fish and Editor Gannett, and including the still small voice of Styles Bridges, who for identification purposes must be introduced as Governor of New Hampshire. All that is needed to save the country is to elect a Republican President next year.

That cure-all is one I've seen before, so plain, direct and easy of accomplishment, it is a wonder that it did not occur to the country's experts when hard times and experience in matters of finance are enough to make an economist's hair gained in his lifetime—so to speak. Or perhaps the fact that we have been living off the fat of the land for years.

A Republican president," says Mrs. Dewey (could he mean himself?), "can restore the faith of the people in them so to question the soundness and profundity of Mr. Dewey's expert views and experience in matters of finance and economics. Keeping an eye on the Democratic administration is bad enough, but when Senator Taft adopted it and Senator Vandenberg and Senator Austin indicate that it would be helpful to adopt their views it becomes a matter of "Hoover." Senator Taft proceeded to disclose that he had not studied the domestic issues and that the domestic issues and Mr. Dewey and the other candidates are clarify. The domestic issues have long to be considered, and he refuses to form any opinions as to them. Certainly a candidate who has not formed such opinions is not in touch "relief, old age pensions, unemployment insurance and the like," and unskilled and the poor.

Encourage business, but recain the regulations necessary to protect the people against fraud and exploitation.

It reminded a Western editor of the story of the lad who went to a classical master to be fitted out for college. "Have you any money?" he was asked, and the answer was "No."

"Can you support yourself at least at first?" was the next question.

"I don't know about his circumstances," said the boy's father, "but I can't support him."

Editor Gannett, of course, agrees with the big shot aspirants in their demonstration that policies of the Democratic administration are responsible for the present depression, and is almost as hard and definite as they in presenting what he would do if a Gannett miracle came to pass.

Among other things he deplores is that "the banks are learning that money that cannot to be put to work." What steps he would take to employ this hoarded capital he refrains from mentioning.

Of course a lumping bank is not healthy, but here are some American citizens who think such a bulge is not quite as bad as a bank beleaguered by depositors trying to get with indifferent success to get out their money before that particular bank joined the procession.

THE HAPPIEST MAN

(Owensboro Messenger)

Who is the happiest man in town?

This is a question that will be hard to answer.

He is not the richest man from the uncle of this world's goods, because riches do not bring contentment, but they do bring a lot of worries, care and perplexities and compel a man to harden himself against the numerous appeals that seek to make a racker of him in the name of charity.

He is not the most ambitious man in town, because ambition is filled with continual striving and keeps one haunted with the fear of failure to obtain the object of one's goal.

He is not essentially the healthiest man in town, because health is frequently little appreciated, and not infrequently robustness of body impels one to be careless of qualities essential to happiness.

The happiest man in town is not always the one who has the most knowledge, for Solomon was right when he said, "Knowledge increases sorrow, and in the getting of much wisdom there is much grief."

There would doubtless be a lot of argument about the happiest man in town.

In a recent issue of the Weekly News Letter of Rotary International an effort was made to describe him.

Many might not agree in the description, but it does have in it much of sense and value.

Here is what they said about it:

"The happiest man in the world is the common, everyday chap who makes his own living, pays his own bills, has a few dependents to support, but doesn't strive to get a corner on the local output, has no settled notion of ambition nor society. He loves his God and his country, and thinks there's no place like home,' the haven of rest and the company of his family is that of anyone else. He never has to sit up nights to pull himself together, believes in the bettime of live and let live, and he encourages others to do so when he doesn't stutter with his mouth. The happy man never begs to be satisfied and does not indulge in speculation for things four sizes too large for him.

"He is not the only one interested Rock from his 'nest by H2 Mr. Hoover. There is something about the character of this man which would bring about the desired result and Mr. Dewey and the other candidates have failed to disclose their views on the issues clarify. The domestic issues have long to be considered, and he refuses to form any opinions as to them. Certainly a candidate who has not formed such opinions is not in touch "relief, old age pensions, unemployment insurance and the like," and unskilled and the poor.

Consumption Of Pork To Be Encouraged In Campaign

In order to encourage the consumption of more pork and relieve the oversupply of hogs throughout the nation, the National Association of Food Chains is endorsing "National Economy Pork Sale," a producer-consumer campaign, during two periods, February 1 to 10 and February 29 to March 29.

Purpose of the two periods special inducements, including reduced prices, will be offered to encourage the consumption of pork and pork products.

ACP Expansion Of Grant Of Aid Program Planned

Expansion of the grant of aid payments under the agricultural conservation program to encourage Kentucky soil conservation practices is the object of a conference of the state executive officer of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

In order effectively to expand the grant of soil preservation payments immediate a complete survey of sources of limited materials in the state, from which these can be obtained, and quantities available, will be made.

It will be the policy of the Washington office, State Office and State Committee to expand the grant of soil preservation benefits as rapidly as possible into additional counties, Mr. Farring said. Each county will be notified as to the deduction value of a pound since one furnished.

No advance charges are being made this year for crimp superphosphate, which is being furnished free of cost throughout Kentucky. A total deduction of 60 per ton is made for this material for planting forest trees may not be used in his manner, however.

Earlier placement of orders for this triple superphosphate and ground limestone will be necessary this year, Mr. Farrington pointed out, since the program year closes August 31, six months earlier than the previous closing date.

Kentucky Hybrid Corn Acreage Up

Approximately 10,500 Kentucky farmers grew around 120,000 acres of hybrid corn last year. Yields were estimated at 15 per cent above common kinds, and the quality generally was better. Hybrid corn has withstood winds and storms better.

W. C. Johnstone of the College of Agriculture at Lexington predicts that 400,000 to 500,000 acres will be planted to hybrid corn this year. About 100 Kentucky farmers produced certified seed last year.

Tests were made in 86 Kentucky hybrid corn trials to compare commercial hybrid corns with Reid's Yellow Dent and Pride of Saline. Kentucky hybrids 49 and 72 and U. S. hybrid 13 produced best. The Experiment Station also did extensive experimental work with new hybrids in Ohio, it went as high as 93 bushels to the acre.

Measuring Rules For Bulk Feeds

In taking a farm inventory, it may be necessary to measure grain in the ton or crib and hay in the mow. The Kentucky College of Agriculture offers the following measuring rules: In each case, multiply the length by the width by the width by the height or depth, and divide by 2150. For ear corn in a crib, divide by 2.5; for grain in a bin, divide by 1.25, and for hay in a mow, divide by 500.

Here's Why Lamb Keeps In Demand

A statement from the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture indicates that sheepraisers should be encouraged by the increase in the consumption of lamb.

The National Live Stock and Meat Board, Chicago, has the following to say about lamb:

"Lamb is always in season and always of high quality.

"Lamb is liked by the whole family and is good for the whole family.

"Lamb is completely and easily digested by young and old alike.

"Lamb is tender, delicious, and easily prepared and served in a variety of ways.

"Lamb combines well with all foods in well-balanced, appetite appealing meals."

$45,000 Sought From State In Resolutions

More than $45,000 is sought from the state treasury by the 54 resolutions introduced during the first session of the present legislative session.

The resolutions seek authorization of suits against the state for damages, appropria ions to state peace officers' claims relased by the finance department, and funds to purchase a $10,000 airconditioning unit for the capi ol and various books and periodicals.

Most of the suit-authorization resolutions seek authority to sue the state for damages asserted to have been caused by a highway department vehicle.

Some imes they set out the amount of damages alleged to have been incurred, last seven of them put the amount to be determined by a court.

One resolution provides for the purchase of the Kenucky Directory, a compilation of da a on the state government, for an estimated $1,100, ano her would provide for the purchase for the legislative use of 20 copies of the Kentucky Statu es, 8500, a third would provide for the payment of $3,600 for extra help in the chambers.
