The members of the city council voted Monday night to have a sewer main of the city in the proposed sewer disposal system...

It was especially gratifying to note that every member of the council understood the situation. It was evident that every member of the council had done his best...

Members of the council know the need of the project. Both from the sanitary point of view and from the industrial point of view.

It is therefore necessary for the members of the council to express their views. Carlisle's citizens can not expect the council members to take the project entirely upon their shoulders.

What are they doing for the benefit of the city? They are doing nothing. They are doing nothing.

The family row. "I was told the land of the river, and the home of the hero."

Prof. Mark L. Foster, Cornell University professor, has come to the conclusion that a good, hard, honest war is something good for the health of the nation...
