BIBLE THOUGHT THIS WEEK

The Lord too God shall bless thee in all thy works, and in all that thou putteth thine hand unto. —Deut. 15:10

"My place of lowly service, too, Beneath thy sheltering wings I see: For all the work I have to do Is done through strengthening rest in Thee. —A. L. Waring

WE, THE PEOPLE

The national income was 142 billion dollars in 1942 and United States Secretary of Commerce says that it will be more in 1944.

The principal trouble is that the cost of so many new plans of the President are so tremendous that Congress hesitates to meet many demands of the Administration. A huge tax bill is pending before a baby Congress. The legislators are trying to keep taxation at a reasonable level.

The Treasury is having a hectic time selling ordinary war bonds and promoting the Fourth War Loan drive. It beats all how troubles keep up. Nevertheless the American people are not shirking in performing what they believe to be their full duty in supporting Government policies. But it is not strange to find good men and women, everywhere, disagreeing with President Roosevelt.

FOOD SHORTAGES

There are no explanations in Washington different from those furnished by your ration boards to explain the shortage in meats and vegetables and all other kinds of food. However, it is well known that there have been tremendous quantities of food-stuffs sent out under the lend-lease policies of the Government, perhaps almost equal to food shipped abroad for our own men in the Army and Navy. Shipments have doubtless been out of balance but the administrators claim they have done the best they knew how in distributing shipments of supplies round the world. So be patient!

CRITICS OF CHANDLER SCORED

(Editor Baslor in Woodford Sun)

Two Kentucky newspapers last week expressed themselves in terms uncomplimentary of Senator A. B. Chandler. Each newspaper sought to convey the wholly untenable premises a seat in the United States Senate by accident.

The Springfield Sun declares that "Senator Chandler would have as believe he has suddenly developed a pronounced horror of death, but death should hold no special horror for the Senator, since it was responsible for his senatorial toga."

Yes, death was, in a way, responsible for the elevation of Senator Chandler to the United States Senate in 1939. The death of Senator M. M. Logan created a vacancy in the Senate from Kentucky and Chandler, resigning as Governor was appointed to fill the vacancy. The appointment was made by Governor Keen Johnson who, as Lieutenant Governor under Governor Chandler, succeeded to the governorship.

The Harrodsburg Herald dipped a little deeper in the well of editorial venom and wrote that Chandler, while Governor, "became obsessed with the idea that the people regarded him as a statesman and seeing what he thought was a political hole through which he could be shoved, aided by a high cut to be U. S. Senator, he forgot his political pledge made on the stump and allowed the Frankfort hierarchy to act for the people instead of he, as governor, taking one of the most whom popular sentiment suggested, to be appointed."

However, both newspapers either inadvertently or willfully overlooked the fact that Senator Chandler has stood for election to the United States Senate two times since he was appointed to fill the vacancy created by the death of Senator Logan. The people, therefore, had two opportunities to express themselves at the polls and say whether Chandler should occupy a seat in the Senate.

The Springfield Sun opines that Senator Chandler has "suddenly developed a pronounced horror of death." How does that newspaper know that the Senator has developed any such horror? Does the Sun hold that the horror of death is something that automatically obliterates within himself to a greater or lesser degree—that is not something to be dealt with at all?

The Hardinsburg Herald writing in the capacity of a fortune teller professes to read the mind of every—especially the mind of Senator Chandler—and discover what is brewing there, enthusiastically jumps forward to tell its readers exactly what the Senator will do in 1944. If the editor of the Herald has such forecasting talent, he should be given an almanac not a newspaper.

An Episode Of Socialized Medicine

The following is an episode as related in Nation's Business magazine. It vividly portrays what happens when political red tape, which is inherent in socialized medicine, is allowed to infringe on the medical profession:

A young doctor had been called late at night to see a patient whom he finds suffering with lobar pneumonia. The family tells him candidly that they have no money—it proves to be a desperate case. He calls the city hospital. Will they take him in?

"Is the man a resident of this place?"

"No, he's an unemployed work er here on a visit."

"Then that rules him out. We're not allowed to take out of town cases."

Next the doctor calls in the director of the socialized welfare service and asks if she can hospitalize his patient.

"Perhaps we can arrange it. If you'll give me the name and address I'll put an investigator on it Monday."

"Monday! He'll be dead by Monday!"

Back at the patient's bedside the doctor decides that pneumonia serum combined with sulphanilamide is the one chance of saving the sick man. But they don't have it in the house. Can the doctor get it at the corner drug store?

"Why, yes, the clerk said he could get it for you. I remember distinctly." Can the doctor borrow the money to finance the purchase? "Why, yes, I guess so. I'm sure you would be good for it." Can the doctor charge the serum to the account of the patient from being handled in the mass of government ballyhoo?

"Why, no, I'm afraid not. Perhaps you can call in Monday."

Back at the bedside the doctor decides that pneumonia is going to be dead by that time unless he can get the serum.

The doctor lines up the necessary capitalized confidence with the druggist, gets the serum, administers it and saves the patient's life. Then he sends a bill for the serum to the patient from being handled in the mass of government ballyhoo.
