M. P. NICHOLS

NICHOLAS COUNTY REPRESENTATIVES AT CONSERVATION CAMP

The County Agent states that although the representatives selected by leaders for special work they had done could not get to camp, that three good alternates had gotten off. It was explained that due to shortage of help many of the larger boys from parents owned and operated farms could not spare them at this busy time when farmers are doing so much toward helping win the war. This year the representatives from this county are all from the Myers Club. They are, Jack Bowen, Buchanan-Wrench, and Donald Cameron.

These boys through the liberality of a wealthy sportsman, who was solicited by the 4-H Department are being provided free meals. The State College is providing the dormitories at Camp Bingham, south of Lawrenceburg, which had been donated by Barry Bingham in honor of the late Ambassador Bingham and publisher of the Courier-Journal.

The local Game and Fish Club of which Everett Smith is Secretary, and E. E. Pumphrey President, have provided transportation to and from Springfield for the boys. The program, consists of a rather complete series of lectures and other educational features on Conservation and plenty of time for recreation and games that are especially attractive to boys over 11 years of age. The boys left Carlisle bus early Monday morning and are expected to return sometime Friday evening.

SPECIAL AWARDS TO 4H MEMBERS FOR RUBBER SALVAGE

The County Agent has been much impressed with the large volume of rubber 4H members have turned in and has made provisions to furnish ribbons to regular members who turned in from 100 to over 300 pounds of rubber during the recent campaign. One condition of the award is that reports must reach the County Agents office not later than Monday, July 13th.

Mr. Nichols reports that already those going over the 300 pound mark are Patsy Hatton, East, 600 lbs; Anna Lee Gates, East Union, 300 lbs; Charles Dixon, Carlisle, 323 lbs; Martha Jo Flora, Headquarters, 347 lbs; and Artie B. McCarty, Moorefield, 317 lbs. Besides the fine large, red, white and blue ribbons a special sweepstake ribbon will be given to the individual member who collects more rubber than any other member in the county and another to the leader of the club whose members have collected more than any of the other clubs in the county. It was also announced that every member should make a report on the form which has been furnished him even though he has less than 100 lbs. since every pound will count toward making your club win the big sweepstakes ribbon.

Poultry Important on Kentucky Farms

Chickens are no longer "small potatoes" on Kentucky farms, Dean Thomas P. Cooper told men and women attending the annual poultry short course at the Experiment Station at Lexington. Eggs and poultry produced in Kentucky last year were worth nearly $27,500,000, an increase of almost $4,000,000 over the income from poultry in 1940. The value of this year's production should be even greater.

Speakers at the short course stressed the place of poultry in winning the war. Vast quantities of frozen and dried eggs are going to England, where the people have been getting only one egg each a month. Also so American soldiers are getting their eggs for breakfast, whether in camps here or in foreign countries.

To provide the necessary eggs, the quota for the United States this year is 4,300,000,000 eggs. Asked for an increase of 15 per cent over last year, Kentucky hens are laying 20 per cent more eggs.

4-H Camp Programs to Stress War Work

How farm boys and girls may be of still greater help in the fight for freedom will make up the principal features of the program of 12 camps for 4-H club members in Kentucky, J. W. Whitehouse, state club leader, said club members in every county in the state, totaling almost 50,000, had already done an invaluable job in collecting scrap iron, tin and other salvage, and in the production and preservation of food.

In addition to a state conservation camp at Camp Henderson July 6-10, camps have been scheduled at Bingham July 20-24; Blackford, July 27-31; Morehead and Cumberland, August 3-7. A camp for Ohesia county members was held at Bingham June 29-July 4.

All programs stress individual health, nutrition, the production and preservation of food, and the collection of salvage. Assisting in the programs are the Kentucky State Board of Health and the State Division of Fish and Game.

THE GARDEN

Home-Saving Vegetable Seed IV

The saving of bean seed and seed peas has been left until last, as here enters an especial provision, that of saving them from the weevil, the insect that may render them completely unfit for seed or for food.

Beans and peas do not mix either with each other or the varieties within themselves, as both are pollinated before the pods open. Seed may be gathered any time after the pods are well wilted, as it is fully mature at that time. Wilting may cause loss through shatter, ing or rotting. It also gives the weevil better opportunities for laying its eggs. Before the seed is put away for the winter or before saved for food it should be dried thoroughly, but not in direct sunlight and not too rapidly. "Room temperature" air passing freely across it, is best.

Before dried peas or beans are put away for food or for seed they should be passed with extreme thoroughness through a fine mesh sieve, which will sift out the weevil eggs that may have been laid on them. Air-tight containers should be used, to confine all the gas this evolved while the dissifted may be put directly on the seed, or on a piece of cloth or in a paper sack for protection. The container is then closed tight. As dissifted is highly explosive, all working with it should be done outside the house.

The container is set somewhere outside (as on a north porch) for 24 hours, then emptied where air may pass freely to remove all the smell. Then the beans or peas are put in bags or boxes for the winter, and kept dry. Those should be in sufficiently small lots that the weevil eggs may be laid if the dissifting process is missed, and the correct amount of the dissifted is a hot teaspoon for a half gallon jar, a heaping cup for a 50-pound lard can, 4 tablespoons.

Another way to save beans weevil-free is to stir in with the seed hydrated lime, enough to fill all spaces. The lime may prove objectionable in beans saved for food.

Still another is to warm the beans 130 degrees for a half hour but this method must be carefully done else germination may be injured. Also, the beans that are overheated become hard and difficult to cook.

Ohio and Kentucky are joined in a search for John M. Chandler, Jr., Army Air Corps known insurance man and second commander of the Knights Templar, who disappeared Saturday or left by plane late Saturday afternoon on leaving he was going to a barber shop. Later his family received an envelope from Cincinnati which contained only a garage check for his car.

Kentucky Lambs Win

Caldwell county, Kentucky, furnished the reserve champion lamb at the 1941 4-H club show at Evansville, Indiana. Other Kentucky winnings included the best pen of 4H lambs from Union county; and the top tens of five and 10 lambs, both from Henderson county. The reserve champion sold for 50 cents a pound, and the best tens or three and five for 25 cents. Six Kentucky counties had 178 lambs in the show. The champion lamb, which came from Illinois sold for $1.50 a pound.

Alfalfa Puts End to Johnson Grass

Alfalfa apparently is competing John Grass in the farm fields of George Strothers in Monroe county. The field was so badly infested with Johnson grass that its owner had about given up trying to get a stand for cotton or tobacco in it. Following the suggestion of County Agent Bettie L. Ellis, it was plowed last August 10 to 12 inches deep, fitted and limed, then harrowed and the grass roots burned. Practically no Johnson grass was seen in the field at the cutting of alfalfa this season.

Open Chandler State Campaign

State headquarters of Senator A. B. Chandler, candidate for reelection to the U. S. Senate, were opened in the Capitol Apartments in Frankfort, it was announced at Frankfort Friday by Robert Hillenmeyer, Chandler campaign chairman.

Mr. Hunsbrock also announced that headquarters in Madisonville has been named as subdivision of the Chandler campaign and will be associated with him at the state headquarters in Frankfort. Hillenmeyer said other activities connected with the campaign Mr. Franklin Hopkins and Christian Hopkins and Christian Peters and a leader of the drive in western Kentucky, was a close friend and adviser of the late Governor Ruby Laffoon and is a firm supporter of the administration of Governor Keen Johnson, Mr. Humphreys stated.

With the opening of official headquarters, assurance of the support of many of Kentucky's outstanding citizens and political leaders, and the fact that the campaign is now in full swing in Frankfort, according to the campaign chairman, who added that plans are now complete for the dissemination of messages indicative of Chandler's record as United States Senator by the Junior Senator in announcement of his candidacy for reelection to the office of the national Congress, Mr. Humphreys announced the appointment of Senator Chandler as his campaign manager. Chandler has intended to devote most of his time in approaching weeks to affairs in Washington, following his service as campaign manager, but will be enthused the fact that in the cities every effort be made to keep the campaign on a high plane, thereby interesting and practical and logical discussion of issues should be developed by the use of realistic methods of training and practice. Chandler is closely as possible in problems and exercises. Imagination and ingenuity should be used to think up and conduct practical and realistic problems and alerts."

For Better Poultry

The Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association, organized in 1927, has 3,114 members owning 303,000 chickens tested for pullorum disease. Also operating in the National Poultry Improvement Plan are 59 hatcheries in Kentucky with a setting capacity of a million eggs a week. Harry Terhune of McAfee is president and James Hollinger of Scottsville is vice-president of the association. A non-profit organization, the association cooperates with the State Dept. of Agriculture, the Home Economics and the U. S. Department of Agriculture in all phases of poultry improvement work.

Our fighting men are doing their share. Here at home we must see to it that no bit of our income is War Bonds for our share in America.

Tells How Abandoned Ky Farm Was Restored

How land abandoned to briars and broomsedge pastures can be made to produce profitable crops, is told by S. J. Lowry and L. M. Calderwood, operators of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Substation at Princeton, Dr. Lowry stated that 500 tons of limestone and 500 tons of phosphate that cost them $8.85 an acre in six years, they got back increased corp yields worth $58.11 an acre.

Corn yields were increased 20 bushels an acre; wheat, 15 bushels; hay, a ton and a quarter, and most improvement made in pasture. The average annual value of the increased yields was $9.68 an acre. The cost of lime-stone and phosphate, $1.18 an acre, bringing a return of $8.20 an acre a year, over the cost of soil treatment. These results were obtained where limestone and phosphate were used in a six-year rotation of corn, wheat, hay and three years of pasture.

Where no lime was used, there was no grass on the farm, except in one spot of the better land. Now every field not used for experiments is in alfalfa, bluegrass pasture, mixed clover and grass, or corn or wheat in a rotation of corn one year, wheat one year, and clover or grass three years or more.

The complete story of the regeneration of this old, worn Caldwell county farm is told in a bulletin called "Grass Farming for Improving Depleted Soil." Copies may be obtained from county agents or by writing to the Western Kentucky Experiment Substation, Princeton, or to the Kentucky Experiment Station, Lexington.

Guard Duties Are Outlined

New tasks have been defined for the State Guards in instructions recently issued, the War Department announced today. These State forces, created under Congressional legislation of October 21, 1940, to replace in the States the National Guard units then in the process of being inducted into Federal service, today are of increasing importance with the outbreak of war. Under the new directive State Guards still remain State forces, but their functions have been fitted into a broad pattern for the home defense of the Nation.

The National Guard Bureau is the War Department administrative agency for the State Guard and the Chief of the National Guard Bureau is charged with promulgating the necessary instructions and suggestions for training the State Guards in accordance with War Department policies. The new directive provides that the Commanding Generals of the nine Corps Areas shall supervise and assist in the training and development of the State Guards and the Adjutants General shall be responsible for the training and discipline of State Guard units. Suitable part time training will be provided where practicable for officers and enlisted men of the State Guard.

The mission of the State Guards as defined by the War Department is to provide an adequate reliable force for employment within the territorial jurisdiction of their respective States as directed by the Governors, and they are expected to support the National Guard. State Guards are expected, under normal circumstances, to be self-sustaining from war equipment and to guard and protect public buildings, public utilities, communications, and facilities which local police and other State agencies cannot adequately guard. In addition, the State Guards may be expected to assist the Military Police and other units of the Army, to suppress sabotage and to perform such other duties as organized fifth column groups and parachute troops and to cooperate with military, naval and civil authorities in extreme emergencies. They also may be used on days of elections and in information and observation duty at or near frontiers.

The War Department, through the National Guard Bureau and the Corps Area Commanders, has circulated to the various State Guard units detailed instructions for training, organization and balanced equipment. The instructions emphasized the fact that in the cities every effort be made to keep the training program as closely interesting and practical and logical discussion of issues should be developed by the use of realistic methods of training and practice. Chandler is closely as possible in problems and exercises. Imagination and ingenuity should be used to think up and conduct practical and realistic problems and alerts."
