BIBLE THOUGHT THIS WEEK

Thou shalt be steadfast, and shalt not fear; because thou shalt forget thy misery, and remember it as waters that pass away.
—Job xi. 15, 16.

INNES BEDINGER ROSS

In reviewing the life of Judge Innes B. Ross, which ended at his home here last Thursday noon, no one could place an estimate on the worth the 73 years he lived to the city of Carlisle, Nicholas county, and the state at large. It is equally true that in the passing of this noble citizen, the loss to his family and this community is unestimable.

Judge Ross, or Innes Ross, as he was most affectionately known, was one of the most outstanding leaders in all human endeavors, including civic, legal, religious, philanthropic, fraternal, good neighbor policy, and community fidelity. His career was a busy one from early schooling till recent months when failing health forced him to relinquish his interest in the many daily activities in which he was so profoundly interested.

He was a descendant of pioneer families and worthy forebearers, educated in Carlisle schools, graduated from Kentucky Wesleyan College two years before that college was removed from Millersburg to Winchester, read law in the office of his distinguished father, admitted to the Kentucky and U. S. bars, practiced with his father and later with partner Samuel Holmes after his father's death. He continued his law practice till bad health forbade.

In addition to his busy law practice he found time and distinction in having a part in many worthy civic affairs. These included chairman of the Nicholas County Crippled Children's Association, treasurer of the Pioneer Nations Monument Association, which purchased the 250-acre tract containing the Blue Licks battlefield in Nicholas and Robertson counties. He also served as State Grand Master of the Masonic order in 1937, deacon in his church for many years, president of the Deposit Bank of Carlisle, chairman of the county Democratic committee for over 30 years and enchairman of all war bond drives during the present war.

Truly, he was a leader in the life of Carlisle, a man of energy, conviction, with wide interests, an active figure in all civic affairs, with a charitable impulse, a bearer in every good and worthy cause. His death is deeply regretable, his place cannot be filled, but it is hoped a successor will be discovered who can at least in a measure carry on where he left off.

The passing of Judge Ross removes from us a prominent citizen, "those who have known him longest and best have a feeling of genuine thankfulness for the good fortune of having known him and it is the unanimous conviction that he has left on this community a deep impress."

A family in Wisconsin habitually paid 50 cents to an Indian for a pail of blueberries. But one day last summer he upped the price to $1.00. "Why?" they asked. "Hell of a big war some place," was his laconic reply. —Wichita (Kas.) Democrat.

FOR THE HISTORY BOOKS

It is worth remembering that the freight traffic on the railroads of the United States in 1943 was nearly twice that of the peak year of World War I in 1918, while passenger traffic was more than twice as great. The 1943 record was handled without the prolonged congestion and delays of the first world war period.

And, aside this down: The 1943 job was done with one-third fewer locomotives, one-third fewer passenger cars, one-fourth fewer freight cars, and with 500,000 fewer men.

Back of this performance was twenty years of improvement in plant, equipment and operating methods resulting from more than $10,000,000,000 in additions and betterments.

Back of it also was twenty years of planned and organized cooperation between carriers, employees and users of transportation, both private and government.

This is an example of practical planning by a private industry to meet a big emergency when it occurred. It did not draw on the Federal Treasury for support. Instead, it paid in 1943, $1,870,000,000 in taxes to support government, as compared with $229,533,000 in 1918.

Such a record deserves recognition and commendation.

RETAILERS CARRY ON

The Hon. Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin, in discussing problems that the retail stores of the nation face in supplying the consumer under a multitude of restrictions, said:

"I believe there is no other group of Americans more concerned with the future of America than are the retail merchants. These retailers believe in the quality of opportunity, in justice administered impartially. They want to live and they live in an atmosphere of freedom . . . The retailers of America will spare no effort to win the war and restore and reassert the principles and the philosophy of life and government that have made America great."

Congressman Wiley pointed out that difficult as has been the experience of retailers under the OPA, they have upheld continuance of the Emergency Price Control Act as a war necessity. "However, it could have been better administered . . . As soon as the war ceases, and probably before, government restrictions and interference must be reduced to a minimum."

INCREASINGLY IMPORTANT

More and more do farmers depend on efficient marketing organizations to help them with their production and distribution problems. Such organizations need to stabilize the markets for their members, while getting them a fair return for their output. That is as much a part of scientific farming as the distinguishing and harvesting of crops.

Now therefore, be it resolved that we, the officers of the Carlisle Presbyterian church, do hereby express to the family of Mr. Ross and to the community the deep sense of loss felt by the members of this church.

And be it further resolved. That these resolution be printed in the Mercury and a copy be sent to his family and a copy spread on the church records.

DO WE APPRECIATE?

Electricity has long been so common in the United States that we are not conscious of its presence. We consider as commonplace, services and products in our country, which would be looked on as luxuries in large portions of the world.

As evidence of this, take the lowly electric clock. Many electric clocks are seldom set after they are once plugged in. Well, what of it? you may ask. Nothing, except you don't think of failure in your electric service.

It is seldom that anything but an Act of God or war would interrupt the current which you depend on using as uninterruptedly as the water you drink or the air you breathe.

Such service isn't an accident. It is the result of over half a century of tireless effort by electric companies which have been encouraged and financed by individuals, who, under the urge of unrestrained opportunity, have given this nation services and products as yet unknown to countless millions over the world.

It is sometimes well to pause and count our blessings. Outstanding in the United States is the progress that flows from private enterprise.

FARM SAFETY WEEK

Chicago, July 12—The week of July 23-29 will be observed throughout the nation as National Farm Safety Week.

The National Safety Council and all agencies interested in farm safety culture and farm life are uniting in this effort to prevent accidents that in 1943 alone killed 17,200 farm workers, and injured 1,225,000 others, many of them permanently.

President Roosevelt officially has designated the week as a period in which the attention of the nation may be called to the need for year-round care in preventing accidents on the farm and to farm people.

"Loss of life and limb among our farming population already has reached an appalling figure," said the President's proclamation. "This has lately been increased by longer hours of work and consequent fatigue. It is essential, to our war effort that this waste of vital farm power be reduced in very possible way.

"I therefore request all persons and organizations concerned with agriculture and farm life to unite in an effort, the Nation's Annual Farm Safety Week, to stimulate among farmers a full realization of the need for constant attention to safety and to the taking of precautions against the hazards of farming, and also to awaken in them a sense of responsibility, based upon proper instruction in rules of safety of the most approved and experienced persons now being employed on farms in all parts of the country."

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, War Food Administrator Marvin H. Jones and other national farm leaders also have endorsed the farm safety week as a means of emphasizing the need for preventing accidents That waste farm manpower and production vital to victory.

Attention: All Home Canners. Before you begin your 1944 canning, Good Housekeeping Magazine advises you: use the boiling water bath method for tomatoes and fruits only. Can all vegetables except tomatoes by the correct use of a pressure cooker to be sure of killing botulism germs. In the last few years, cases of botulinus food poisoning have cropped up in many different parts of the country. Buy, borrow, share a pressure cooker—but don't can low-acid vegetables any other way. If you want further information, write Good Housekeeping Magazine, 959 Eighth Avenue, New York 19, N. Y.

CANNING IMPORTANT TO FARM SECURITY FAMILIES

In every home there should be 100 quarts of fruits, vegetables, meat or poultry for each member of the family! The FSA families are striving for this goal. Last year, 1943, FSA families in Kentucky canned about 80 quarts per person, but in making their plans for 1944, the planned goal was 100 quarts per person.

Mrs. Martha E. Dorsey, Assistant Home Supervisor, says that the FSA families are making a good start on reaching this goal. And this week is a good time to take up with the canning the food in season. That is, it looks as if all women will take advantage of the opportunity to can the minimum requirement for their family — namely, 100 quarts per person.

In aiding the FSA families in Nicholas county, the FSA supervisor and Associate FSA Supervisor (HM) made definite plans for canning demonstrations, possible concerning their problems of raising the food. The people were aided in selecting ample and reliable seed. Several home demonstrations have been held in the county at FSA homes to help the women with canning problems and show them easier and surer methods of doing their work.

There is an eager interest among FSA women to raise and can as much food as possible. They are canning a wider variety of foods. They are glad to learn new and better methods of doing things and to take advantage of using small equipment such as food mills, jar lifters, and peelers to make their work easier, better, and faster. More families are becoming interested in using a pressure cooker, for they see how easy they are to use and how much time they save. Also they are learning that some foods keep better when canned under pressure.

An increase in production and preservation of food is very encouraging, and especially at this time, as it will relieve the very jar of food that is canned means more for the war effort. Through their efforts FSA families feel they are doing something to help, and indeed they are becoming happier and better fed families.

SOLDIER'S RETURN

When the years and wounds mended
Come back from the war,
What do they feel
As they file on to shore?

What do they think about?
What do they say?
Are they quiet and solemn,
Or cheerful and gay?

A lad who came back
After months "over there,"
Gave me an answer
That bordered on prayer:
"With America sighted,
What, first, did I feel?
A kinship to mankind!
Am Impulse to kneel!"
