PHENOTHIAZINE WEEK
APRIL 24 - 29

There are fewer lambs on farms this year than last but the percentage of lambs saved is not usually high. By careful management it is possible to sell as many pounds of lamb this year as last year.

The most essential thing is to control stomach and inte-tinal parasites. Phenothiazine is the well known treatment which will control stomach and inte-tinal worms. By feeding the medicine at a time which causes great damage in late lambing, the results sheep should be dosed twice a year with phenothiazine, once in the late fall or early minter and again in spring after lambing and a mixture of 1 part phenothiazine and 9 parts salt should be kept in convenient access to the flock from May 1 through September. While two dosings are advisable, the first year at least, it is recognized that one dose in the early spring after lambing and the use of phenothiazine in the sale during the warm weather months will normally give sufficient worm control to enable the farmer to grow out his late lambs to good market condition after weaning. This, then, is the time of year when all sheep should be dosed with phenothiazine Flocks that were treated before lambing should be given their second dose and those that did not get a treatment then should be given one now and all sheep and lambs should have ready access to the phenothiazine-salt mixture from May 1 through September. Plans for a simple type of feeder that will protect this mixture from the weather can be obtained from your county agricultural agent.

The only method of dosing is the one now most generally used and the least expensive. Place one powder with a su-pension agent dried and requiring only the addition of water as per direction to make a salt-factory drench to be administered locally. A drench is more convenient than a bottle for drenching and with it there is less danger of wasting the phenothiazine.

This program, if carried through in connection with general recommended management practices will make possible the growing out of practically all of the late lambs to good market weights after weaning, materially increasing the income from flocks and save for the war effort great quantities of lamb and other essential by-products now being surgical sutures which are made from the small intestines of lambs and sheep that are free of nodules.

LIVING ON SOFT FOOD; RETONGA BRINGS RELIEF

"It Seemed To Me I Had To Spend Half My Time In Bed," Says Well Known Resident, Eats Heartily Now; Feels Fine.

"I took Retonga nearly two years ago and it gave me such grand relief that I have felt better since then than for years," gratefully states Mrs. Mary Payne, well known resident of 1023 Breckinridge St., Owensboro, Ky., in a happy public endorsement of this noted medicine. Discussing her case Mrs. Payne continued:

"I suffered so much from acid indigestion that I lived almost entirely on soft foods, but even then so much gas pressed up against my chest until I felt like my breath would be cut off. Often just a glass of water seemed to turn as sour as vinegar in my stomach. I had no use strong laxatives regularly, and my legs, arms and shoulders pained me until I could hardly stand it. I lost weight and felt so weak that it seemed to me I spent half my time in bed.

"Retonga gave me splendid relief. I was soon eating well and regained several pounds. The pains and the sluggish elimination were soon relieved, and I began feeling and looking so much better that my friends were amazed. I can never thank Retonga enough."

Retonga is intended to relieve distress due to Vitamin B-1 deficiency, constipation, insufficient flow of digestive juices in the stomach, and loss of appetite. Accept no substitute. Retonga may be obtained at Carlisle Drug Co. and Hopkins Drug Store. -adv-
