NEW METHOD TO CONTROL SHEEP PARASITES

Internal parasites of sheep is the No. 1 sheep problem in Nicholas county according to the County Sheep Improvement Committee. However, phenothiazine, a new treatment for controlling stomach worms in sheep is now available. This new treatment according to tests by the Kentucky College of Agriculture and a large number of individual farmers is by far the most effective control method ever used.

It is important that recommendations be followed carefully in using phenothiazine. Ewes should be treated individually with either a phenothiazine pellet or drench soon after lambing. (It is dangerous to treat ewes with phenothiazine sooner than six weeks before lambing time.) This individual treatment serves to clean the intestines of parasites and the ewes will remain in this condition until about May 1. Beginning May 1, keep phenothiazine before the ewes and lambs throughout the summer. This summer treatment should be administered by mixing one pound of phenothiazine powder with nine pounds of salt and made available at all times to the flock. No other salt should be made available to the sheep.

The success in using phenothiazine is dependent on the individual ewe treatment about lambing and using the salt mixture continuously throughout the summer. Phenothiazine is very effective in controlling the nodular worm a parasite causing tremendous damage to the sheep business. No other treatment ever used has controlled this parasite. This new method is also very effective in controlling roundworm, hookworm and thread worm. However, it is very effective in controlling the tape worm but fortunately, the tape worm causes little damage to sheep.

Additional information on the use of phenothiazine is available by contacting the County Agent's office.

BEST BRAINS NEEDED TO ACHIEVE VICTORY

WASHINGTON.—It is very probable that Mr. Roosevelt will name his government immediately for victory and the fourth term campaign.

Now, as never before, he needs brains in the top places. With the chaotic condition of the world, with our ability to survive questioned on every front—financial, diplomatic, economic, military—the best politics and simplest sense demands the best manpower in government as well as in the army, factories, and field.

You cannot win without power at the top. Yet Mr. Roosevelt's own senate leader has now publicly proclaimed what everyone else knew, namely that the cabinet and presidential advisers fall far short of representing the best intelligence and experience of the country.

In the beginning, to satisfy this deficiency, Mr. Roosevelt brought in the Byrnes, Baruch, Vinson, Jones setup as a super cabinet. As Senator Barkley noted, this has not been enough.

Any ordinary man in Mr. Roosevelt's spot would go out and draft the best men of the nation to handle subjects they know best. A belated move along that line is imminent.

Anonymous news has been appearing in the press suggesting a few cabinet changes are under consideration. The question is whether they will go far and deep enough.

SOME PROSPECTS:

Stettinius, ambassador, the state undersecretary, is receiving some publicity as a possible vice presidential nominee instead of the left-leaning Wallace. This talk originated with no friend of the vice authority than Democratic National Chairman Hannegan.

Mr. Stettinius has an ex-big business background in Morgan and Co. He is not unlike that of Mr. Willkie. Certainly Stettinius is being groomed to succeed Mr. Hull, when and if.

Foreign Economic Administrator Leo Crowley also has mentioned the Isbogan and a successor is needed for him.

A sounding-out rumor has been published that Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones might go to the treasury with Joseph P. Kennedy as ambassador to Britain, replacing him. The rumor is probably off the mark.

Mr. Kennedy's best business brain is regarded as the best in the country and the place for him is treasury. When big business leaders get in trouble, they call on him to straighten them out for an extraordinary fee which they must pay because no one else can do the job.

In the current international financial dilemma (Keynes-White international currency stabilization and even domestic loan) Mr. Roosevelt could get him for a $10,000 a year cabinet salary, whereas a private corporation seeking his services would have to pay 10 to 20 times as much. Why not?

The only objection is political. Mr. Kennedy is extremely disliked by certain contrary political elements as an appeaser—and deservedly also as an Anglophile.

This is world war, and more than that, it is war for revolution with a new. The question of ... up to ... is far, far ... for a ... a good political appointment ... admits. But ... and with ... best p... ities would be no pol...

WEAKNESS FOUND IN ADMINISTRATION

Mr. Roosevelt, in ... in the closed fraternity of h... ow top advisers after his third term victory, is supposed to have complained that the Republican campaign against him was weak and technically deceptive. As they remember it, he put it something like this:

"If I had been planning their campaign I would not have made the fight against me, but against the men around me."

Mr. Roosevelt certainly knew his weakness. That weakness has now been publicly exposed again by the courage of his own Democratic Senate Floor Leader Barkley. No one has risen to dispute Barkley's charge that the President is at least partly surrounded with men he (Barkley) described as slavish or worse—"a mind more clever than honest." That long has been a glaring Washington deficiency.

The public has assumed Barkley was shooting at treasury officials who normally would submit data for a veto message on the subject of taxes. Inside congress that assumption is rejected.

Barkley is believed to have had in mind one particular Roosevelt adviser who did most of the work on the veto message—a man not in the treasury.

The departure of this man from the White House coterie may be necessary before a more friendly undercurrent of relations with congress is possible.

Chinese Tells of 131 Days Adrift On South Atlantic

Hooked Fish With a Nail, Ate Blackbirds and Sang Folk Songs.

MIAMI, FLA.—A 25-year-old Chinese mess steward, survivor of one of the severest trials of human endurance, told here how he used a bent nail for a fish hook to help him survive 131 days adrift on a liferaft.

Poon Lim, now almost recovered from his ordeal after treatment in a hospital in Brazil, recalled that he subsisted during the months the waves tossed the small raft on the South Atlantic by singing folk songs from his native Hainan island.

It was on the morning of November 23, 1942, that a submarine torpedoed the British merchantman on which Poon Lim was serving as second steward. On April 3 he was picked up off the coast of Brazil by the crewmen of a small fishing vessel. Three more days passed before the fishing boat reached land, yet Poon Lim managed to go ashore.

Provisions on Raft.

Naked, except for the shreds he wore when the torpedo exploded, Poon Lim was washed overboard as he tried to launch the raft. He still has not learned the fate of his 34 shipmates.

For more than an hour the steward swam until he sighted an unoccupied liferaft and climbed on it. The raft's food and water stores were intact.

"The food lasted 55 days," the stoical Chinese explained to an interpreter. "The water held out 65 days."

After the provisions were gone, Poon Lim extracted a nail from the raft, bent it and used it for a fish hook. He unraveled rope and fashioned a fishing line.

Parts of biscuit and the bright cloth which covered the ship provided bait for small fish, which he then used to lure bigger fish.

Frequent rainfall provided water, which he caught in a canvas and kept in the raft's container.

Poon Lim counted the days from a small calendar he had. On the seventh day a ship passed within a half mile of him. Several times he sighted airplanes.

Ate Blackbirds.

Toward the end of his ordeal, blackbirds came to rest on the raft at night and he caught them for food and bait.

Once he fell overboard, but the sea was calm and he managed to swim back to the raft.

Poon Lim felt dizzy several times and suffered slight attacks of fever, but was bothered mostly by the gnawing pains in his stomach caused by the near-starvation diet.

After about 128 days, he saw the outline of land many miles away, but could not maneuver the raft toward it.

An airplane flew low overhead, circled and came back, but flew away again. Later, the pilot told Poon Lim in the hospital that he had seen him the first time, but

Gay Dogs Lavish $421.98 On Two Strange WAACs

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—A couple of doggy-minded people call them that, but friends insisted their mission was not entirely canine.

The couples pooled on before to WAACs Corporals Mary Bowling of Kansas and Mildred Gardner, Indiana, and bought a purse in his mouth. The purse contained a total of $421.22. Only the canines know where the money came from.

Police said if the owner wasn't found the WAACs could keep the money.

The dogs? They disappeared—probably went back for more capital.

British Jail Soldiers For Careless Gossip

LONDON — The British government, warning against careless talk, revealed that a number of soldiers had been cautioned or jailed for disclosing military information.

One case described in a published digest was that of "a senior officer, broken and sent up for a year because he gossiped to a dinner friend about a second front."

Another soldier who arranged a code with his wife to let her know where he would be stationed, drew a six-month sentence.

Killer Lives on Stolen Wheat for Three Months

BOISE, IDAHO. — A man who lived on football tickets and candy for nearly three months was under sentence of death for the slaying of a Ferdinand, Idaho, store owner.

The convicted man was William Behler of Grangeville, Idaho. He testified he had lived in a forest but near Ferdinand for three months, with nothing for food but wheat stolen from a neighbor. He said he broke into the store owned by John Gilberts when he was driven to desperation by hunger.

POEM REPRODUCED HONORING MARINE

ing. The Mercury reprints the following in his honor:

"ONLY HIS FATHER"

Because I am his father, they Expect me to put grief away
Because I am a man and rough.
And sometimes short of speech and gruff.
The women folk at home believe
My silence doesn't make me grieve.

But how I felt they little know.
The day I smiled and let him go.
They little knew the dreams I had

Long cherished for my sturdy lad;
They little guessed the wrench it meant.
That day when off to war he went.
They little knew the tears I checked.
While standing smiling and erect.
They never heard my smothered sigh.
When it was time to say good bye.

"What does his father think and say?"
The neighbors ask from day to day.
"Oh, he's a man!" they answer then,
And you know how it is with men—
He seems indifferent and grim.
And yet he's very proud of him.

Indifferent and grim! Oh, heart!
Be brave enough to play the part.
Let not your real grief be shown.
Keep all your loneliness unknown.
To you the women folk must turn
For comfort when their sorrows burn.
You must not at this time reveal
The pain and anguish that you feel.

Oh, tongue, be silent though the tears
And eye keep always back the tears.
And let them never see or know
My hidden weight of grief and woe.
Though every golden dream I had
Was cherished in my dear young lad.
Alone my sorrows I must bear—
They must not know how much I care!

Though women folk may talk and weep,
A man unseen his grief must keep.
And hide behind his smile and pride
The loneliness that dwells inside.
And so from day to day I go
Playing the part of man, although
Beneath the rough outside and grim,
I think and pray to God for him

Henry Keller, for whom the above was written, is serving his country again in World War II as a petty officer in the U. S. Navy and after duty in the North Atlantic the next year, is now in the South Pacific theatre of war.

BARTERVILLE SCHOOL NEWS

Our attendance has been cut down quite a bit in each room because of Scarlet fever; measles; chicken pox, and that bad sore throat. We think the danger is over by this time; so we hope the children will come back to pass their grades.

The 4-H Club had its regular meeting Friday afternoon, with Edward Small presiding. There were several readings and songs by the following pupils: Aggie Fryman. Trianni Hollar, Boulah Wagoner, Lillian Wagoner, and Bonnie Sapp; giving the readings, and Beulah Wagoner, Mildred Burden, Lillian Wagoner, and Aggie Fryman giving the songs. Almeta Wagoner and Della Mae Green from the primary room gave a duet. Mr. Straw, our County Agent came on Wednesday and gave the club some interesting instructions about their projects. The meeting adjourned until the second Friday in April.

Clay Ritchie is giving the Food and Poultry Demonstration each Thursday evening at 7:30 which is quite interesting and instructive. If you are interested in seeing canneries placed in different parts of the county where you can do your canning easily, quickly and cheaply, come on Thursday, this week and help get them going. The discussion last Thursday evening was quite lively and interesting. You will be very welcome and a help in this project. There will be other speakers and perhaps pictures later on.

Poets and poetesses take heed. The Governor of Kentucky has set aside Friday, April 7th, as Kentucky Poetry Day. Everything is to be Kentucky poetry on that day, in history, language, geography, and everything else. So we have Kentucky poems send them in. Or perhaps your music might inspire you to a masterpiece, by which you might acquire fame if so send them to the Barterville school and we shall do our utmost to help you climb that ladder, by having the children recite them. Come on, Mac Berry, Miss Clay and Miss Hollar. Help the teachers of your local schools out on that day.

BAREFOOT

Mr and Mrs. Roy Livergood were the week-end guests of her parents, Mr. Floyd Platt and family.

Glad to report that Mrs Johnnie Livengood, who was soperated on at Lexington, is getting along fine.

Raymond Coy was the Sunday guest of Pharoah Feeback.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Platt were the week-end guests of Johnnie Livengood and family.

Sallie Coy is suffering with mumps.

Jitters in Japan

By Joseph Newman

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Liberty Magazine)

Japan is getting the jitters. We have it on no less an authority than Emperor Hirohito and his No. 1 war lord, General Hideki Tojo. Hirohito has told his puppets openly that the outlook for Japan is now "truly grave," and Tojo underscored the divine insight of the god-emperor by adding that the war situation is very much neglected.

This, in the customary Japanese manner of breaking bad news gently, is another way of saying: "The Yanks are coming."

And the Japanese man in the street, who for centuries has lived in his wooden clogs and traditional kimono or wears the pinching leather shoes and tight-fitting uniform copied from his occidental enemies, is beginning to realize. It means that the despised Yankees are on their way to the heart of the Japanese Empire—and that they're coming with skyfuls of bombs for the industrial nerve center from which stems the terror and destruction that has been imposed upon Asia and the Pacific.

The Japanese, far better than their enemies, knew just how vulnerable they are. They knew that one short enter rim of defense is cracked, the heart of the empire will be exposed to a deathblow. That's why the Japanese, in their opening stroke at Pearl Harbor, made sure at the time they could go to the north, south, east, and west, so as to shield the Americans from all bombing bases within reach of their Pacific island chain.

And that's why, now that the outer rim is crumbling, Hirohito, Tojo, and their fire-snuffing Japanese war lords are very unhappy. They have heard what round-the-clock bombing has done to Berlin, Hamburg, Frankfort, and other industrial centers of their retreating German partner. They know, as do Americans who have lived in Japan for any length of time, that the six key industrial cities of Japan will burn as fast as—if not faster and more fiercely than—their Nazi equivalents in Germany.

Most Vulnerable Country.

The six key centers are Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya, Kyoto, Yokohama, and Kobe. I have lived in each and at all of them—the industrial Ruhr of Japan—and I was often impressed by the thought of how quickly Japan could be snuffed out as a world power by igniting the huge, sprawling fire-traps from the air. A good, stiff wind, which invariably blows over these coastal centers from the sea, strengthened this thought and suggested how nature, combined with feverish, careless construction of these cities served to make Japan the most vulnerable country in the world.

The construction was careless because the Japanese had neither the time nor the money nor the desire to change the basic layout of the cities from a feudal to a modern one.

Thus there was a mushroom growth of sprawling factories among the flimsy, wooden, bamboo houses packed tightly together in areas known which there are often only dirt alleys or footpaths instead of paved streets. After the devastating earthquake and fire of 1923 some streets were enlarged and some modern innovations were introduced. But this was limited to the business sections of Tokyo and Yokohama.

The layout and structure of the greater part of the Japanese capital and the key eastern port of the country are about as primitive as they were 2,603 years ago.

In Nagoya, Kyoto, Kobe and Osaka conditions are similar to those of Tokyo and Yokohama. The downtown business areas are full of concrete and steel, but the larger sections of the cities, where most of the homes and many of the factories are located, are covered with a forest of wooden boxes, which millions call home. So that even the fireproof structures are trapped in the forests of wood and paper houses which, when touched off by a Yankee incan bomba, will turn into infernos.

The heavy concentration of industry and other military objectives in the six leading cities provides something of a bomber's dream.

Plenty of Targets.

If he comes from the east and flies westward over the main island of Honshu toward China, as the British raiders did, the first target he will find in his homeplate will be Yokohama. Here the principal targets are the harbor, one of the two largest in the country, shipbuilding yards, warehouses, metal, machine-tool, and chemical plants, textile and rubber mills, and an automobile factory. The 18-mile strip between Yokohama and Tokyo is packed solid with industries turning out machines and machine tools.

Improved Uniform International SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for March 26

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

THE SACREDNESS OF LIFE (TEMPERANCE LESSON)

LESSON TEXT: Gen. 1:27, 28; Matt. 12:11, 12; Rom. 14:19-21; I Cor. 6:19, 20.

GOLDEN TEXT: Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit?—I Corinthians 6:19.

A high and ennobling concept of the value of human life is an important element in Christian thought. The Word of God always regards human life as sacred—a gift of God to be used for His glory, never to be exploited for gain or destroyed at will.

This important truth needs constant reiteration in a social order which is so thoroughly pagan that it will permit the destruction of human life in the sale and use of alcoholic beverages. The lesson has a special application to the liquor problem.

I. God Honored Man (Gen. 1:27, 28).

It should be of primary interest and concern to Christians that God Maker and Lord thinks of His creation, man. He knows what is in man and if we learn of Him we shall learn the way to live aright. It is well to note first that when God made man—

1. He Made Him in His Own Image (v. 27).

The teaching of Scripture makes it clear that this image was not marred by physical likeness but rather a likeness of personality. As God is a personal, moral, intelligent Being, so is man.

How tragic then that man will not only reject that grace, but will subject his God given personality to the destructive power of alcohol!

Not only did God make man in His image, but—

2. He Gave Him Power and Dominion (v. 28).

This is the very thing man is seeking, and here we learn that the only One who had a right to give it—God Himself—bestowed it upon man.

Having dominion over the entire earth, man is in a place of responsibility. He must make wise moral choices, but for the welfare of others. Think that over as it relates to the ever-growing liquor problem.

II. Man Should Honor Man (Matt. 12:11, 12; Rom. 14:19-21).

Since God has such a high regard for man, it is clear that we ought to have real respect for our fellow man. "Man's inhumanity to man" is often declared to be the world's greatest difficulty. It would not be so if God's Word were heeded. Man would learn that—

1. He Should Recognize His Fellow Man's Value (Matt. 12:11, 12).

Property values are so well to the front in the thinking of all, that it requires no argument to convince anyone that a sheep that has fallen into a pit should be rescued. But the sad thing is that the man who would run for help to rescue a sheep in that predicament will hardly cast an interested glance at the drunk in the gutter, or lose a few minutes sleep over the girls who are going to hell by way of our countless taverns.

The plain fact is that we do not regard a man as of more value than a sheep. Many a neighborhood has been stirred to angry reprisal over the poisoning of a pet dog, but will let the liquor dealer poison men and women—all for a small license fee.

The man who loves his fellow man knows that—

2. He Should Sacrifice for His Fellow Man's Good (Rom. 14:19-21).

Paul here states a high principle of Christian consideration. He makes clear that man is his brother's keeper and must do nothing which will tempt his brother to do that which will harm him.

III. Man Should Honor Himself (I Cor. 6:19, 20).

Man is told not to think more highly of himself than he ought to think (Rom. 12:3), and that is good counsel. But at the same time he ought to think as highly of his own being as God does. He should recognize that—

1. His Body Is the Temple of the Holy Spirit (v. 19).

The Bible teaches that the moment a man believes in Christ his body becomes the dwelling place of the Holy Spirit. That means that he must never take that body in any place (such as a tavern) to do anything or partake of anything (like intoxicants) which would dishonor the Holy Spirit of God.

2. He Belongs to God (v. 20).

Men have been given a free will by God. He has given them the right of self-determination. That does not abrogate God's right to man's devotion and love.

The fact that we are free to choose should make us the more determined that the right choice should be made—that we shall glorify God in our bodies, which are His.

Does it take even a moment's thought to tell us that the violation of that body (and every bit of scientific evidence proves it to be a violation) by the use of alcohol is not only disobedient, but sinful rebellion against God.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Battle Wagons

When Japan attacked at Pearl Harbor we had 17 battleships in service and 15 building. We were making preparations but the war did not wait. These 32 battle wagons cost American taxpayers three billion dollars for a two ocean navy. The war seemed far away then.

Now fifty million Americans have a personal stake in this war. It has been brought home to them. That's why everyone is increasing purchases of War Bonds.
