Daring Daylight Holdup Sends Two Bandits to Jail

Attempt to Run Away With $2,800 Loot Foiled by An Elderly Man.

LONDON—Two bandits recently were sent to prison by Old Bailey court as the result of a daylight holdup in which they attempted to rob a cashier of $2,000.

The bandits were Frederick George Wetherell, 22 years old, who got a three-year term, and Herbert James Charnley, 23, sentenced to serve two years.

Wetherell pleaded guilty to robbing Chaires Herbert Wheeler, cashier, and Charnley, who denied the allegation, was told by the recorder, Gerald Dodson:

"You have put forward a story I would not have thought even you could imagine any jury could accept for a moment."

Wheeler drew the money from a bank to pay the wages of the firm's employees, and after leaving was attacked from behind by Wetherell, who snatched the bag containing the money and set off in a car which was driven away by Charnley.

Knocked Off Running Board.

Wheeler, who scrambled on to the running board, was knocked off, but the shrewd desperate attempt to make off with their haul was foiled by the action of an elderly court usher and a truck driver, Ronald Slater Brooks, of Sharpness, Gloucestershire, who, to quote Anthony Hawke, prosecutor, "with considerable presence of mind and considerable disregard for his own safety," maneuvered his car so as to overtake and intercept the bandits.

Just before the collision the usher, John Lewis, hearing shouts of "Stop them," tried to stop the car. It was driven straight at him. He jumped aside, and, as it passed, threw his stopping bag through a window of the vehicle. It struck Wetherell, who was temporarily knocked out.

When the car crashed into the truck a few seconds later Charnley jumped out and was chased into a trap. He was arrested by a police officer, to whom he said, "I have come for your protection."

Plea of Insecurity.

Charnley made a statement in which he said he met Wetherell by arrangement. Wetherell was driving a car, and when he saw the car Hattongarden Wetherell said he had a job to do.

The next thing he knew, declared Charnley, was that a struggle was taking place on the pavement, and he thought it was no place for him and started to drive away.

Charnley, in evidence, declared, "I did not take any part in the robbery, and had no idea when Wetherell left the car that he was going to commit one. When I saw him he was struggling with someone I realized something was wrong.

"The car was moving when Wetherell got on," he added. "I think he fell off. About a couple of seconds later the crash occurred. It came to me to panic, and I got out of the car and ran wildly."

Britain Declares War on Squirrels; Gives Advice

LONDON—It may be a tough winter for squirrels. The ministry of agriculture announced they are "quite good eating," and everyone can expect to see squirrel pie appearing on hotel menus. It also has a future.

Typically English in its approach to this intriguing problem, the ministry gives many pointers on how to kill the squirrels than what to do with them thereafter. Two guns and a rifle are recommended, but no one approaith for would-be squirrel hunters. Land owners, incidentally, will be prosecuted for failing to declare war on the "pests" which have been outlawed as pests this season.

Gestapo, Storm Troopers Go to Church on Order

STOCKHOLM — Heinrich Himmler, head of the Germanic Reichsthalfel and Gestapo, and Gen. Wilhelm Schepmann, chief of staff of the Nazi Storm Troops, have issued a "back to religion" order to these formations.

These bodies were ordered to attend church services on Sundays and festivities at this time of the year and were told, "Through your attendance, the faithful will believe that National Socialism is ready to cooperate with the church and religion."

Though many of Herr Himmler's followers had been brought up as atheists, the order has been obeyed. The order insisted that they wear civilian clothes.

Cities Given Right to Build Post-War Funds

Wide interest of the nation's municipalities in preparing now for the postwar era is reflected by 1943 legislation giving cities and towns legal authority to build up cash reserves for public works construction after the war.

Seven state legislatures gave their local governments such authority this year, raising to 16 the number of states where local governmental units have been given legal authority by the state to set aside funds for the future, the American Municipal Association reports.

States taking action this year were Arizona, Colorado, Oregon, California, North Dakota, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island. The nine states enacting the legislation previous to 1943 were Oregon, California, Nebraska, New York, Michigan, Washington, Kentucky, New Jersey and Massachusetts.

Three of the latter states—Michigan, New Jersey and Oregon—broadened their previously enacted legislation. Oregon, the association pointed out, was the first state to authorize municipalities to build up reserve funds, taking the action in 1931. Reason for the move in this instance was that once association says holds good today, was that Oregon's experience with where they would be paying off long-term bonds long after the projects for which the money was borrowed had worn out.

Saudi Arabia Fills Allied Gap in Arab World

Saudi Arabia, latest addition to the list of nations receiving Lend-Lease aid from the United States, fills the final gap in the United Nations ring in the Arab world. The large and strategically situated kingdom occupies the lion's share of the Arabian peninsula.

Saudi Arabia has long coastlines on the Red and the Persian gulf which afford ample supply arteries. Across the Persian gulf to the east is Iran, whose "corridor" is keeping Russia supplied with American war goods.

Two holy cities of Mohammedanism, Mecca and Medina, are in the Saudi Arabia realm. Devout Moslems try to make the pilgrimage to Mecca at least once in lifetime. Every year thousands of these faithful pilgrims make the trip. They provide the Hejaz with its principal source of income. Before its seaport 45 miles west on the Red sea, almost live on this trade.

Saudi Arabia is being struck by American engineers at several points in the kingdom. A pipe line connects one field with Ras Tanura, new Persian gulf port. Concessions and royalties for the "black gold" are greatly increasing Arabia's revenue. Pearl fishing on the east coast is also profitable.

Canning Affects Nutrients

The effect of nutritive value varies from one canning method to another. To a large extent, the factors that affect nutritive value, as well as palative value, so the product which looks and tastes the best is more likely to be of high nutritive value. Cooking temperature are important in determining vitamin retention. In general, the higher the temperature required for processing a food, the shorter the time it must be applied, the greater the destruction of vitamins.

As in freezing, the chief nutrients to be affected in canning are vitamin C and B1. Only the latter is easily destroyed by oxidation. Hence all food containers are heated before the presence of air, much larger amounts are destroyed than if air is excluded during processing. On the basis, canning in tin cans is more destructive to vitamin C especially than water-bath canning. Foods with acid reactions, since they are apt to lose considerable amounts of vitamin C. On the contrary, foods which are processed in closed containers, as the waterbath and pressure cooker, are protected to some extent from such losses.

Reinforce Sweaters

Sweaters should be examined occasionally for thin places, particularly the elbows and the underarm sections, and reinforced before they wear through or before the thread breaks. Weak places in the thread where stitches may drop should likewise be noted and caught with matching sewing thread. Once dropped stitch can be replaced with a chain stitch without being noticeable, if fastened inconspicuously on the wrong side. Ladder runs, similar to those in hose, can be repaired with a crochet hook. Latch needles, however, are best for stockings, are too fine for sweater yarns.

Train Tomato Plants

One of the best ways to manage tomato plants when planting space is limited is to train them upright in a single stem and train them upright in the way they should go. Many gardeners are using space prefer this method.

Tomato plants grown in this way give a larger yield of early fruit and, if properly spaced, about the same yield for a given amount of ground although there will be less fruit per plant. The method insures clean fruits of possibly a little better shape and color although it may increase the danger of sunscald and blossom end rot.

MT. ZION

Bro. Glenn Greese of Cincinnati, Ohio, will fill his first regular appointment with us on next Lord's Day, March 19.

Bible School at 10 o'clock, and Lord's Supper and preaching at 11 o'clock and at 7:30 p. m. Let's have a full house, for remember, this is the Lord's work and the first day of each week is His day. If you are a Christian, then Christ invites you to meet with Him around His table on His day, the Lord's day, to break bread in memory of His broken body, and the cup of the fruit of the vine, in memory of His shed blood. He said "Do this in memory of me, until I Christ, come again."

If Christ should come this Lord's day where would He find you and me? So won't you please read your Bible and do some thinking in a time like this. Then be at church somewhere Sunday.

MORE RECRUITS IS ARMORY NEED

Public Relation Department Head Inspects Local Armory, Praises Activities Here.

Lt. Col. Robert J. Myers, head of the Public Relations Department of the Kentucky Active Militia and a member of the Adjutant General's Staff, was in Carlisle Monday night for the purpose of inspecting the Armory, the equipment, and the drill of the local unit of the State Militia.

Col Meyer stated that the building and one of the best of the Armories of the State. He said it was being excellently kept and that the equipment was in the best of order and said that the Government, fully realizing the importance o the State Militia in the war emergency, was releasing much more equipment to the states for company distribution. He also praised the spirit of the officers and men of the local company and gave them freely of their time and energy to make this one of the best companies in the state. A demonstration was given of close order drill, manual of arms and rifle formations, which he asserted was most creditable. He pointed out, however, that inasmuch as most of the members of the company were under eighteen years and would therefore soon be subject to the draft call, unless there was a recruiting of older men to take the place of those constantly leaving for the armed forces, the Carlisle Company will soon be so depleted that it cannot longer function. This would probably mean a reorganization of Armory and a surrender of its keys. The State at the present time is paying for lights and heat for the Armory, no objection to its being used for legitimate civic purposes if the company is disbanded on account of lack of personnel there is little doubt that it can longer be used.

The local company was formed just after the National Guard left for service. During its existence it has given preliminary training to more than a hundred men who have entered the armed forces. aMny of these have written since telling of the great help this training has been to them after induction.

The strength of the company is forty-two. There are several vacancies and the Captain desires many more. If volunteers are not found for enlistment the company will cease to exist. Failure to bring the personnel of the company to the required strength will mean an end to this phase of the local preparedness program and the withdraw outside support of the Armory.

Col Meyers stated that he will return shortly and bring War Department motion pictures of actions in the Pacific and other areas. Due notice of the time when the public is invited to see these first-hand pictures of local troops in action.

Many have expressed appreciation of the Armory and of the part it has played and will continue to play in community life. Such sentiments crystalize into action's necessary. The prospects for next year are very encouraging. The "B" team won all its games but one, and the Junior team won the district tournament.

A program for recreation for the summer months at the field in the east end is being planned.

Ice Breaks Power Line

Carlisle residents and a large number of Nicholas county rural families were cut off from electric power Tuesday night when the heavy ice coating felled a tree across the Kentucky Utilities Company transmission line near the Clark-Montgomery county lines.

The latest and most modern styles are rural users of electric heaters for brooders. Many were compelled to move young chicks from brooder-houses into the residences to save the chicks from freezing.

Other sections affected by the interruption included Clark, Fayette, Montgomery, Bourbon, Madison and Estill counties.

RED CROSS

By WILLIAM RITCHIE

Red Cross, what art thou, we see upon the window pane?
We have seen you reel and watched you fall;
We watched you when you rose again.
We knew you in your infancy, when you were not valued much,
Until the dying soldier felt your gentle touch.

When the soldiers marched to war you were marching by their side;
You raised the head of many boys who would have bled and died.
When storm and flood invaded and everything was lost,
You restored them everything and didn't count the cost.

Now you've gone to war again while we are left at home;
God help us to support your cause and to your rescue come.
Raise the heads of all the fallen soldiers, sailors and marines
Red Cross, what art thou, we see upon the window pane?

OBSERVATIONS

WE SEE AND HEAR
By Monty

DOGS CLEAN STREETS

Recently a lady was observed to cast from the front door of a lodging house a broken egg, and all, onto the street. Within the space of only a few seconds a prowling dog was seen to come along and lick up the entire contents of the broken egg, but leaving the shell. In this instance a prowling dog helped in his own small way to keep the street clean.

PASTE-BOARD COMMUTER

A bus driver reports that he has suddenly recently to pick up a passenger who was running to make the bus. The passenger had not already boarded the bus, with a bundle of paste-board under his arm. Just as the passenger was about to mount the step, the bundle burst open and the contents fell to the ground. The passenger, of course, was forced to miss the bus. My interpretation of the expression was that the gentleman hurrying to board the bus was a company employee.

WAKING-UP SNAKES

One morning recently immediately following a spring rain and thunder-storm, I heard a commentator remark that the first heavy thunder in the spring of the year wakes up the snakes. Snakes, it is generally understood, hibernate in the earth during the winter months, but this was the first time that I had learned how they are awakened in the spring of the year.

HOLES IN TOES OF SHOES

I have yet to know the man who would purchase a pair of new shoes with the toes of the shoes open so his toes could stick out. Sometimes he may be forced, through necessity, to wear an old shoe with holes in the toe. The fad is entirely the opposite with the fairer sex. Quite a variety of the most fancy models and designs after styles of women's shoes are on the market barely wear a shoe the front open sufficient for the toes to stick out—and some with heels protruding. It may be the height of fashion to keep up with the latest and most modern styles but believe me, on cold, rainy, wet days I prefer all my lower extremities properly clothed and surely it would not be comfortable to have ones toes or heels exposed to the elements.

SLOW PROGRESS IN RED CROSS DRIVE

Campaign Committee Dissatisfied With $844.75 Given During Past Week.

The Red Cross War Fund Drive in Nicholas county was below two-thirds of the $6,500 quota at the close of tabulations late Tuesday afternoon with a total reported collected of $4,117.30. During the past week only $844.75 was collected by all workers in the county and this small sum caused definite dissatisfaction among leaders of the drive.

Some doubt is felt that the goal will be reached within the time the general public gets definitely behind the drive with a will to put it over.

Reports from drive headquarters indicate that there are far too few of the large contributions. In normal times in the general rule that a $1.00 contribution constituted membership in the American Red Cross and it is stated that it is quite difficult to convince the public that this is a war emergency and, while small contributions are appreciated and help considerably when the total is all summed up, but their is a greater need for larger contributions and donors are urged to at least double the largest donation previously made.

Nicholas county cannot afford to fall in this great cause and all workers are urged to re-double their efforts during the remaining days of the drive.

WILKIE READS TRIBUNE OUT OF THE G. O. P.

Branding the Chicago Tribune with policies which he called "economic torpism and narrow nationalism," Wendell L. Wilkie Tuesday read out of the Republican Part the Tribune, which counts that week lost in which it does not, through its editorial columns, purge the party of a prominent member who disagree with its policies.

If the Republican convention nominates a man "even slightly tainted" with the approval of the Tribune, of the American First Committee, or of Gerald L. K. Smith, Wilkie said, it will guarantee the re-election of President Roosevelt.

APRIL 3RD IS CLEAN-UP DAY FOR HENRYVILLE

The Nicholas County Health Department has set Monday, April 3rd as Clean-Up Day for Henryville on which day rubbish old tincans, etc. will be hauled away by County trucks free of charge, provided it is placed in boxes, barrels, or other containers which will make hauling easy, and placed in front of residences in Henryville where the truck can get to it without having to go into the alleys. Waste paper should be saved and therefore should not be included in the material put out to be hauled away.
