FROM OUR READERS

Carlisle, Ky.
August 25, 1942

Editor, The Mercury,
Carlisle, Ky.

After reading the editorial article on the cutting of tobacco allotted by Dr. Jeffrey and signed by Mr. Tom Heard on May the 28th, I recalled some observations made last week by Mr. Heard's son, Jimmie, on a visit to our home. Jimmie has been a good observer from a boy's standpoint since the loss of the finger in the corn sheller accident.

It is my thought that, due to the shortage of help and labor, there is a lack of balance in the spending of money of the tobacco plants so that while the major portion of the plant is not known to be cut, it is to the best advantage to cut the stalk "bottom" and leave this emblem to be marketed. I did this season and for many years past, and am wondering if some one could profit from following, at least in part, the northern method of "priming" to save the valuable leaves, many of which are now left in the field. If these leaves were primed (pulled) it would result in a shorter plant and be better for the plant. It would admit freer circulation of air throughout the body of the plant, and I feel sure that they begin to deteriorate, make valuable tobacco and not sell. Those leaves, if handled carefully. However, if left on the plant until they not put there, they do no good.

Sincerely,
Arthur Mullikin

Dear Sir:

After reading your last issue and thinking one the remarks made concerning the coming August election I felt a few words of sure suggestion to make. I pointed out we now have a number of our boys in the armed service and their wishes should carry weight, especially at this time. The last Option election showed a wet plurality of some 230 votes.

Now I am fully aware that absentee voting is not now permitted, but I think an inquiry into our fighting men's desires should be made at this time. I suggest that the Mercury secure the addresses of our fighting boys and conduct a poll or straw vote among them. A post card would serve as a soldier's ballot vote and I think we would all feel better if we voted the desires of our boys afield.

Speaking of Cap Fulton, he is terribly concerned about little George Griffin.

Big George and Cap play pool for cash and Cap says that George plays too much, but I reckon it's about a tie because they usually play one another.

Anyway, like Crouch, who narrowly missed jury duty the other day, offered to take little George Griffin about away three, for a walk. He walked him from George's store down to Lane Martin's garage and back again.

Has said that when they got back, that little George only stopped at one door. When they got even with the pool room, he threw down his Sears man book and started into the billiard room. Has had to grab him and pull him back.

Cap saw the whole business and he has been shaking his head a lot recently. Cap is over little George's outlook on life.

Just like his daddy, he mourns.

Names of Men in Next Call Released Here

Group Will Leave Here September 16 for Induction into Army

The names of 31 of the 33 men who will be called on for physical examinations preparatory to induction into the Army of the United States were released here this week at the office of the Nicholas county draft board.

It was also announced that the men will leave Carlisle on the morning of September 16 for Ft. Thomas where they will be given their examinations and if passed there, inducted immediately. Regulations now give the men a 11 day furlough to wind up their personal affairs if they wish it.

The September call will mean that nearly 250 men will have been called since January 1 and war now in progress. The Draft Board revealed.

The Board was able to discover only the names of the 31 using that the other two names will be added later.

The list, as released, included the names of Walter Lawrence, Arnold Houston Bell, Edgar Lee Hamm, Dorsie Hinkle Trout, volunteer; Marion Clay Shrout, Clyde Tipton Crawford, Willard O. Doyle, John Parker Ross, James Nathaniel Bailey, Marion Smith Banta, Luther Edmond Bach, Robert Reynolds Pryor, Frederick William C. Livingood, Paul Nathan Dorton, John Dennis Conn.

There has been a lot written in the public prints about Mrs. Roosevelt, her travels, her many activities, and her Day. Of course, she has written quite a few pieces for the public prints herself, not the least of which has been her daily column, "My Day."

For a long time it seemed that she was doing a splendid job and followed to grow up, and that then all five of them should be allowed to be the wife which Mrs. R. had been setting.

Her daily newspaper column, the My Day piece, has been the start of more remarks than anything else since the Ford Model T car.

Three or four years ago, some group of women, DAR's I suspect, came up with a resolution putting them on record as favoring Miss Dorothy Thompson, another columnist who writes her day but has only three worth writing about each week, for the next President of the United States. That resolution came before any draft which so depleted the nation of manpower that it may be necessary to place women in the high government posts before this thing is over.

Anyway, somebody asked Shirclair Lewis, the famous novelist and Miss Thompson's husband, what he thought of the idea.

"It would," he declared, "be simply ducky. If they'll only let me write My Day."

But through all this Mrs. Roosevelt has moved with a sereneness that masks any ill feelings she may have toward her tormenters. If she ignites

New Excuse for Non-Payment of Fine; Doesn't Trust Officials

A new excuse for not paying a fine bobbed up in Carlisle Tuesday when Judge Ed Patterson, when it was related that a man who was in arrears had been burdened with the idea that he couldn't trust paying his money to just anybody in and around the City Building.

The court had apparently adjourned and Police Judge Herdy Myers was preparing to step off the bench after levying fines on two men who had been convicted of run-of-the-mine Saturday night drunkenness.

The night Policeman Leonard Cassidy stepped forward.

"Your honor," the portly is hardly the word for it officer addressed the bench, "there are two defendants that I cited to appear here this afternoon who aren't here."

"That so?" Judge Myers looked down over his glasses.

"Yessir," said Cassidy, "there was Jim McCarthy and a boy named Willoughby. They were running around here Sunday morning in an old car about 3 o'clock and I told them to be up here."

"Tell us about it," his honor prompted.

"Well, these fellows were riding around and they were down about Dorsey avenue," Cassidy related.

"I stopped them and asked them what about their lights and they said they just went out before I came up. Then I asked them where they had been and they said out in the country at a store, but they never did say what store was

Soil Building Program Given

Plans for 1943 Under Conservation Act Announced by Committee

The soil-building or production phase of the 1943 program have been announced. J. Berry Burnam, Nicholas ACP clerk, said yesterday. The program is to be divided into two closely related yet separate parts, he said, one being the Production Practice and Payments, corresponding to the Soil Conservation and Building Program of last years; the other a production-for-war crops and commodities, which will be announced at a later date.

At this time, it is not known how many crops and commodities will fit into the war production program nor the conditions upon which production payments will be made. It is probable, however, that this phase of the program will be much more extensive than the special crops program of the past. For the 1943 program the earning of crop and commodity production payments will not be contingent upon soil conservation practice payments, he said.

Taylor Completes Defense Course

Graduation of Rev. Estal L. Taylor, Nicholas County Chairman of Civilian Defense, from the fifth War Department Civilian Protective Service School in August 9 to 20 at Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., was announced today by Dan P. Moore, Director of the Fifth Region of the Office of Civilian Defense.

Rev. Taylor is Minister of the Carlisle Christian church and serves at Christianist street. He was a member of a class of civilian defense commanders, lawyers, and coordinators. He will use information received at the school in organizing and setting up the county's civilian defense program.

He is the first Carlisle resident to graduate from the school, which included training in the operation of a control center, gas defense, organization of the Citizen's Defense Corps, camouflage, incendiary bombs, and identification of common war gases.

Similar courses will start at the school on September 6, September 20, October 4 and October 18. Persons interested in attending these or later sessions can obtain details through the Nicholas County Civilian Defense Council.

Reverend Taylor Resigns; to Take Indiana Church

Christian Minister Will Return to Fortville on November 1

Rev. Estal Taylor, for the past four years pastor of the Carlisle Christian church, Sunday submitted his resignation to the church's board of deacons and announced his intention of returning to the pastorate he held before coming here —that at the Fortville, Indiana, Christian church.

The Rev. Mr. Taylor's action, coming as a stunning blow to a community in which he has been one of the outstanding civic leaders, will be effective as of November 1, at which time he plans to resume his former post in Fortville.

Came Here In 1938

A native of Indiana, Mr. Taylor was graduated at Butler University, and prior to his eight years spent in Fortville he held pastorates in Indianapolis.

He and Mrs. Taylor came to Carlisle in February, 1938.

During his years here, the Reverend Mr. Taylor has served as chairman of the Nicholas County Tuberculosis Associa tion and as chairman of the Civil Defense Council, both posts which he now holds.

He has also been active in church work, and is at present chaplain of the Carlisle Lodge, No. 65, F. and A. M. He is a member of the Carlisle Young Business Men's Club.

Mrs. Taylor, an outstanding religious leader in her own right, has directed the Christian church since she and her husband moved here, and has taught music in the Nicholas county school system.

Rev. Taylor's resignation was accepted Sunday by the deacon's group after he had made known wishes in the matter known, and he announced that he would leave on the November 1 date.

Honor Roll to Be Placed Here

Board Bearing Names of Men in Service to be Built in Court Yard

A large slab, bearing the names of Nicholas county boys who have entered the armed service in this war, will be placed on the lawn of the court house within the next few days, probably sponsored by the Carlisle Young Business Men's club, it was learned here yesterday.

The slab, which will probably be eight by 15 feet, will be made of lumber, and plans are afoot to enlist the services of members of the club to assist in building it in one afternoon. It will be illuminated, so that it can be seen at night.

The need for such an Honor Roll display has been felt here for sometime, but it was made possible only when the club indicated that it would sponsor its building.

Plans call for the structure to be built of lumber, its surface to be of flooring and a box like frame to go all the way around it. It will then be painted white, and the names of the men will be put on in color.

After its erection, a formal unveiling will be held, with some county woman who has a son, or sons, in service to draw back the curtain. A program and definite date for the unveiling will be announced at a later date, but it was indicated that it will be in the very near future.

Condition Same

No change was noticed in the condition of Sam R. Veach, Carlisle business man, who has been ill at his home for the past week.

Seventeen Hundred Pounds of Scrap Was Gathered Saturday; That's All

(By Gibson Prather)

Seventeen hundred pounds of scrap iron were collected at the Junk Rally here Saturday.

Seventeen hundred pounds.

That was all.

And on Saturday morning three persons, a boy, a girl, and an old woman, stopped in front of the Nicholas county draft board and anxiously scanned the list of the next group of draftees to leave Nicholas.

The boy was carrying a tire, so worn that it wouldn't have been looked at with the thought of use a year ago.

They walked away, the women shaking their heads, the boy stoutly telling them that it was all right, he was ready to go.

It was War. Come to Nicholas county.

And there were seventeen hundred miserable pounds of scrap iron received here that day. Not the weight of three good sized stoves. Seventeen hundred—

And on Monday morning a crowd collected about the Carlisle Bus Depot. There was a group of men leaving that morning, their 14 day furlough ended. Destination? Unknown, after a brief stop at Fort Thomas.

Maybe the continent of Australia. Maybe England. Maybe Africa.

There were few tears, but there was a feeling of sadness. It was all over the place.

And on Saturday, seventeen hundred pounds of scrap, less than can be loaded into two automobiles, were collected—

And on that same Saturday, a woman got a cablegram from her husband, who had been in the Army less than six weeks. She thought him in Texas. He is in England. After six weeks.

And there were seventeen hundred—

But what the hell? This is Kentucky. This is Carlisle. This is Nicholas county.

Or is it? Isn't Kentucky in Africa? Isn't Carlisle expanded, her limits moved to Ireland? Isn't there a part of Nicholas in Australia?

Seventeen hundred pounds—

Friday Last Day to Register

Lists to Close Before November Election or Local Option Vote

A last warning to ineligible voters was issued here this week by John F. Suzz, Nicholas county clerk, who announced that Friday midnight, September 4, is the last day a person may register to become eligible to participate in the November general election or in the coming local option election on October 3.

"The registrations have been coming in slowly," Mr. Suzz said, "and I know that there are many persons in the county who are not now eligible to vote but who could become eligible by registering."

Persons who have moved into the county, persons who have moved from one precinct or those who will be 21 before the November election are eligible to register, he pointed out, provided those who have moved have been in the county or precinct the time required by statute.

If County Fight Loses, Will Take Carlisle Ballot

A Dry mass meeting served notice Monday night that if the coming local option election does not bring county wide prohibition that they will immediately call for a vote in Carlisle proper in an effort to outlaw the sale of intoxicating liquors within the city limits.

The resolution, passed without discussion, was offered by Rev. C. A. Swagger, who told the group that "it has been the rural sections which have failed in the past in the voting out of liquor."

"Can Win Here"

"We know that we can vote it out in Carlisle," Mr. Swagger, newly reappointed district superintendent of the Methodist church asserted, "and I think we should serve notice on the entire county that we will call for such an election in the event the county doesn't go dry. And I think we should let the whole county know that the second election will be paid for by the taxpayers all over the county, not just in the precincts where the election is held."

His motion was then passed by a unanimous vote, although Rev. G. C. Tanner and O. R. Gaffin objected finger on floor to the statement that the "county has failed in the past."

Their statements came after the vote was taken, and there was no attempt to revive the issue or to cancel the move.

The meeting, attended by 83 persons from all parts of the county who are interested in the Dry movement, was held in the Christian church with Dr. G. C. Cowan, president of the Dry organization, presiding.

Fleming Men Heard

Talks were made by Marvin McIntyre, Flemingsburg attorney, and Rev. W. O. Pryor, Flemingsburg Presbyterian minister, who were leaders in their own county in the last local option vote taken there. The latter urged that Fleming by a three to one majority, both speakers stressed the importance of organizational work.

Principal speaker was A. C. Ellis, Paris, veteran Dry leader, who advised the group upon the legal matters of how things it would tell the rural sections that they must share in the payment of voting Carlisle into the dry column, if the October election is lost, and it would also meet the argument in the rural sections that residents there would rather their liquor establishments be concentrated in the city, rather than spread to the rural areas, rather than have licensed establishments or through bootlegging.
