SOCIAL and SOCIETY

JUNE

(Leigh Mitchell Hodges in the Philadelphia Bulletin)

Now June with joy of roses sweet entwined,
Comes, trailing draperies of manifold
Fresh-minted, colors, where with aureoled
Fluid-wakened earth is as a goddess shrined.
Now gold more lustrous than was ever mined
Is shower'd by sun for all to take and hold,
And every beauty-tale by poets told
Is dimmed by days no poet has divined
Lo! here, within this fragrant pause between
Young Spring and mothering Summer, let us drain
The cup of gladness, lest we fail to glean
The harvest hearts may store against bodily pain.
Lest in the Winter of the soul, no tunes
Be stored to bring alive again past Junes.
