Japan, U. S. Showdown Is Near At Hand

The Mediterranean theatre—Increased activity in recent weeks indicates the early opening of a British campaign against the Italians in Libya. Berlin reported that it had sunk the sinking of 14 Italian transports on their way to Libya. But on Friday the British Admiralty had to report the sinking on Thursday, of the aircraft carrier Ark Royal by Nazi submarine about 100 miles east of Gibraltar. Although this is the heaviest naval loss suffered by the British navy since the loss of the Hood, neither the Hood nor one life is reported to have been lost.

Axis-American Relations—On Friday Congress voted to repeal the sections of the Neutrality Act prohibiting U. S. ships from entering war zones or from mounting guns for defense. American ships, as soon as the President signs the bill, will soon be armed and carrying supplies to British ports. Sunday night the Navy department announced the capture of a Nazi ship in the "equatorial Atlantic." Yesterday or ten days ago the That ship was disguised as a United States ship and was officially the American Flag. Although her crew attempted to scuttle the ship before it was captured, it is being brought in to port. Thus the undeclared shooting war between the United States and the Axis appears to be increasing in intensity and extent.

Strikes in Defense Industries—The increasing number of strikes (and threat of strikes) in recent weeks has brought a crisis in labor-employer relations in the United States. The result is the decision of the National Mediation Board's ruling early in the week by a 9 to 2 vote by the CIO United Mine Workers Union led by John L. Lewis, that the question directly up to the President and Congress. Washington reports that Congress is in the mood to pass legislation that will mean that the Army may be sent to take over the mines.

The puzzle of matrimony was to Robert Louis Stevenson, not that an inferior conception of issues went on the rocks, but that so many of them made port.

When Miss Thompson and Mr. Lewis made jointly a venture in matrimony which was the second venture of both, a question asked widely was not whether but when, two individualists so rugged would separate.

Tidbits—Ky. Folklore

"NOW"

Among all the bywords that I have heard more seems more universal in extent than "Now." I have questioned people from every part of the nation and have found that all children have used it and in exactly the same way. I suppose that it started by being used to mean literally what it says, as in "You let me alone now." But it soon lost this and acquired a slightly bellicose tone, as if it might have been the invention of the word prohibited by parents or school teachers. Sometimes it did not have any sentence to intensify but appeared alone, torn out of anything to say and was merely explosive.

Here is a typical use of the word. Two children are playing with a ball or other toy. One gets it and keeps it, though he is not the owner. The other one asks for it calmly for a while and then resorts to "Let me have my ball, now." If mildness does not bring it, there often follows a loud and angry appeal to Mammy to "make Jim give me my ball, now." If Mammy is too far away or too busy ironing or washing or cooking, fists come in handy. Diplomacy yields to warfare. Just as if the youngsters were two great and mighty nations acting like small boys.

"What's in a name?" asked Shakespeare. Too much is made of mere words that are supposed to be naughty. Since many such words were under the ban, we had to let our feelings out in some way. I have heard "Now" said in a tone that would make mere profanity sound reverent. There was no punishment evidently for this strong word . . . for as I can recall, hence-forth I have used it myself on occasion, and I received only a little shade or tint of meaning. Only the initiated could know just how profane we were when we said the word.

The same thing could be said for many another harmless byword. Swearing as such was sternly forbidden by parents and by custom. Some people used bywords very much as we use salt and pepper, for seasoning and not to attract attention. But on occasions a thing that was merely "daggemmed" could be so bad that we smaller boys and the women might very well blush with shame for ourselves and for the naughty man who said it. One of our teachers regularly called a boy "honey," when he was on the verge of administering a thrashing. We soon learned when that word was used to expect a scene, one in which the teacher would acquire more power and more respect. Some "honeys" were not very bad, but others were about as bad as blankety-blanks could be in ordinary society.

It is strange, after all, that mere words are expected to express what in the main amount of writing can explain the flavor of the simplest words uttered with passion. If we can ever perfect a simple and inexpensive way of recording all kinds of speech, I want to put down for future reference some of the "Nows" that I still hear whenever I go

THE FARM AND HOME

For economical winter feeding give dairy cows all the roughage they will clean up with a minimum of waste. In addition, feed them grain according to their production, at the rate of approximately a pound of grain to 3 to 6 pounds of milk.

Before buying an electric washing machine, try it out at home. Note its action, ease and quietness of operation, and the action on the clothes. Avoid machines which tend to form clothes into balls or wads.

Drylot rations for hogs in winter can be balanced if supplemented by legume hay, preferably alfalfa, in a rack. Corn, middlings, skimmilk, and hay in a rack make a good ration. Alfalfa leaf meal may be used instead of alfalfa hay.

A warm mash fed about noon each day tends to encourage egg production. About 3 pounds of moistened mash is sufficient for 100 hens. This is not a substitute for dry mash. Pullets are kept in good flesh by feeding liberally on grain.

British Invade Libya Again; Report Gains

Japan-U. S. Negotiations Still On; Germans Advance On Moscow Front As Weather Clears

Japanese diplomats in Washington met formally and informally with Secretary of State Cordell Hull. The Japanese have met in special session and listened to belligerent addresses from members of the ministry and passed emergency appropriations. On Saturday, Mr. Hull met for three hours with representatives of Britain, the Netherlands, Australia, and China to discuss the Japanese-American negotiations. While no official statement has been released, it highly unlikely that the concessions which they have publicly demanded will be accorded to the Japanese.

At dawn Thursday, Nov. 20, British armored divisions crossed the Libyan frontier in force. This offensive, which this column predicted last week, has all the appearance of a decisive campaign, perhaps the beginning of a movement which may end in the invasion of Sicily and Italy. The British have 700,000 men and perhaps as many as 600,000 men engaged, supplied and equipped. Cavalry from tanks and aircraft and trucks shipped from the United States by way of the Red Sea to Egypt in the past six months.

The troops made the frontal attack along the coast road through Halfaya Pass, which is taken Fort Capuzzo on the border and Bardia, the Italian port in eastern Libya. Further south other flanking columns raced westward before encircling northward toward the coast. One column is within sight of the garrison troops at Tobruk which are driving southward after suffering a seven months siege. These two forces have the main road, by which the Axis troops must seek to escape from the trap in which they find themselves under artillery fire. Another column is reported driving ahead for Benghasi, more than 120 miles further west. The real objective of this campaign is believed to be the destruction and capture of all the Axis forces in North Africa. Thus it is expected that if the British succeed quickly in this campaign the drive will continue toward Tripoli, 400 miles west of Benghasi.

On Friday, Marshal Petain of Vichy announced the removal of General Weygand from command of French troops in Tunisia and Algeria as the result of the appointment of General General Alfonse Juin as his successor.

Quail More Plentiful In County Is Report

Fish And Game Club Has Released Many Pairs

As the hunting season got under way this week reports from throughout the county would indicate that the number of quail in this section has increased. Rabbits, however, are not so plentiful it is believed.

The increase in quail is due undoubtedly to efforts of the Fish and Game Club which released nearly 120 pairs year before last, and 100 pairs last year. Weather during the past season has been very favorable for quail, sportsmen report, and in another fact that would point to increase of coveys in this county.

Hunters are again warned by local officials to secure a state wide license if there is any possibility of roaming outside the county. It has also pointed out that a county license, which cost $1 is valid only within the state-wide license.

Game and Fish Club officials urged all sportsmen to comply with the laws of the state in regard to the taking of game.

Historical Places May Be Covered By Water

Members of the Pioneer National Memorial Association, in their annual meeting and luncheon Tuesday at the Lafayette hotel, Lexington, discussed the feasibility of procedure with the proposed inundation of two of the most historical memorial sites in this area by water from dams on the Kentucky and Licking rivers.

If the federal government carried through its plans for constructing dams at Camp Nelson on the Kentucky river and at Falmouth on the Licking river, the Blue Licks monument sites will be covered by water, it was said, by members of the association's authorized Col. Samuel M. Wilson, Lexington, president, to secure definite information from federal engineers as to the construction plans.

Other members of the association present at the meeting were Judge I. B. Ross, this city; Judge Gordon Sulser, Maysville; Mrs. Jouett Taylor Cannon, Frankfort; Mrs. Grant Lilly, Richmond; Dr. J. T. Dorris, Richmond, and C. Frank Dunn, Lexington.

I. B. Ross, Red Cross Chairman, Makes Appeal To Nicholas County Citizens

In a statement released today, I. B. Ross, Chairman of the Nicholas County Chapter American Red Cross, appeals to Nicholas citizens to enroll at once in the membership campaign now under way. As yet the campaign has not been successful. The statement read, "Nicholas County has not as yet reached the half way mark in our goal for eight hundred members. So far we have not done as well as last year in our yearly drive from memberships. We have always been glad to see the way in which our County meets emergencies. We are all very proud indeed of the record which has been established and kept up by the production program of the County; but we must not lose sight of the fact that if we do not reach our goal for membership, our County will not be able to finance our Red Cross Sewing Room, and meet our quota for garments and knitting, as our pro-rata part of membership funds has made this possible for us. I know there who have worked so hard in the production of Red Cross garments do not want to see this happen. All we have to do is to think back upon our record in 1918, and we are now facing an emergency equally as great. Let us not fail to show our American spirit, and keep the Red Cross flag flying high.

"Let every solicitor see every one in his particular territory at once, and make your report at once, and if for any reason a worker does not call upon you, call at the local Red Cross office and take advantage of the opportunity which is yours to become a member. This is the year for every man, woman and child in the County who possibly can to proudly wear a Red Cross membership button."

Food Program Makes History Evans Says

AAA Administrator, Says English Must Have Food To Survive

R. M. EVANS

Food production by American farmers in the months ahead will decide the course of history, R. M. Evans, national AAA war administrator, told an audience of farmers, business men and the Future Farmers of America at the State Fair Grounds in Louisville, Wednesday, November 12.

Evans said that the present strength of Britain in the war was aggressive, but the strength of America's hand at the peace table depend upon the food from farms of the United States, Mr. Evans said.

The AAA administrator has just returned from England where he studied the British food situation.

"Britain never produced more than one-third of her own food needs," Mr. Evans said. "And now even with lend-lease food production stepped up to maximum levels she cannot hold out against Nazi aggression without increased food supplies from America."

Pointing out that this is a time of emergency, Mr. Evans emphasized the importance of statesmanship in labor and in English labor leader Ernest Bevin

Burley Tobacco Growers Co-Operative Association Announces Loan Range; All Higher Than Last Year

Frank C. Taylor, secretary of the Burley Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association, said last week that loan rates of the association this year will average approximately $20 a 100 pounds, $3.65 higher than last year. The loan rates were announced shortly before Mr. Taylor's statement, and showed increases from $1.80 to $9.20 a hundred pounds over the same grades of last year.

The higher loan rates this year will raise the price growers must accept for their tobacco before the farmer is dissatisfied with prices bid by buyers at the warehouses, he may turn it over to the association and receive loans on each grade of his tobacco at the rate announced by the association.

Mr. Taylor also announced the association had completed sale of tobacco it received from members for loans last year. The tobacco Mr. Taylor said, was sold in small lots to several buyers. The association has received about $5,000,000 for tobacco he added.

Directors of the association authorized distribution of final payment to growers of money received from last years tobacco, as a result of the sales. Mr. Taylor said payment would amount to slightly more than 2 cents a pound and would probably be maile before Christmas, but would depend on time required to figure payments by grades.

The association's loan rates for the 1941 crop as announced, are:

Grade	Per Cwt.	Loan Rate
A1L	$40.03	$38.00
A1F	40.00	38.00
A1R	36.03	34.00
A2R	34.00
B1F	35.00	15.00
B2F	31.00	10.00
