Letters from OUR BOYS in the SERVICE

Camp Crowder, Mo.
Wednesday, June 24, 1942

Dear Sir,

I am writing a few lines that I want you to print in the paper if possible.

I am just one of the boys that was drafted from Nicholas County and I am proud of it. The reason I didn't enlist sooner is because I was scared I wasn't physically fit and I didn't want to go through it. By it I mean the examination. There is one thing I can say that I am no "slacker" and I won't have that name when I get out. The only thing the army does for you is try to make a man of you if possible.

They have pulled all my teeth and outside of that they said I was perfect. I know I wasn't thought of as a gentleman around Carlisle and I wasn't an angel, but I am very independent and try to live my own life. I am proud that I can be of service to Uncle Sam instead of trying my best to be the opposite. If you know what I mean. What I am trying to say is if I go to the dentist or doctor here I can't say "I'll give you a month's pay not to pull that tooth or put me in the hospital."

I do hope the people in Carlisle realize there is a war and will do their part to keep us going.

Yours truly,
David S Barnett

Dad

Have received the letter written April 27. Here we heard from home since.

Think not received my cable from Ireland. So far everything is O. K. and all are enjoying ourselves as well as can be expected. So don't mind being here for a time. Suppose you read about us.

All the old bunch are still together and probably will remain that way.

We hear some scattered news from home but not much. If you can would appreciate Mercury once in a while.

I guess there is very little else to say.

Tell all the fellows hello and will write to them eventually.

Your son,
Ted

though the question was unnecessary.

"And cursing," Womack persisted.

"Sure," said Mrs. Gaunce contentedly.

But she settled herself and testified that thus far the battle has been strictly on a verbal basis.

When Leona Farris took the stand she testified that she was willing to meet any opponent in her immediate vicinity verbally, physically, or editorially.

"We get into it every time she sees one of us pass," she told the court, while Mrs. Gaunce clapped her hands and shook her head in disbelief and fashion. "And as for the hair pulling line, she owes me just as much as I owe her.

"Let's come out with the truth," she burst out. "I'm not keeping my mouth offs her. I've asked her out but she didn't come."

And then disdainfully, "She don't wants fight."

The testimony of the two principals was surrounded by a lot of other testimony, some of which was corroborative, some of which wasn't, and some of which Mrs. Gaunce shouted was "just plain fixed up on me."

It was all a bit confusing even to the court, except for the fact that the Gaunces and the Farrises are staging a 1942 version of the Martins and the Coxs, with technicolor added.

Mrs. Gaunce Myers did make enough heads and tails of the matter to fine Leona Farris five dollars on a breach of peace charge, but then stipulated the fine and admonished the whole group that such tactics although highly interesting, were conducive to a good neighbor policy.

THIS WEEK IN THE WAR

The Eastern [illegible] The slope of Sevastopol continues with undiated fury. At the end of the week the Russian lines were holding though admittedly the Germans were making slow but steady advances. The situation for that Russian Black Sea naval base must be considered very serious. South of Kharkov the Russian line has been driven back some 60 miles by the fearless kind of German assaults. But the Russian line to the Black Sea coast has not been broken and the latest reports refer to Russian counter-attacks on some local fronts. The German armies have advanced upon the Kharkov front but Russian resistance has not by any means been broken. Their lines are intact.

This morning (Monday) dispatches from Moscow referred to heavy German attacks in the vicinity of Kursk, some 240 miles southwest of Moscow. The indications at present are of raiding.

Apparently the weekend not primarily, struggle is now being waged entirely by land based planes by both belligerents.

The North African Front: The fall of Tobruk to Gen. Rommel's north African troops has been followed during the week by an advance into Egypt proper. Bardia, Helfaya Pass, (as the British call it) and to Mersah Matruh, one hundred and forty miles inside the Egyptian frontier, have fallen to Axis forces. At this writing it is claimed by Berlin and Rome that the Germans have captured Mersah Matruh and forced the retirement of the British forces to new positions. It is clear that this British, for one reason or another, have suffered a severe defeat in North Africa. It cannot be claimed that the British have withdrawn their armies yet. It may be possible for them to turn upon the invaders and hurl him back. It is more likely that the lines will soon become stabilized some where inside the Egyptian border because of the inability of the Germans to advance in the face of heightened supply difficulties.

The purpose of this German offensive is not entirely clear at this time must be considered apparent.

an attempt to capture Egypt itself or even be Suez Canal. Rather, must the purpose be considered to be that of creating a diversion and a threat to both of these objectives in order to get the British to divert troops from Iraq and Iran, Palestine and Transjordan, respectively to launching an invasion attack upon one or both, and to threaten Turkey with invasion. Turkish cooperation with the Axis and the oil fields of the middle east not Egypt and Suez are the real objectives of Rommel's drive and those in the Caucasus, again the Russians.

FOR A U. S. SENATOR

A Free Steel-Girded Swimming Pool

There's Fun At Chandler's Steel Supported Plunge . . . . But Kentuckians Die For Lack Of Steel On Far-Flung Battlefields.

THE FACTS—On May 1, four months and twenty-four days after Pearl Harbor, Ben H. Collings started the construction of a swimming pool in Senator A. B. Chandler's backyard at Versailles.

A standard pool of this type requires no less than 8,000 pounds of steel, in addition to incidental tubing and brass accessories.

Steel, as well as these incidental metals, is an urgent war-time need. Most people can't get it, because the government needs it so much.

Mr. Collings is a Louisville war contractor, who has been and is engaged on big contracts.

Senator Chandler is a member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, which passes on legislation for the department that authorizes war contracts.

Mr. Collings and Senator Chandler agree that the pool was a personal gift to the senator, a token of friendship for which, incidentally, another citizen would have had to pay about $5,000.00.

THE BACKGROUND—All of us are being called upon to sacrifice these days. We donate our scrap metal. We bring in our scrap rubber. We buy war bonds. Some have lost their businesses and some their jobs in the face of national necessity. Many have sons in the armed services, in camps here and far across the waters. Some of these sons are "missing in action." None of them we shall never see again.

THE QUESTIONS—What then of one who cavils on the national effort?

What of a high official who uses steel for fun, while for want of it the blood of Kentucky boys stains foreign shores and the oceans in between?

What of a senator, in this supreme and tragic hour, who accepts a costly present from a man whom he is in position to favor?

THE CONCLUSION—There is just one issue in this election. Just one issue in America. Just one issue in the world.

With Americans, with fathers and mothers and wives and sisters and brothers and sweethearts of men who are offering their lives for our freedom at stations all around the globe, that issue cannot be political or partisan. It is all-American. It is freedom. It is life. It is victory for peoples without which all patriots would choose to be dead.

No one reluctant to sacrifice, no one indifferent to the common burden of effort and hardship and anxiety and grief, no one who puts personal pleasure above national need has a place in America today—and least of all does such a one have a place in the high ranks of government.

EXPLANATION—It is out of these convictions that John Young Brown has become a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate. We invite support, not for him but for a sentiment, for a cause to which Americans have pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor.

Robert Swartz Myers Resident Killed by Car

Hit-Skip Driver Takes Life of Nicholas Man Late Saturday Night

The body of Robert Swartz, 49 year old railway employe, was buried here Tuesday afternoon, with services held at the graveside in the Carlisle cemetery, the Rev. W. B. Dampier officiating.

Mr. Swartz was killed Saturday night near midnight, evidently when he was struck by a car which did not stop after the collision. His body was brought to the Mathers-Potts Funeral Home that night and was removed to the home of L. B. Barton on Monday, there awaiting burial.

Badly mangled by the impact, the body was discovered by passers-by who called Sheriff Floyd Clark. Also called was Coroner J. B. Fulton, and the story of the tragedy was pieced together with only the identity of the driver of the death car not listed as a missing piece in the puzzle.

Mr. Swartz, who had been ill, and N employee for the past 29 years, was the son of the late Sam Swartz and of Mrs. Mollie Swartz. His survivors include his wife, Mrs. Willie Cameron Swartz, one daughter, and a sister, Mrs. Guy Neal, of Carlisle.

Assisting Mr. Dampier in the funeral service were Rev. Dyke Payne. Casketbearers were John F. Sugg, Floyd Clark, Charles Payne, Tom Cameron, Clarence Cameron, and Guy Neal.

A complete week of the war will be found on page three.

GIBBERISH

This is to report that Willie Wilson has changed his ways, is now quitting the attendance of the Sunday baseball games which he managed previously, but that Jerry Mark has not changed one jot or one tittle. Both are prominent Henryville residents.

Perry, who has threatened to have me arrested if I ever put his name in the paper again, went down to the Lyric theatre last Saturday night, went up to the gallery and came down in about five minutes.

"I" he declared, "didn't like them Wild West shows. There's too much shooting and horse riding going on to suit me. I'd like to have my money back."

He got his money back but he left them a little bit ahead of the theatre. You see the show hadn't even started at that time.

Mr. L. B. Barton won't mind my saying that he is very much in favor of the candidacy of Senator Albert Benjamin Chandler in the Democratic primary for the United States Senatorship for he makes no bones about the fact.

But they have been kidding the former Nicholas county sheriff right sharply around the court house lately about a situation which arose a few days ago. Mr. Barton, who has recently moved his residence, attempted to buy himself a new bath tub, only to find that the priorities had him and that there wasn't a chance of obtaining a new tub for quite a while.

His friends are now telling him that he may have to take advantage of Chandler's famous pool for the duration.

Maurice King, the young feller who works for the Kentucky Utilities Company, had a new one pulled on him the other day. . . . An elderly lady who

County Rubber Sum Is Large

Total of 74 Thousand Pounds of Scrap Collected in County

Nicholas county, with three tons yet to go during the campaign, had reason herself proud in the business of collecting scrap rubber.

A report issued on Tuesday night disclosed that a total of 74 pounds of the much needed scrap has been gathered in Nicholas during the present campaign, which is under the auspices of the Petroleum Institute Volunteer committee, that with a few minute spare the amount could top the eighty thousand point.

This was a far greater sum than the original estimate of ten thousand pounds, made at the beginning of the campaign, and later revised upward to twenty and then forty thousand pounds.

Appreciation was expressed by everyone connected with the drive, and the results were described as "splendid."

Brown Launches Vote Drive in Swimming Pool

Chandler Invites Probe as Politics Warm Up—Is Strange Campaign

Wasting a type campaign that is utterly new on the part of an experienced politician, John Young Brown, Lexington attorney and candidate for the Senate nomination in the Democratic primary August primary, Friday night announced that two campaign headquarters will be in your homes and that you will be my campaign managers."

Now this sounded like the veriest amateurism, and anyone who has been an observer of Kentucky politics is well aware that Mr. Brown is hardly an amateur. Indeed, he would be classed by most observers as an old-and-tried hand, although there have never been any evidences that he has ever tempered his real convictions upon any matter for the sake of political expediency.

Would Fall

Indeed, as one observer has remarked, if Mr. Brown were the Washington monument, he would fall in the first breeze, because such a structure must have a little bit in order to remain upright.

But Brown, whatever type of campaigner he may be waging, proved he had lost nothing of his forthrightness. He attacked Chandler's swimming pool in the very first paragraph and he was still on the offensive when his radio time had expired.

Among other things, he charged that Chandler's pool had been constructed in violation of a WPB priorities ruling, and Brown asserted that he had proof that the details of the matter to the President, to the Truman committee, to the F. B. I. and to the district attorney in Judge Ford's court.

Asks Probe

Chandler immediately countered with a request for a full investigation, and Brown said that he would make another speech Friday night in which he would "complete the picture."

As far as organization is concerned, however, Mr. Brown seems to suffer because he has already in politics for him. The state administration, the federal administration, the C. I. O. and the AF of L, the Louisville city administration, and countless county organizations are all said to be against him.

Mr. Brown's hope, obviously, is to so stir the mass of the people with the swimming pool issue that he can create a tide such as that which Mr. Chandler used to good advantage against the Laffoon-Rhea machine in 1935.

Local Armory, Active Militia Here Is Inspected

Members of the local Guard Unit of the Kentucky Active Militia, known as Company G, were inspected last Wednesday night at the local armory. The company was ordered to "fall in" at 8 o'clock for drill and inspection.

The officers inspecting the company were Lieut. Col. L. D. Macy of the Fifth Corps Army Area, Fort Hayes (or Brig. Gen. John A. Polin, Adjutant General, commanding the State Militia; Major Arthur J. Daly, Covington, commanding officer First Battalion, Second Regiment; Capt. Lee V. Symon, Bardstown, Ky., active militia, and Col. E. E. Pfanstiel, executive officer Second Kentucky Regiment.

After inspection the company went through drill, marching, guard duty and the manual of arms. Questions were asked by Col. Macy and he explained fully many things that the company should know about their rifles, and also of drilling and guard duty.

The officers were very much impressed by the rapid improvement of the company and praised the company highly. Many interesting talks were enjoyed by the local unit. Lieut. Macy expressed the fact that the spirit of the local unit was equal to the spirit of the boys now fighting for their country as they drill without pay and are willing to be prepared if their country needs them.

Lieut. Macy's talk seemed to sink very deeply into the hearts of the boys and "in whatever you do," he said, "never shirk your duty as you will never live it down." This statement was also expressed by the other officers in their talks. Lieut. Macy's talk was a benefit to each boy in the company and I'm sure it was one they will never forget.

Brig. General Polin explained that the uniforms would soon be in and he also gave an interesting talk on the spirit of our forefathers and the way they fought for freedom and explained that we are fighting for the same and should never let that spirit fall, but should carry on for "Old Glory" with all our might.

Capt. Sympson, State property officer from Bardstown, explained to the company about their uniforms and equipment and told us how our uniforms were to look and made a short talk that was fully enjoyed.

Maj. Daly made a most interesting talk on the American Flag. He explained it piece by piece from the first war in history on down to the present time. He explained the significance of the flag and what it stood for and for us to always have that spirit for our country and our flag and to keep it flying.

A short talk was offered by Lieut. Col. E. E. Pfanstiel during the inspection and after inspection Col. Pfanstiel congratulated the boys in behalf of their work and the progress they have made.

Others present during the inspection and drill were Mrs. Arthur J. Daly, Lieut. Katherine Brannon, Covington, of the W. A. C., Miss Florence Bran-

Henry Barnett Gunshot Victim

Resident of Myers Taken to Lexington Hospital in Critical Condition

Henry Barnett, 23 years old of Myers Station, was in Lexington hospital this week in a critical condition as the result of a wound in his left shoulder from a shot from a shot gun delivered at close range.

A son-in-law of Ben Richey of Myers, Barnett was brought to the Johnson Memorial hospital here Friday afternoon when Dr. W. H. Brown gave him first aid treatment. He was then taken to Lexington where it was feared that an amputation might be necessary in order to save his life.

Details of the woundings were not learned, although it was thought that the near tragedy was the result of an accidental shooting, it investigation.

It occurred at the Richey home about 6 o'clock Friday when Barnett, a handsome blonde young man, was able to walk out to the car in front of the home following the shooting.

Intimates could give no reason for the shooting to be anything other than accidental.

German Drive in Russia Is Going All Out

Long Delayed Push Is Now in Full Blast, Reds Forced to Retreat

German newspapers and broadcasting stations, government controlled and most of them government operated were proclaiming this week that the much proclaimed and much delayed offensive against Russia had finally begun.

And it seemed so.

For on three battlefronts which surround the Caucasus oil fields, Hitler's present goal, the Nazis were pushing back the courageous Red defenders by the sheer weight of numbers hurled against the stubborn lines.

Enormous losses were being inflicted upon the attackers, but the Soviet high command admitted that they still came on, and it further admitted that the Russian troops were being forced to withdraw slowly as the Nazis poured men and machines into the battle.

Better In Libya

In Egypt, however, the situation was brighter.

A determined British stand in a 35 mile wide bottleneck from which offers General von Rommell the only passageway to Alexandria and the Suez has halted the German advance there in the 120 degree heat. The British were joined by United States planes and tanks in the Battle of Libya. The Germans were some seventy miles from the vital port of Alexandria.

In this nation, a military trial, to be held in secrecy, was being readied for eight Nazi spies caught here by the F. B. I.; the German blockade was still harassing the east coast in a fearful manner, and President Roosevelt announced that the requisitioning of all automobile tires is a distinct possibility.

Meet Postponed

No regular monthly meeting of the Carlisle City Council was held Monday night, the regular meeting date, because of the illness of the mother of Mayor Talbert. The council will meet on Monday, July 13.

Jail Empty

For the second consecutive week there was no one in the Nicholas county jail.

William Owings, who is in charge of the bastile, said that one man was interned for drunkenness on Saturday night but was released Sunday morning after he had recovered his equilibrium.

X-Ray Clinic Is Planned Here

Doctor D. B. Thurber, Nicholas County Health Officer, announced this week that the portable X-ray Unit from the Bureau of Tuberculosis of the Kentucky State Health Department will be brought to Nicholas county on Tuesday, July 21st, by the local Tuberculosis Association.

An X-ray clinic where chest X-ray examinations will be made for reactors to the tuberculin skin test and family contacts of known cases of tuberculosis throughout Nicholas county, will be held in the office of the local health department, City Building, on Tuesday morning, July 21, at 9 o'clock.

Also, chest X-rays will be made on several persons who have been X-rayed previously and are being checked periodically in this clinic. Others desiring an X-ray examination are invited to attend this clinic, Doctor Thurber stated that the cost of the examination will be $1.25. Anyone needing an X-ray but unable to afford the fee, it will be paid by the fund of the Tuberculosis Association and raised through the sale of Christmas Seals.

Youth Freed in Cemetery Case

Not Enough Evidence to Convict, Judge Rules in Snapp Case in Court

A charge of mutilating monuments which was brought here this week against Clay Snapp, 16 year old Bartersville youth, was dismissed in Nicholas quarterly court Friday upon the motion of Roger Womack, defense attorney, who argued that insufficient evidence had been offered for a conviction. The motion was granted by Judge Walter Shepherd.

The arrest grew out of the shooting at some of the Bartersville tombstones by some unknown person with a rifle, and Aaron Green, Bartersville resident whose family lot stone was hit, offered a ten dollar reward for the arrest and conviction of the guilty party.

Snapp arrived for a continuance of his case last week when it was first brought to trial and the request was granted in order to allow him time to employ counsel.

Tilton House Sold to Botts

Farmer Purchases Home at Public Auction—Large Crowd Attends

Thomas H. Botts, Nicholas county farmer of Upper Jackstown road, purchased the home and the small acreage left by the estate of Miss Jane B. Tilton, deceased, at public auction here last Thursday.

Mr. Botts bid $2,875 for the house, buying both the home proper and the small adjacent office building. He indicated that he will move into his newly acquired property and make his home in Carlisle.

The office and the house were first sold separately, but brought more when they were auctioned together and were disposed of as a whole.

A large crowd, estimated at more than two hundred persons, attended the auction, and bidding was extremely brisk on the various articles offered. Many antique pieces attended from other cities in order to bid on the old articles.

The sale, conducted by the Scott-Kendall Sales Company, was in charge of Innes H. Ross, executor of the Tilton estate.

County Quota Lower in July

Breathing Spell Given County as Bond Quota Is $5,800 for Month

Nicholas county, which has bought more than $20,000 in defense securities during the last two months, was given a "breathing spell" amount of bonds and stamps to be bought as her part of the war effort during the month of July.

Figures released from the United States Treasury Department this week disclosed that this county must buy $5,800 worth of defense bonds this month in order to meet her quota.

"But there must be no falling down," declared Innes H. Ross, chairman of the bond sale here, as he announced the lowered amount. "It is just as important that we meet this sum as it was the larger sums which were given us during May and June."

Will Leave For Army Service

Lieutenant Everette Stephenson leaves Thursday, July 9, for service in the United States Army. He will go to Camp Edwards, Massachusetts, where he has been assigned to the Engineers Corp of the Amphibian Command.

The Amphobian Command, just now being organized, is the newest phase of the U. S. Army, for protection against the Axis.
