JOTTINGS FROM THE NOTE BOOK

This was "put in" some time in 1936—

The optimist believes that through science and industry overcoming the cruelties of nature there is a way out without destroying the world as it now is and building up anew. Science has made abundance spring from the barren parts of the world. Science has made it possible by turning a lever to do work that multitudinous human hands could never accomplish. Remove greed from human nature and there is an abundance for everybody. But it may be possible to direct the instincts of greed to an intelligent self interest. The industrialists may awake to the fact that unless he gives good working conditions his employees cannot have the right attitude of mind towards their jobs and unless equitable wages are paid the employees cannot purchase and upon the purchasing power of the masses depends the prosperity of the whole nation. Industrialists must get over the idea that they can pull themselves up by their boot straps to an elevated and superior position. Without the cooperation of the masses the industrialists cannot lift themselves.

Here are some things more recent—

The melting pot that was America has not produced the Spirit that is America.

If some Einstein should write a simple understandable story — "The Story of Money" — he might be able to show us that we both will be the most solid basis for our national wellbeing after the war. We would all like to find out upon what basic principles the medium of exchange is established.

It is generally understood that war bonds are not transferrable, but can be turned into currency at any time For war bonds that are turned in, the Government will probably issue paper money. This money would be a very acceptable medium of exchange at this counter. There will be no tremendous purcha-ing power among ourselves.

There seems to be an idea that is vaguely forming itself in many minds that the war will act as a great purge, as was the flood of Noah's time, with America taking the place of the Ark.

WATER-COOLED DENTISTRY

(The Kentuckian-Citizen)

For man months dentists were confronted with the problem of temporarily of aircooled and watercooled engines for the purposes of aviation. Much the same controversy seems to be on the way in regard to dentistry.

For many years dentists, in drilling their victims' teeth, have depended upon an air-cooling system which, as most patients testify, lacked something of perfection.

Now comes the news that the Army dental Service have discovered that the patient will feel no pain if the dentist simply pours a constant stream of water at room temperature over the patient's mouth, drawing it out with a second tube.

The theory upon which the water-cooled method is based is that the drilling of decayed teeth causes no pain, but that friction, inevitably associated with drilling generates heat which is the cause of the patient's suffering.

By pouring about eight ounces of water a minute on the teeth and of the individual and drawing it out at the same rate, the heat is removed and the patient will enjoy, placidly and, we are told, comfortably.

It sounds encouraging, but we have our doubts.

BLUE-LICK BECOMES GENERAL PARK

(Lexington Herald)

When federal government takes over Blue Lick Memorial State Park and the surrounding acres which are made available to it for a national monument, or similar rank, this area will become one of the most attractive in the state of Kentucky. Turing and traveling now are restricted and almost eliminated but as soon as the war is over there probably will be an almost unlimited increase in motoring, week-ending, vacationing and shrine hopping.

At Blue Lick Springs the last battle of the Revolution, so-called, between Pioneers and Indians was fought. No historical shrine is more inspirational.

Beginning in 1934 the Daniel Boone Bicentennial Commission, which sold half dollars and had other money-raising ventures, conducted a campaign to acquire some 250 acres around the Blue Lick Battlefield Memorial State Park. Originally it was hoped to include Bryan Station Springs, perhaps Boonesboro and other sites.

The federal government would not take over the area around the state park unless the state park also was turned over. The recent act of the legislature makes possible federal control of all this Blue Lick area, including the old hotel and springs. Some of these days it will be a great asset, to the nation, as it already has proved to be as a state park.

May 21 has been proclaimed "a day of prayer in Kentucky" by Gov. Simeon Willis on request of the Protestant Chaplains' Association, a national organization.

FOOD RATIONING WILL CONTINUE

OPA Official Predicts Let Up Will Come After First Peacetime Harvest In Europe

Food rationing will continue at least until after the first peacetime European harvest, Walter F. Straub of Washington, Office of Price Administration food rationing director has predicted.

Straub, in Frankfort recently for a regional OPA conference, told interviewers that the United States would be called upon to help feed nations liberated by German's defeat until they could harvest their first crops.

Straub also predicted that military needs for food would greatly ease as fighting Japan probably would continue for some time after the Nazis were defeated.

It all adds up to continued food rationing, even after European hostilities cease, he asserted. Concerning 1944 food prospects, Straub said:

"Our meat outlook should be no worse than in 1943. Probably more, or processed foods, the civilian populace is going to have to go a little bit lighter than it did in 1943. . . . Probably the most critical shortage will be in the production of fats and oils. Fats and oils are among the food commodities in sugar."

Straub said reports concerning bulging sugar surpluses were unfounded.

Praising the Victory Garden program, Straub said gardens produce will aid us greatly to keep canned vegetable rationing at its present points, or less, and he will prevent any rise in such point values."

'CALVARY' HEARD HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Combined Choirs of Millersburg Churches, Display Artistic Ability In Rendition

"Calvary," by Henry Wessel was artistically presented at the Carlisle Christian Church on Good Friday evening by the combined choirs choirs of the Millersburg Church, the baton of Captain Thomas A. Swiezki, the forty-six voices were a blend of harmony dynamics. The Cantata in its ten divisions brought to its listeners the intense tragedy and joy that only Calvary and the Resurrection can portray. The last solo part was sung very clear and the young baritone, John Fortier Solos by Mrs. Norman Judy, Mrs. Edith Wilhoite, Mrs. Lee Reece Bess and a trio with Miss Mary Belle Echols, Miss Ethel Clifton and Mr. Claude Brooks added to the beauty of the musical production. The violen prelude by Captain Sievicki with its deep solemnity introduced the Cantata in splendor. Peach Crop Doomed By Freeze; Pears And Plums Also Damaged

Freezing temperature, with a record low of 20 degrees, set last week destroyed most of the buds on peach, pear and plum trees in central Kentucky, horticulturists say.

Prospects for a peach crop were practically ruined by the freeze, but the outlook for pears, plums and grapes was not fully determined, Prof. A. J. Olney, head of the horticulture department at the University of Kentucky said.

Louie E. Hillenmeyer, Lexington nurseman, stated that, while peaches, pears and plums were damaged severely, apples, grapes, raspberries, blackberries and strawberries apparently were not damaged extensively. Mr. Hillenmeyer reported a temperature reading of 19 degrees above zero at his nursery plant.

Both Professor Olney and Mr. Hillenmeyer said some damage was caused to sweet cherries but that sour cherries were not injured.

Professor Olney said reports indicated that the peach crop was not damaged in all parts of Kentucky and possibly in Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio.

Mr. Hillenmeyer added that possibly some peach buds which were not opened because of the continued cold weather during the first weeks of spring might not have been damaged by the freeze.

Mrs. E. S. Kinkead, Lexington United States weather observer, reported that the low temperature of 20 degrees above zero was the lowest thermometer reading recorded for April 5, the next lowest reading being 22 degrees in 1880.

MRS. LUCY WALLER JONES BURIED HERE

Funeral services for Mrs. Charles Finley Jones, who died unexpectedly in Washington, D. C., Monday, were held at the family lot in the Carlisle cemetery Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Jones had been residing in Los Angeles in recent years. She became ill enroute to Washington to visit her daughter, Mrs. Robert MacCartee, and upon arrival there was taken immediately to a hospital where she expired. The body was brought to the Milward Funeral Home in Lexington, arriving there Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Jones was formerly Miss Lucy Waller, Carlisle. She was the daughter of the late Annie Buckler and Thomas Waller, and had spent her girlhood in the home of her grandfather, W. T. Buckler, in the house which is now the Johnson Memorial Hospital, which was a gift to Nicholas county by her cousins, the late Hugh and John Buckler.

She was married to the late Charles Finley Jones, a steel man of her married life in Lexington and Ashland. To this union and Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Jones is survived by a son, Major Waller Jones, now on duty in the South Pacific, and several cousins in central Kentucky, among them is Henry Darnall of Carlisle.

MANY EDITORS

It is probably not generally known that the average country newspaper editor has many titles wrapped up in the one title "Ye Editor." Much of the mail received and some of the many editor titles to which the mail is addressed include editor and publisher, sporting editor ,garden editor, book-review editor, radio editor, war bond editor, Red Cross editor, society editor, news editor, exchange editor, society editor, political editor, state editor, legal editor, court editor, etc. Observing a sword above the desk, a customer asked a small mountain town editor what it was there for" to which the modest editor replied, "that belongs to the "fights" editor."

A customer was driving around in his merchant for a cut cash time he was quoted a price by stating "can't you do a little better," was in the store on a bargain hunt bedreesed in his overalls and suffered a fire loss and a half dollar was discovered by the customer who asked "what are you going to do with these." The merchant replied he had not planned to do anything with them as he he considered them to be worthless and suggested that his bargain-hunting customer take them along if he would make any use on them, which he did, to which the customer made the usual reply, "can't you do a little better?"

50,000 Ton of Rubber Turned Out By Goodrich In Less Than 18 Months

A story has come out of Paddy's Run where there was not a war plant prior to the bombing of Pearl Harbor which is almost a miracle, is a report of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., stating that it has manufactured for the military 50,000 tons—or 100,000,000 pounds—of synthetic rubber in less than eighteen months.

Dr. Robert V. Yohe, 36-year-old Goodrich chemical engineer and manager of the Louisville plant, said the one-millionth pound of synthetic rubber was baled on March 21. The plant is now running well above its 60,000-ton annual rated capacity, Dr. Yohe said.

The amount of synthetic rubber so far turned out by the plant, built by the Defense Plant Corporation and operated by Goodrich in the Bell's Lane area, is greater than that imported last year from Latin America, Africa and Mexico, about 90 percent of the plant's output has gone into tires.

Dr. Yohe, who went to Louisville in March, 1943, to take charge of the plant, said the company would also manufacture several improved types of rubber "in the near future" and that the new product will "provide improved resistance to tire failure and insure longer life for tires."

Goodrich also operates a kork-o-seal plant at Louisville which manufactures a synthetic, rubber-like substance which has wide uses ranging up to several thousand objects formerly made of natural rubber.

FOREIGN POLICY IS DISGUSSED BY HULL

Secretary of State Makes Plea In Sunday Address For Co-Operative Allied Peace Plan

In his address to the nation last Sunday, Secretary of State Cordell Hull put up a fight for a post-war policy of international collaboration in "organized peace," and made a plea to the public not to let the controversies of an election year produce disunity and destroy America's effectiveness in world affairs.

"Once before in your lifetime," Hull said in a broadcast discussion of foreign policy, "we fell into disunity and into ineffective in world affairs by reason of it. I doubt its happening again. It will be a tragedy to you and to your children and to the world for generations."
