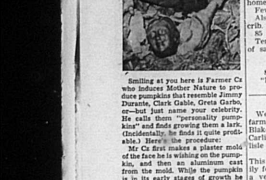
Some Pumpkins!

Pumpkins with faces! Don't you believe it?

Well, it's true.

An agricultural wizard by the name of John Cr (and we do mean Cr) of Madison, Ohio, is actually growing pumpkins that resemble anyone that Farmer Cr chooses to caricature. Take a look!



Smiling at you here is Farmer Cr who induces Mother Nature to produce pumpkins that resemble Jimmy Durante, Clark Gable, Greta Garbo, or—but name your celebrity. He calls them "personality pumpkins" and finds growing them a lark. (Incidentally, he finds it quite profitable.) Here's the procedure:

Mr Cr first makes a plaster mold of the face he is wishing on the pumpkin, and then an aluminum cast from the mold. While the pumpkin is in its early stages of growth he imprisons it in the mold. Nature does the rest. When maturity is reached the mold is removed (as shown above) and Mr. Cr inserts eyes, skillfully tinted, and teeth. The result is striking, if not alarming.

Mr. Cr does not "personalize" all his pumpkins. People still like their pumpkin pie impersonal.

Blossom Time One Night Only

One of the outstanding box office attractions of our day, "Blossom Time," which comes to the Woodland Auditorium, Lexington, Saturday, November 1, at 8.15 p. m., under the local management of Miss Anna Jhanlier Goff, has weathered twenty years of storm and stress to become a treasured classic for music lovers throughout the world.

The world premiere of this operetta, which the Messrs. Shubert introduced to American audiences in 1921, occurred in Vienna shortly before the outbreak of the World War. And despite the tragic events that were soon to follow, the musical proved so popular that it ran almost without interruption throughout the course of the war. Subsequently, it became the favorite operetta of all Europe, surpassing even the record-holding achievements of "The Merry Widow."

The musical story of the life and love of Franz Schubert—played by Everett Marshall, the distinguished baritone formerly with the Metropolitan—"Blossom Time" opened in Boston at the Wilbur Theatre. And the year that the production first played on Broadway produced the unparalleled spectacle of two principal companies playing the same show in two different theatres which were not only in the same street, but were almost directly opposite each other.

This newest production of "Blossom Time" is now on its transcontinental tour, and boasts of a magnificent singing cast, unrivalled in all of the twenty years of its history. Patrick Wing, Marthe Errolle, Frank Hornaday, Driskill Wolfe, Truman Gaige, Joseph Toner, and Betti Davis are among the principals who sing the unforgettable melodies of Franz Schubert, interwoven into the score prepared by Sigmund Romberg.

The anniversary cast also includes Douglas Leavitt, Zella Russell, Harry E. Morton, Barbara Catlon, Bette Oliver, Lyndon Crews, Agnes Cassidy, Irwin Burke, Elliott Robertson and Beth Dean.

Incidentally, "Blossom Time" is one of the few fabulously successful musical productions to have evaded the grasp of Hollywood producers.

Mail orders now to Miss Goff at 441 West Second Street, Lexington, phone 629. The downtown sale will begin in Lafayette Hotel lobby Monday, October 27 at 9 a. m. Tickets are $1.20, $1.78, $2.35, $2.93, including tax. Enclose check and self-addressed stamped envelope for the return of tickets. Make reservations early to secure choice location.

PUBLIC SALE

We will sell at public auction

NOVEMBER 15, 1941

At 10:00 a. m.

the farm of Mrs. Sarah Donovan, which contains 113 acres, with good improvements.

This farm is located 6 miles north of Carlisle on the Maysville and Lexington pike. A full description of this farm will be found in the columns of this paper next week. Also watch for sale bills.

Attention Truck And Bus Owners

Kentucky truck and bus owners were urged today by William B. Blanton, Kentucky Chairman of the Highway Advisory Committee to the War Department, to make complete returns this week in the national defense truck and bus inventory launched by Governor Johnson. Prompt returns will save the expense of further inquiry.

The National Defense Advisory Commission and the War Department have recognized the importance of truck and bus transportation in the national defense program. The Highway Traffic Advisory Committee to the War Department has asked the Federal Works Agency to make a national defense inventory of all trucks, busses, and freight trailers.

The Committee wants to set up a detailed central and regional register of all trucks, busses, and freight trailers, similar to the records already available on railroads, water shipping, and aviation. The information is urgently needed in planning more effective use of highway transportation—for example, in the delivery of military and civilian supplies, in the relief of dock and terminal congestion, in the movement of passenger traffic in case of emergency and in other ways. Questionnaires have been mailed to all truck and bus owners.

Please fill out the card immediately. It will take you less than 10 minutes. The card calls for information on the make of your truck or bus, capacity, kind of body (ash as pickup, panel, platform ,etc.), time of year you most urgently need the vehicle in your own business, whether in an emergency you would be willing to hire or lease it to a Federal Agency, and so on. The information is urgently needed and will be confidential.

After you have filled out the card, put it in the return envelope and mail. It requires no postage.

SIN AND ITS CONSEQUENCES

LESSON TEXT—Galatians 6:7, 8; I John 1:5-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.—I John 1:9.

Sin is an appalling reality, hideous and horrible in itself, and hateful with it the gravest consequences both in this life and in the life to come. Man does not find it pleasant to face that fact, and so he makes light of sin and even may go so far as to deny its existence. Obviously such an expedient does nothing to solve the difficulty or to meet the gnawing distress of a heart facing and fearing the judgment of God.

Far better to meet the reality of it, admit its awfulness, and seek God's way of full deliverance, by which came into the world when man listened to Satan and disobeyed God in the Garden of Eden, has gone on to sear and to mark all mankind. We see that

I. Sin Brings Corruption (Gal. 6: 7, 8).

Seedtime is followed by harvest. This is the law of nature, the law of God. The farmer who sowed wheat in the spring looked for wheat when the harvest time came. The same principle holds in the spiritual realm. Just as the man who yields to the Spirit reaps eternal life, the one who sows to the flesh reaps corruption, and death.

A life of self-indulgence (which is sowing to the flesh) brings moral decay. The sensuous life is given to desire, and it "bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death" (James 1:14, 15). This death is spiritual, bringing separation from God, loss of fellowship and communion with Him. Spiritual death as well as physical death is the curse upon mankind through Adam's sin.

II. Sin Leaves Darkness (I John 1:5-7).

There is not a bit of darkness in God. He is light. When Jesus came into the world, He came as the Light of the World. But "men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved" (John 3:17-21).

The corollary of that truth is that a man who says he has fellowship with God, but continues to walk in darkness, brands himself a liar (v. 6). Compare Revelation 21:27-28 for what God thinks of liars.

The light still shines, and the one who is walking in darkness has only to step over into the light (v. 7) where he will find fellowship with all God's people and know the cleansing of the blood of the Son of God.

III. Sin Is an Undeniable Fact (I John 1:8-10).

It seems impossible that a man who knows himself and knows the life he lives would ever deny sin, for it is one of the most evident of all facts. Yet men have denied it, or sought to explain it away, calling it error, or a "fall upward," or a step in man's development, or the evidence of man's self-consciousness and desire to learn.

There is no hope for a man as long as he assumes such an attitude, for he not only lies himself, but he makes God a liar. He denies the truth of God's Word about sin, makes meaningless or wicked God's dealings with sin, and reveals that God's Word is not in him. Those who make such statements declare that they do not belong to God and do not accept His Word. It is evident that they ought never to be permitted to teach such things in the church, or in the name of Christianity.

IV. Sin Calls for a Saviour (I John 2:1-6).

Christ the propitiation, the mercy-seat covering for our sins, is the only Saviour. He paid the price, and made it possible for God to be just and at the same time a justifier of the ungodly. The sinner needs such a Saviour.

Sin in the life of the believer also calls for a Saviour, one who will cleanse us (1:9) and who will in His own blessed name plead our cause "if we sin." He is our Advocate (2:1) pleading His righteousness in our behalf when we do fail.

This sot mean that we may then become indifferent or careless about sin. If we say we know Him, and do not keep His commandments, we lie about our professed relation to Him. The mark of a true child is a spirit of obedience.

God's children prove their love to Him by keeping His commandments. Talking about our devotion to Him, giving our service for Him, or sacrificing for His cause mean nothing if we do not obey Him. We must pile evidence upon evidence of our untruthfulness by making claims and doing things which are negated by our disobedience.

Dispelling The Fog

By Charles Michelson Director of Publicity, Democratic National Committee

Colonel Lindbergh has discovered a new peril. In a recent address he warned the people of the United States that there might be no Congressional elections next year.

He was quite serious about it. He gave no specifications as to how the calamity would or could be brought about except to infer that the President's exercising his prerogatives as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy was a logical prelude for ending the existence of Congress.

It so happens that the National Legislature is ordered by the Constitution to meet at noon on the third day of each January unless it selects another day. The President has no more to do with it than the mayor of Oshkosh. The legislatures of the various States determine when and how Congressmen shall be elected. The President has the right to vote for the candidate from his own Congressional district, like any other citizen, but that is his limit.

Congress can impeach the President, the President can't impeach Congress. The President can call Congress in special session but he can't adjourn it, except in the unlikely instance of a deadlock between the two Houses on adjournment date, when the Chief Executive may fix the time. As neither House can adjourn without consent of the other, the exception simply means that unless the two Chambers want to end a session, but cannot agree on a specific time, the President can break that deadlock.

It would be interesting if the Lindbergh aviator would indicate what steps a President might take to prevent a Congressional election. That has been no interruption of the normal process of voting for National Legislature for the century and a half of our republic's existence, though every President who confronted an emergency was accused of usurping power. Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson were each in turn charged with dictatorial aggression on Congressional prerogatives, but curiously enough it never occurred to one of these to eliminate Congress.

It is part of the isolationist creed to regard every accord of a majority of the legislative branch of the government with the President's policies as evidence of his domination. Their theory is that every supporter of the Chief Executive is a rubber stamp, and every opponent is a patriot. How they classify the in-and-outers who have been for some of the administration measures and against others, is not disclosed.

The menace of an extinguished Congress does not seem to have affected the leaders of the two big parties. They are going ahead in the same old tried way of preparing for the campaign, organizing the districts and staking the prospective candidates to arguments. The isolationist wing of the G. O. P. is trying to drive their party into an imlorsement of the philosophy that America's safety lies in doing nothing. The Willkie-Wadsworth type of leadership is fulminating the other way about, and the titular boss—National Chairman Joe Martin—is vibrating between the poles, talking about the shortcomings of the Democratic administration—just as if there were no emergency—and therefore the election of a Republican Congress is demanded.

Another threat—or promise—was Lindbergh's wailing that the indicated speech might be his last because he feared for the freedom of speech. He based this statement, apparently, on the difficulties he has had occasionally in getting a hall in some communities. That is on a par with another complaint, that the newspapers gave greater prominence to anti-isolationist views than to those on his side. So the newspaper stories of appeasers' speeches being furnished, with the free frank of Congressmen, to organizations linked with Nazi propaganda, are hailed as evidence of "smearing" of their spokesmen. The corollary of that extraordinary principle is that freedom of speech not only involves the right of orators to voice their opinions but implies that audiences should be furnished by municipalities to listen to them. The liberty of the press, according to the same doctrine, embraces the obligation of the publications to put before their readers matters which the publishers may not consider news of consequence or as being conducive to the welfare of the country. The thought is on a par with that which produced the grotesque sub-Senate Committee's effort to show that the movies were warmongering because they put on the screen what they thought their audiences wanted to see, and which would bring the biggest custom to their show houses.

Actually, of course, the opponents of the President's foreign policy will continue with our hindrance, to use whatever radio time they require, and to keep up their vituperation as to the President's aims and purposes. They will keep on hailing his defense measures as simply elements in a plan and plot to get us into war.

Those measures have not only succeeded in keeping us out of the slaughter and other horrors of the trans-oceanic struggle for two years, but have resulted in putting this country on a basis of defense against any possible eventuality. The only way we can be dragged into the fury is by the Hitler gangsters making war on us. If he were timorous about this two years ago, he knows it would be a more desperate venture now. The defense of England and the resistance of Russia—made possible largely by American supply efforts—insures that Hitler will do nothing more than assassinate shipping until, or unless, he has conquered England and Russia.

Meanwhile, Congress will continue to function as usual; the newspapers will go right on printing what they please; the movies will found their pictures on what they think the public wants; and Colonel Lindbergh will still be delivering his farewell address.

MONEY TALKS

By Frederick W. Stamm, Economist and Director of Adult Education, University of Louisville

The seriousness of raw material shortages at this time has been indicated by Floyd B. Odlum of the Office of Production Management. Mr. Odlum pointed out that 20,000 small firms might be shut down during the defense emergency because of the lack of raw material. Since many of these manufacturers are in small towns, you can see the widespread unemployment it will cause in these communities.

Both Mr. Odlum and a "small business defense committee" of Congress are holding meeting throughout the country to see what can be done to keep open these plants. In Columbus, Ohio, over 300 manufacturers and dealers told the defense committee they would have to close their businesses unless they could get a "reasonable allocation" of metals, ethyl alcohol, cottons, woolens and other raw materials.

If there are small businesses in your community which are having difficulty in securing raw materials, they should get in touch with the Office of Production Management. This office is anxious to keep small industry alive, and it may be that it can aid you in securing defense contracts and raw materials. It may pay each of you to find out where regional meetings of the OPM are being held and attend them. You can then present your problem and also indicate what type of work your plant can do and how you can fit into the defense program. Immediate investigation of these problems may bring thousands of dollars to your community in defense contracts later on. If you don't act, some other communities will, and they will receive the benefit. You cannot afford to wait.

"In the South today there are fewer acres under cultivation than in Civil War days, but twice the number of families are trying to make a living on them."—Dr. W. W. Alexander, administrator Farm Security Administration.

What Do You Know About Beer? . . . No. 2 of a Series

HOW MANY JOBS IN KENTUCKY'S BEER INDUSTRY?

A.: More than 15,000 people hold jobs in this state's legal beer industry!

Q.: What does that amount to in dollars and cents?

A.: $10,000,000 every year.

Q.: What does this mean to Kentucky's workers?

A.: Steady jobs, good pay, food and clothing, comfort and security—for about 50,000 Kentuckians.

Q.: What is the beer industry doing to protect these benefits?

A.: This committee cooperates with law enforcement officials to keep retail beer outlets wholesome. We do not and will not tolerate law violations by a few undesirable beer outlets.

Q.: Is this program getting results?

A.: Here they are for the past two years:
23 retail licenses revoked
7 beer licenses suspended
2 places padlocked forever
2 license applications refused

This record of action resulted from our recommendations to law enforcement officers.

YOU CAN HELP by buying your beer in law-abiding, orderly places, and by boycoting beer dealers who break the law.
