Life Without Books

The art of reading for pleasure may be-come an exclusive affair with a small leisure class, a badge of superiority—hated as such by the tolling masses—it is predicted by Prof. Howarrd Mumford Jones, of the English De-partment of Harvard University.

with the same old battle cry of economy and tax reduction.

The London boy's essay on the cow, say int, "his head is ... so his mouth can be somewhere," applies as well to the after-dinner speaker.
