PUBLIC SALE

7 Acre Bluegrass Baby Farm

SATURDAY, JAN. 31, 1942

BEGINNING AT 9:00 A. M.

Sale will be held on the premises on the Youngs Mill Pike just 1 mile off the Jacktown pike and in the Little Rock section of Nicholas County. This farm is just 8 miles west of Carlisle and 10 miles east of Paris.

This little 7 acre farm is in an excellent community and is mostly good Hinkston bottom soil. It has everything that water supplies, and is well fenced.

The buildings consist of a good 4 room house, a 2 acre tobacco barn, and several other small buildings. It is on a good country road and is easily accessible to all leading livestock and tobacco markets as well as shopping and school facilities.

This little farm has a tobacco base of approximately 1 acre and is located in a farming section where it is very easy for one-fourth employment at any time. Go and look it over.

Terms made known on date of sale.

"Parsley" planted in your window box during the winter provides fresh garnish for your table.

Before starting a meal, lay several thicknesses of newspaper in the sink, making a hole in them for the drain. Then put in all the black pots and pans to soak and the sink will not be coated with grease, which makes it difficult to clean.

CONTRADICTORY SUPERSTITIONS

One of the oddities of superstitions is that they are often contradictory, even in the same neighborhood or the same family. Take the matter of finding a pin, for instance. Some people say that if the point is toward you, it is a sign of good luck; others declare that it is always a sign of bad luck. Some people whom I have seen would not dare to pick up a pin with the point toward them but would walk around to the side or the head.

One of my former students, now an agriculture teacher in Hopkinsville, Kentucky, has sent me a list of contradictory superstitions that he has observed, chiefly in the mountains. Here are some of them:

1. When a cat is scratching a new quilt, it is good luck, say some, bad luck according to others, for it is jump out by a young lady.

2. If your shoestring comes untied, your sweetheart is thinking of you. If it comes unwrapped, they are thinking of her.

3. If your shoestring comes untied, your sweetheart loves you, or hates you.

4. If your eyebrows meet, you will be rich, or you cannot be trusted, or you have a jealous disposition, or you have a jealous disposition. Apparently it is pretty risky to have abundant eyebrows, unless you happen to be the one who thereby acquires wealth.

5. If your right hand itches, you will shake hands with a stranger or an old friend.

6. If you sneeze three times before breakfast on Sunday morning, three of your friends will die before the week is out, or else you will have good luck.

7. When you move into a new house, do not take salt in first. Another group hold that salt bring distress.

Cooperative Loan Group Sets Annual Meeting Date

Farm members of the Flemingsburg Production Credit Association will hold their annual meeting on Saturday, February 14, in Flemingsburg.

Mr. Howard Irvin, Nicholas county representative for the association, reports that this year's annual meeting is to be held in the city school auditorium. The all day session is scheduled to start at 10:00 a.m.

Our board of directors, states Howard Irvin, "has been busy lining up an important and interesting program for the annual meeting. The events of the past few weeks have impressed upon association members the work that they will be expected to do under the Food for Freedom program. And this year's annual meeting gives us the opportunity to plan future development of the Flemingsburg Production Credit Association as a cooperative organization that will supply credit to those who farm for national defense."

A feature of the annual meeting will be election of directors who will guide the activities of the cooperative in their territory during the coming year.

The annual meeting of members of the organization will be served on the day of the meeting by Flemingsburg F. F. A. in the City School Building.

Farmers To Meet Food Increases

A survey made under the direction of the State Agricultural Defense Board indicates that Kentucky farmers will meet maximum increases in food production asked by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard at the meeting of the state survey was made by J. T. Mayhew, acting chairman of the board.

Members of county and community AAA committees visited 99,151 farmers in making the canvass. A summary of the results show that increases asked in milk, vegetables, pork, beef, and poultry products will be met in every instance.

Milk production, for instance, will be increased by 20 per cent under 1941. Kentucky production last year totaled 865,000,000 pounds, and figures indicated they will produce 247,558,791 gallons this year. Vegetable production will be increased by 34 per cent, according to the survey, with 123,522 head raised this year compared to 1,577,724 head raised last year. Egg production will be upped 32 per cent, or from 54,831,944 dozens last year to 70,961,404 dozens this year. Beef cattle marketings will be increased from 594,384 head in 1941 to 717,735 head this year.

Plant Shutdown Changes Mode Of Travel

Conversion of automobile plants to all-out arms production is to bring a gradual, but very real, change in the pattern of American life.

Production of passenger cars will stop the end of this month. The 200,000 cars that will be turned out, plus the 450,000 now in the hands of dealers, will be all the new cars available until the war ends, in contrast to the 3,750,000 passenger automobiles produced in 1941 alone. Those of the 650,000 new cars which will be available to civilians are to be rationed strictly.

From now on the number of passenger cars in use will drop. The decline will be scarcely noticeable for some months, since registered motor vehicles, now at the record level of 33,750,000 include 25,750,000 passenger cars. Also, the annual rate at which vehicles are scrapped can be cut from last year's figure of 2,600,000 to about 1,500,000. In spreading years the rate will be higher, as cars which have served past their normal time finally wear out. Almost a third of the autos now in service are more than seven years old.

From present indications there will be enough replacement parts to keep up the cars in use, but the shortage of tires, however, may prevent or curtail the operation of many automobiles otherwise in running condition.

In the future people will stay closer to their homes, and look to local trade centers, stores and amusement places. Local theaters will fill out. For different groups, these trends are apparent:

In addition to doubling up on private cars, people will depend more on commercial busses with no New busses will continue to be manufactured, but demand will outrun production. The long decline of the trolley industry is being arrested. All over the country discarded streetcars are being overhauled for service. Plans to pull up tracks have been abandoned, and more tracks are being laid. More people will ride bicycles. Bicycle sales are now relatively of reclaimed rubber and are not rationed.

Most establishments that make retail deliveries will not be able to do for new cars or tires. Some observers see economic reform in a byproduct of war here—a deliberate move to end a system whereby as many as four organizations deliver similar products over the same route. For such service some move toward return to horse-drawn vehicles already being made. The Office of Price Production Management already is urging dairies to deliver milk to homes on every other day basis.

Taxicab operators, who are not eligible for new tires, also can hope only to get secondhand cars when their short-lived vehicles wear out.

Here, as in the cities, people will be increasingly dependent on mass transportation. Joint use of private automobiles and, if distances are not too great, bicycles. In different localities, plans already are being made for augmenting or reviving electric and steam commuter services.

Ultimately, some reversal of the population shift, away from the center of cities may result.

Farmers, in case of need, can expect to get tires for implements, and trucks to haul their products to town. But any trucks used for deliveries to individual consumers are not eligible. Also, farmers will not be able to get new passenger cars, even though they depend on the automobile for business contacts and for getting supplies from town.

Ordinary paper plates about 10 inches in diameter make excellent bases for bird cages.

The cutting blade of a kitchen food chopper can often be sharpened by slicing a cake of abrasive hand soap and running it through the chopper.

NEW SELECTEES

It needed only reading to fathom what was behind that war department announcement of the purchase of 700,000,000 feet of lumber and 140,000 kegs of nails—the biggest order of its kind in U. S. history.

The materials are for the construction of numerous new army cantonments and the enlargement of existing ones.

Army strength, down to 1,600,000 after the demobilization of 28 to 35 year olds last fall, is due for a big increase—at least another 1,000,000 before the next draft lottery following the February 16 registration of men between 21 and 44.

An estimated 24,000,000 will register next month, and on the basis of past experience only about 5 per cent will be rated 1-A; that is, subject to immediate call. Heretofore the army has inducted only men in good physical condition, with no dependents and not engaged in "essential" production.

However, because the need for military manpower develops, 1-A standards will be lowered to accept those thousands of 1-B, 2-A, and 2-B referees by pre-war standards will be called up.

For the present, the army still is placing emphasis on youth. The February 16 registration is expected to list many thousand 18 and 19 youngsters and the largest proportion of new selectees will come from this group. Registrants in the 36 to 44 group will have to pass a test condition to get in the army at this time.

However, big scale inductions from this age group can be expected by fall, particularly those with no dependents and with previous military service.

For the present the army will take its older-age recruits from the 28 to 35 year old group, exempting those because of dependency or defense work.

REDDY CHATTER

Ordnance is the hauchtiest and most hide-bound branch of the army. So much so that it is often the object of much bitter private criticism by civilians and officers. But there is one notable exception to this Ordnance rule. He is William Van Antwerp Kemp, a tall, hawky, dynamic engineer, who made a big success in private business and volunteered his services when the national emergency arose. Since then, as an Ammunition division executive, he has been a thorn in the flesh of many a stuffed shirt.

There are many tales of Kemp's unconventional methods. The latest is one of the best.

Asked by a general to suggest a standard for a new type of ammunition plant about to begin production, Kemp called in a civilian expert who had been loaned to the British to build a plant in England.

He said: "Build me the same job over there by now," said Kemp.

"If he is, I'll fire him," was the reply.

From the British, Kemp learned the expert had completed his work and was available. So Kemp picked up a phone and told the man to get busy.

"I used to talk to the guy," he said, "who gets guys back from England."

There was a gasp, but the operator switched Kemp to someone who asked him who he was and what he wanted.

"I'm Kemp of Army Ordnance," he said. "There's a guy in England we want to run an ammunition plant for us. Get him back here right away, will you?"

Six days later the expert reported to Kemp and left for his new job.

A few days later Kemp was again summoned Kemp, asked what had been done about his request.

"It's all taken care of, general," said Kemp. "He's been on the job at the plant ten days."

"How did you get him back here so fast?"

"No trouble. I just called up the state department, asked the guy who gets guys back here and he arranged it."

"Kemp," said the general severely, "do you know that guy in the state department well?"

"No, sir."

"He was the undersecretary of state."

Note: Kemp has persistently refused to accept an army commission. Finally, pressed by the general for the reason, he retorted: "Some day I may want to come in here and blow up. If I do, as an officer you could court-martial me. But as a civilian, all you can do is fire me. I'm remaining a civilian."

JAP SCHOOL LESSONS

After three years' probing of subversive activities, Texas Democratic Rep. Martin Dies, but the other day the rangy Texan hit on a discovery that took his breath away.

His committee has been making a sweeping inquiry of Jap fifth-columning on the West coast, including subversive teaching in Japanese language schools located all over southern California. Investigators found that from the primary grades up students in these schools are indoctrinated with militarism and the ideology of their Jap ancestors.

Going To The Army?
Well, Here's Why!

If you're in the draft age limit and wondering just what the government intends to do after the next draft lottery in February, read the Washington Merry Go Round colum in the February today. Pearson and Allen, writers of the col'm, give you news before it makes the headlines.

Foreign Ministers Reach Agreement On Resolutions

Report Released On Findings Of Investigation Board

On Saturday the Conference of American Foreign ministers finally reached agreement upon resolutions recommending that all the American Republics formally break off relations with the Axis countries. While it had been hoped that all the republics, by a joint resolution, would sever relations at once by a resolution adopted at Rio de Janeiro, Chili and Argentina opposed taking that action at once. However, they won their point, and Bolivia, Chili, Argentina and Ecuador have been reported as already having broken off relations with the enemies of the United States. It is expected that they too will in so soon.

President Roosevelt released on Saturday the report of the findings by the investigating board headed by Associate Justice Owen D. Roberts of the United States Supreme Court into the attack on Admiral Hasband Edward Kimmel and General Short on the Hawaiian islands December 7. The report seems to lay the blame for the disastrous defeat at Pearl Harbor directly on the shoulders of the army and navy commanders there. The report seems to say the two officers did not cooperate with each other nor assure themselves that the other was taking adequate precautions. The report seems to lay the blame for the disastrous defeat at Pearl Harbor directly on the shoulders of the army and navy commanders there. The report seems to say the two officers did not cooperate with each other nor assure themselves that the other was taking adequate precautions against attack. However, they were not charged directly with dereliction of duty. In spite of the fact that they had received adequate warning from Washington to be on the alert for a possible air attack, they failed to have headed them off. They did not cooperate with one another
