June has been a fateful month of battle in World War II. France was defeated in June, 1940. It was in June three years ago that Adolf Hitler sent his troops marching into Russia's endless space. In June, 1942, German columns reached into Egypt and smashed toward the Caucasus in a great pincers movement that was to encompass the entire Middle East.

As the fifth June of the war opened, the design of the great Allied attack emerged: Fortress Europe was to be assaulted by blows which would come simultaneously from the west, the east and south.

WPB announces that by clipping two to three inches from the tails of men's shirts it saved enough material for ten million civilian garments.

RUSSIA TURNS BACK TO GOD

By George W. Sweeney

The Reverend Stanislaus Orlemanski went to Russia, saw Stalin, returned to America, was stripped of his priestly privileges by his Bishop, apologized for what was apparently an unauthorized jaunt, and had his privileges restored.

Whether or not Father Orlemanski had a right to make the trip to Russia, or whether his Bishop was in order in chastising him, is really no concern of the American public — that is exclusively a problem of the Roman Catholic hierarchy to settle.

What is important is that the Polish-American priest reports that he not only was cordially received by Stalin, but adds that the Russian Prime Minister, in answer to his plea for the Roman Catholic Church in Poland, the Ukraine and White Russia, went beyond my expectations and agreed not to prosecute the Roman Catholic Church not only in those countries, but in any other part of Russia. He went even further than that and agreed to co-operate with the church against persecution anywhere."

Father Orlemanski may or may not have been surprised at Stalin's most friendly reaction, but it is no revelation to this columnist. We believe that the Priest has not misquoted Stalin nor misunderstood him, and further, that Stalin means exactly what he said. We base these beliefs on Stalin's previous attitude toward religion, because soon after he ousted Trotsky from Russia and assumed supreme leadership of his country, he became convinced that freedom now in Russia's populace. In fact, he has restored complete freedom of conduct to the Russian Orthodox Church.

This is a far cry from the early days of the Russian Revolution of the early 20's when religion was publicly proclaimed the "opiate of the people," when hundreds of priests of all religious denominations were arrested and thrown into prison where they languished until their trials took place, and many, for years afterward. Pure communism cannot exist in a nation of God-fearing citizens — It can only live in a Godless atmosphere — ad so, in an attempt to make communism take root, the leaders of the Revolution engaged in mortal combat with the church organizations of that day. For a time they achieved partial success.

We have stated repeatedly that Russia is no longer communistic. Her having abandoned communism of the church is just one further proof of the truth of that statement. Joseph Stalin is as despotic governing the Soviet Union have come to believe that freedom of religion is in the best interests of Russia and her people, and the churches have come into their own once again.

Russia should not be judged on what transpired there twenty to twenty-five years ago, when the first threw off the yoke of the Czarist regime. The three outstanding leaders of that day — Lenin, Trotsky, murdered while in exile in Mexico; Zinoff executed, and while not banished from Russia, were severely censured, and died under circumstances which left fever been made clear.

Russia must be evaluated on what she is today — upon her magnificent performance in the Allis in the struggle against Hitler. Further she should probably didn't intend it, but she has by the ruthless leaders of the Soviet Union, who have come to believe that freedom of religion is in the best interests of Russia and her people, and the churches have come into their own once again.
