LOCAL RED CROSS NEWS

RED CROSS

Long, long ago, amid the curse
Of war's grim battlefield
A woman walked with outstretched hand,
The wounded men to heal

I'm sure our Lord was there that day
To bless and understand ;
As on each fevered brow she laid
A cool and gentle hand.

Today our lads have gone to war,
For us to keep us free
But o'er each field a banner flies
That bears a Cross of Red.

Ours be the task to keep it here,
We dare not count the cost,
But we must give until we share
The blessings of Red Cross.

—Mae Wells Berry.

The work of the Junior Red Cross, besides teaching children the important lesson of helping themselves and others, is contributing vastly to the war effort.

The Nicholas County Junior Red Cross, under the able direction of Miss Mary Lois Campbell, has ready for shipment to the headquarters at Alexandria, Va., the following articles: 150 crossword puzzles, 50 utility bags, 4 tan robes, 1 pomle book, 1 book cartoons, and 20 clipping books.

Mrs. J. W. Buchanan of Myers, has assisted the Junior Red Cross the past two years by making 16 lap robes from scrap to small for the school children to use, and has helped finish two other robes.

Instituted in 1917 as a repository for the school children of Canada, Australia and America to help in the Red Cross work for the men of World War I, the organization was continued in existence because school heads recognized in the Junior Red Cross an instrument for the development of the social mind of children.

First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of the soldiers and sailors—the American Red Cross.

SUGGESTS BAPTISM

Heartily congratulating his friend, Rev. James R. Thompson, Carlisle Baptist Minister, upon the arrival of a new son at his home, Rev. E. Hampton Barnett minister at the Carlisle Methodist church, can't hear learning that Rev. Thompson had planned to have the baby baptized for the ministry, suggested that if he would bring the baby over the father's ambition to train him as a minister. Rev. Barnett's suggestion was not learned.

"OTHER FELLOW" BLAMED

Did you hear the one about the fellow who was telling you about the automobile wreck he was involved in say that he was in the fault? No, he always let the other fellow who was in the fault and raised that wreck. Probably that is just one of human nature's "traits" he has to lay the blame on the "other fellow." However, sometimes the "other fellow" may be the one doing the talking—did it ever occur to you?

BALD HEADS

You would hardly see any sizable gathering of men without observing at least a few bald heads. But did you ever see a real "bald headed woman?" Some women's hair may get thinner as age creeps upon them, but I'll wager you never see a "bald headed woman." The same light as men are known to be bald headed. Could it be that some of them are bald and we men don't know it?

Not much difference is noticeable in men's hats from season to season except the terms may be wider or narrower; colors are not elaborate, nor designs very different. But the style of millinery with the ladies' head gear. It seems that each lady is trying to be different from the other lady in the style of hat she wears. Many of them I would not call hats. They don't even resemble what I call a hat, except for some of the more ultra-conservative elderly women) most of the women's head adornment don't even resemble a hat in any proportion—it neither has a crown nor brim—is it because they don't need any?

GOVERNOR BLAMES PARTISAN MAJORITY IN THE SENATE

Passage of a new state budget bill was sponsored Saturday by Gov. Simeon S. Willis. He has suggested that the Senate and House leaders confer with him on plans for the new measure, following the defeat of the budget bill prepared by the Department of Finance for approximately $6,000,000 a year. It was reported favorably to the House after being amended by the House Appropriation committee, but was defeated by the Senate. House committee amendments on condition that there be no further amendments, Gov. Willis said.

"No sooner had this bill been reported in the House than this agreement was completely forgotten and several unacceptable amendments were added in the House in violation of the agreement. The House amendments and the Senate amendments must be rejected, and the House and Senate should agree on a bill as recommended by the governor, with the amendments recommended by the House committee, and no more." the governor declared in a statement given to the press.

The Governor said "The responsibility for the situation regarding the budget bill rest squarely on the partisan majority in the Senate. The Senate amendments killed the bill."

Charles Michelson, Former Democratic Publicity Chief, Expresses View. Early Revold Discredited

President Franklin D. Roosevelt would prefer not to seek re-election but circumstances may "make it impossible for him to lay down the burden," according to the reasoning of Charles Michelson, former Democratic publicity chief, in an Associated Press interview.

Writing in the April American Magazine, Michelson also expressed the opinion that James A. Farley, former Democratic chairman, will not lead a third-party revolt against the President, but is Roosevelt's intention. he says he holds the same position as five years ago when he wrote.

"My guess is that Franklin D. Roosevelt would take a case of the hives rather than four years more of the headache that being President means. It will not be so easy a choice as that.

"Circumstances might arise that would make it impossible for him to lay down the burden." And the man in the White House is not the kind of individual who would let that consideration interfere with what seems to him his duty."

Going back to the third term, Michelson says:

"Re-election was wise if his motive, and if the people's motive, was based on the belief that, with the impending war, Roosevelt's experience made him the best qualified man to steer the nation through a stormy period. The alternative is that he only considered that no other available Democrat would be elected, and determined not to turn the government over to the party opposed to him and his policies, he therefore defied the tradition.

"Had it not been for the imminence of war, Roosevelt would never have consented to a third-term nomination; would never, in fact, have sought renomination."

As to Farley's role in the 1944 convention, Michelson has this to say:

"Knowing what I do about Farley's standing with party and having in mind his worship of the party and his overpowering selfesteem for loiters, etc
