WILLIS CHARGES SABOTAGE TO FOES

Passage of Bill Stripping Lieut. Gov. of Powers Laid to Donaldson By Governor Willis

Charges of "sabotage" and "partisanship" were branded the action early Tuesday of the Senate in depriving Lt. Gov. Kenneth Tuggle, Senate President, the power to appoint and direct committees. Twenty-one Democratic senators overwhelmed fifteen Republicans to strip from Lt. Gov. Tuggle all his powers as president of the Senate.

Governor Willis charged that J. Lyter Donaldson, "the man who was rejected for Governor by the vote of the people, is in Frankfort directing this sabotage."

Donaldson, registered at the New Capital Hotel, declined to comment after Governor Willis' statement was issued from the executive mansion.

"These arrogant men," Governor Willis said, "mean to thwart the will of the people. I want the people of Kentucky to know that the fight for good government will go on. I hope that they will resent this continuation of machine politics and see to it that their mandate is obeyed."

Other highlights at the opening session of the 1944 General Assembly included:

1. Governor Willis informed a joint committee from both houses he will not be ready to deliver his message until 2 p. m. next Monday.

2. Three representatives and two senators, all Democrats, introduced bills to repeal the State income tax—one of the major campaign pledges of Governor Willis.

3. Senators Strother Melton, Paducah, and Lee Gibson, Owensboro, introduced a joint bill to free State-owned toll bridges immediately with $2,500,000 from the cash surplus of the Department of Highways.

4. The Legislative Council dissolved without reporting the budget bill it has been working on since December 13. Governor Willis said he will continue to work on the budget, and that it is his intention to present it as a prelude to his message next Monday.

Several precedents were broken as the Republican executive branch and the Democratic legislative branch spent their first day together in Frankfort. For example, Governors heretofore have delivered their messages on the first or second day of the session. The Legislative Council never before failed to have a budget ready to report, and the Senate usually adopts rules of the previous session temporarily, then proceeds to adopt permanent rules leisurely.

It was through immediate adoption of new 1944 rules that the Senate stripped Tuggle of his power to name committees, refer bills to committees, and to employ extra help. These powers were lodged in a newly created committee on committees, to be composed of the lieutenant governor; the Democratic floor leader, Senator Earle C. Clements, Morganfield, and the Democratic president pro tem, Senator E. C. Moore, Liberty.

All powers normally exercised by the lieutenant governor are transferred to the three-man committee of one Republican and two Democrats. In addition, each of the two Democratic members is given specific authority to designate another senator to act in his stead if he is to be absent from the Senate chamber or a committee hearing.

Power left with the lieutenant governor is perfunctuory only, and consists in presiding over sessions in accordance with the new rules.

Asked to comment, Tuggle attacked the new rules as a "reprehensible ripper."

"No good can come of it," he said. "It is against the will of the majority as expressed in the election of twelve new Republicans and only six new Democrats in November. And one of the two men the Democrats got in supreme power probably would have been defeated if he hadn't been a holdover. I refer to Senator Moore."

This is the first time tne president of the Senate has been stripped of his powers since a coalition of Republicans and Rhea-Laffoon Democrats ripped them away from Lt. Gov. A. B. Chandler in 1934.
