BIBLE THOUGHT THIS WEEK

Then Peter said unto them, repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. Acts 2:38

IT ALWAYS HAPPENS

The Lexington Leader comments as follows:

"Report is that Trainer Max Hirsch has rejected a colt on which he made a high bid at the Keeneland sales. We'll just bet that colt wins the 1946 Kentucky Derby. It always happens to those that are turned down."

The colt referred to is a product of the Forest Retreat farm near Carlisle, owned and operated by Dr. Elzie Asbury, Cincinnati.

A NEW INDUSTRY IS BORN

New industries are the inevitable aftermath of the tremendous human effort involved in modern war. After the last war it was the automobile. After this war, which has hinged on air power, it will be the airplane. The aviation industry, including commercial air transportation, has a future that literally staggers the imagination. The Administrator of Civil Aeronautics, Charles I. Stanton, predicts 300,000 civil aircraft three years after the war, and 500,000 by the end of the first postwar decade. He believes that there will be a need for double the existing 3,000 airports.

Even during the present war, the commercial air carriers have turned in a performance little short of miraculous. By nearly doubling the number of hours aloft for each aircraft, they were able with half the equipment to fly 15 pct. more revenue passenger miles in 1943 than in 1942, 31 pct. more express pound miles, and 70 pct. more mail pound-miles. Yet stepped up service was not attained at the sacrifice of safety. Number of miles flown per fatal accident in domestic air carriers operations reached an all-time high of 46,560,835 in 1943, against 22,020,572 in 1942.

Coincident with the growth of the air carriers to the stature of a full fledged service industry, has risen the problem of regulation. As the close of the war draws nearer and as further expansion of aviation impends, this problem becomes increasingly serious. There is danger that conflict between the state and the Federal government will hamper efficient airline service. An example of such conflict threatens in Congress, which has under consideration a set of airline regulations which, if put in force, would contradict and overlap existing Federal laws, making airline operation through Colorado virtually impossible.

Unquestionably, regulation of the airlines must be unified. How it is to be done is the immediate concern of Congress. The fate of a vast new industry hangs in the balance.

ALL IN SAME BOAT

How to avoid unemployment after the war is a grim question that is foremost in everyone's mind. But job-creating industry and its problems, which are determining factors in the lives of all of us, is not receiving the public consideration it deserves.

Too many people still look upon industry as an entity unto itself. They feel that tax and legislative measures affecting industry are things for the "big guys" to worry about. They don't realize that when a corporation gets clapped in the face with crippling legislation or taxation, eventually the effect is reflected in the capacity to produce, and the little guy as well as the big guy gets bit between the eyes by loss of employment, or restricted output.

For example, when you take an aspirin, you are using a derivative of coal. Thus, although you may live thousands of miles from the Virginia coal fields, you are dependent on the coal industry. In fact, the bathroom cabinet would be swept nearly bare if the coal industry should fold up and quit. In addition to aspirin, bituminous coal derivatives are used in making laxatives, rubber goods, and perfumes, to say nothing of the life saving sulfa drugs. These things are incidental to the more primary uses of coal which maintain the war effort, heat and light our homes and drive our trains and make steel.

Coal is typical of many industries employing millions of American workmen. In common with other industries, it is meeting its problems aggressively and resourcefully, with two objectives in view—more production and more jobs.

GOOD PLANS—BUT

Various tax plans have been proposed in an effort to establish a Federal taxing system which would insure adequate governmental revenue and at the same time encourage the productivity of industries and individuals.

All of these plans have a common characteristic. They have been evolved by the best brains in the country and are constructed chiefly to bring the monstrous problem of Federal taxation under control before it destroys the very freedom for which American men are fighting in every corner of the world. But—and there is a very large but—no plan will work unless the politicians and the people sincerely wish it to work. The old battle of class taxation, with group pitted against group, each seeking to unload taxes onto the other fellow, if continued, will block any sane tax plan.

Socialization Of Power

By JOHN E. DAVIS

WHILE the electric power industry remains predominantly under private ownership and management, a considerable segment is now conducted by Federal or local public bodies. High wartime taxation has given an artificial advantage to public power agencies (like T.V.A.) which escape government taxes, since up to 25 per cent of the gross revenue of private companies now goes to pay taxes.

This abnormal tax advantage, if continued, will threaten the survival of private enterprise in the power industry, as well as others. During the war, when the demand for power has risen sharply to new peak levels, greatly increased sales have tended to offset some of the unfavorable factors in the situation confronting the private utilities. When the war ends, however, the issue of further socialization of the electric power industry will again become a live one.

The private utilities (such as Kentucky Utilities Company) have achieved a splendid war record, but so long as they remain subject to burdensome and highly discriminatory taxation, as compared with public power agencies, and to competition from subsidized Government projects, they are placed at an unfair disadvantage.

The threat facing the private utility companies is coming into the open. The tax-paying public is beginning to realize that the private utility company pays very high taxes from which public power facilities are largely free, and that some public power projects enjoy the free use of Government funds.

Fair-minded citizens see the injustice of this situation. A growing number of them are beginning to understand that socialization of the power industry will be followed by socialization of other essential industries.

This dangerous socialistic process (imported from central Europe) means an expansion of bureaucracy. It means also that these essential industries become political machines as fast as they are socialized.

When this happens, efficient operation, first-class service and low rates cease to be. But the tax burden becomes heavier and heavier on the individual and he has less and less freedom to choose his own way of life.

(An advertisement of Kentucky Utilities Company).
