THIS WEEK IN THE WAR

The Pacific Area: The United States Marines, who two weeks ago occupied the islands of Tulagi and Guadalcanal in the Southern Solomon group, are reported to have gained complete control of those and adjoining islands and have completely flushed Japs off Japanese warplane factories destroyed and ready to go into operation. Fresh and plans which have already been prepared for the Japs on Tulagi harbor, one of the best harbors in the south Pacific, available to the Allied fleet. An air field on Guadalcanal which the Japanese had almost completed is now available for allied use. The Japanese either make another try to drive the Marines out of the islands or those islands will be used as bases for attacks by sea and air upon Japanese positions in the northern islands of the Solomon group or upon the most important Japanese base in the south Pacific, Rabaul, in New Britain. Action in that area is likely to become heavier within the next few weeks.

During the week the Japanese attacked once more Port Moresby on New Guinea at Milne Bay. Earlier, General MacArthur had reenforced that area secretly and had prepared strong defense positions there. The Japanese, however, seem not to have discovered those forces nor the fortifications which they had prepared. When the Japanese landed on the shores of Milne Bay they were met with unexpected resistance. Some few of the attacking troops may have been able to take off in Japanese destroyers. Most of them, however, were either killed or captured. All of their equipment had to be left behind. Thus the Japanese have met with a second defeat on the shores of the Coral Sea. Moves against Japanese positions on New Guinea may follow within a few weeks as part of a general offensive.

China: Chinese forces, covered by American and British Air forces, have in recent weeks regained much of the territory in Chekiang and Kiangsi provinces. Much of the railroad into the interior, some ports on the coast, and the most important airfields within easier range of Japan have been recovered by the Chinese armies. The help given by the small air force now in China seems to have made the difference in the situation. Japanese claim that they have retired to reform their lines in advance of other more important operations. But that should have meant that those troops were to be used against Russia in Siberia. But four of the nine or ten weeks available for campaigning in Siberia have passed since August 1 and no move in that direction by Japanese, has been reported. The inference to be made from that fact is that the Russians have not as yet been compelled to withdraw forces there for the defense of the western front against the Germans.

Russia and the Western European Front: This week the Russians admitted that for the past two weeks their armies had been attacking west of Leningrad and Moscow, in fact that along the whole front from the Don northward to the Baltic, very heavy fighting had been raging. In the Rzhev area on a front of seventy miles, the Russians claim to have eadvanced over thirty miles. Elsewhere heavy fighting has raged. Before Stalingrad and in the foothills of the Caucasus between the Don and the Volga the Russians clai mto have halted the Germn drives and to be successfully counter-attacking. Certain it is that the Russian defense has stiffened, whether it has started an offensive in force or not remains to be seen. Evidently the Russians have some power left and winter is fast approaching. Coupled with the fact the British have held in Egypt the past weeks, Russian resistance in the Caucasus leads to the hope that a German drive against the Middle East has little chance for success this year.

Sycamore to Tokyo

One Carlisle man, perturbed about the war effort and the manner in which the scrap iron drive has bogged down both in Nicholas county and in the nation, offered this week to contribute the iron fence which has stood in front of the house where he lives for many years.

Charles R. King, Carlisle hardware merchant, offered this fence which stands in front of his Sycamore street home to the scrap effort, figuring that it would be more effective if transplanted in Tokyo or Berlin than it is at its present site.

Earl Van Bever, president of the Young Business Men's club, indicated that it would call on club members to aid in removing the fence—and any others which persons here wish to donate.
