

FDR Urges Increased Food Production

President Roosevelt has given his wholehearted approval to the increased production of food by American farmers.

"Outlining his views in a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, the Chief Executive said that food is a vital weapon in the fight against Hitlerism."

"Mr. Roosevelt's letter said that the food of the present war must be produced in a way that will insure the food of the future."

Why Blame Beer?

Occasionally, beer is blamed for unwholesome conditions, anti-social practices or other abuses in a handful of law-breaking taverns.

ture is meeting the situation much more satisfactorily by increasing production in an orderly way in that our own needs and the needs of our friends can be met without causing scarcity or unduly high prices.

Planning Now For Post-War Economy

In a pamphlet entitled "After-Defense-War," the National Industrial Conference Board says on public opinion polls agree to increase production of food and other necessities in the event of a post-defense emergency is over.

"The Board stated that the present emergency is over. The Board has made a study of the post-defense period, and the results are in its mind, the Board said."

"I know you will not hesitate to increase production of vital necessities to the extent necessary to meet the needs of the present emergency and prospective emergencies of the future."

"We must plan to do this without crippling work in other branches of the economy."
