BIBLE THOUGHT THIS WEEK

The Lord hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary. Isa. 1-4.

THE TOBACCO SITUATION

A united strong appeal is published in this issue of The Mercury for help to the farmers who are in distress for the lack of laborers to cut and house the many acres of unusually fine tobacco grown in Nicholas county. The situation is a serious one and unless every ounce of available help is forth-coming the result will be a considerable loss to many Nicholas farmers and this means a loss to business interests of Carlisle as well.

There is a certain amount of interdependence existing with the farmer and business man that is inseperable if either is to continue prosperous in his field. The farmer needs the merchant and the merchant needs the farmer—especially is this true at this moment. It is carrying out the "good neighbor" policy in its truest sense, when your neighbor farmer needs laborers to go to his relief rather than sit all day on a box and whittle. If the farmers fail Mr. Merchant might as well close up as he will have nothing else to do but sit on a goods box and whittle. Read the united appeal for help in the tobacco crop elsewhere in this issue.

COMMEMORATING V-DAY

When V-Day comes the civilized world will celebrate or hold some form of service in commemoration of the victory over the arch enemy of the human race, the tyrants of Europe who have turned the world progress into a mass building of death-dealing devices and the slaughter of the human race. This day should be a solemn day for America, since many homes now have, and will have vacancies that will never be filled again.

It is appropriate that the president of the Carlisle ministerial association had that purpose in mind when he planned an assembly of all citizens at the Christian church at 8 o'clock for memorial services in keeping with the historic hour when Germany capitulates. Dr. Crabb, of the Presbyterian church, who will direct the service, believes, as many others do, that this occasion should be one that will leave a lasting impression on each person who attends.

This will not be an hour for waving flags and beating drums, as some victors would celebrate over the vanquished, but a sacred pledge by those who are to assist in rebuilding a war-torn world, that they will go about their task with a determination that the awful tragedy of war shall not again destroy the youth of the land for generations to come.

NEW OPPORTUNITIES

Our nation has long enjoyed superior distribution of its domestic products to consumers. In the not distant future, it will enjoy a similar distribution of world products. That this is no idle dream is evidenced by the announcement of low-cost commercial air service designed to expand postwar international trade and tourist travel. One line has already announced passenger fares to compete with steamships and has made drastic cuts on cargo rates.

To gain some idea of the potential international cargo business, it is interesting to note that domestic air express totaled 48,699 shipments in July, an increase of 16.7 per cent over July, 1943, according to the Railway Express Agency. This is a foretaste of the volume that will develop with expanded international trade. Combination air and rail express service for the shipping public is accomplished through the coordination of schedules which link the 350 airport cities in the United States and Canada with the 23,000 off-air-line offices of the Railway Express Agency.

With the coming postwar aviation program, unimagined avenues of trade will be opened to every corner of the world. Our distribution system is now being coordinated to render a service never before dreamed of. Thousands of new jobs will come into being along with thousands of new opportunities for advancement.

American enterprise is ready and waiting for the starting signal.

AMERICAN ENTERPRISE SCORES AGAIN

After two years research, the announcement is now made that the oil industry is ready to produce at the command of the military forces a new super-fuel for aviation so much more powerful than 100-octane gasoline that it will permit maximum bombing of the Japanese mainland on a "suburban service schedule." While the chemical details of the new product are withheld, the Petroleum War Council has disclosed that this fuel, called "100-octane plus," is expected to surpass all other gasolines in the world in volatility and consequent performance.

William B. Boyd, Jr., Chairman of the Council, said that the product was designed to "draw from the lethal B-29 Superfortress and the futuristic B-32 Bombers and the most modern fighter escort planes, their originally intended maximums in sustained speed, climb, combat radius and load-carrying capabilities."

It should be stated that this is just another accomplishment of private enterprise in the United States which again surpasses anything the dictators and their totalitarian governments have ever accomplished.

VOLUNTARY HEALTH PROGRAMS INCREASING

It is probably safe to say that no country in the world is developing group health insurance plans as rapidly as the United States. This form of security for individuals and families is being aggressively promoted by the principal underwriters.

Studies indicate, according to the Nation's business, that employers may obtain complete health coverage for all workers and families (without medical examinations) at from 1-2 to 2 cents per payroll-dollar—the cost being generally shared half by the employer and half by the employee.

Group health insurance, including doctors, hospitals, operations, accidents and maternity, covers potential new business of $500,000,000 in annual premiums. With this amount of business involved it is safe to say that American ingenuity and enterprise will work out the finest and most economical health insurance measures the world has ever seen.

Polls show that workers prefer employer-sponsored plans to compulsory Federal programs under social security. And why shouldn't they? When plans remain voluntary, the worker retains his independence and his choice of systems. When they become compulsory under government domination, the worker loses his independence and takes what he is told to.

SHAME!

We are now witnessing the most disgraceful example of public begging by political subdivisions of government that this nation has ever seen. Starting with the Federal hydro-electric projects which were built as tax-exempt business enterprises, we have seen cities, towns, and REA electric projects seeking the same kind of tax charity.

The reason why such tax exemption should be called "tax begging" is because a community that asks tax exemption for its business activities, really asks that the rest of the taxpayers of the nation dig up the public funds necessary to make up for rate reductions which it seeks to secure through tax exemption privileges.

The city of Louisville, Kentucky, is an outstanding example. Not only do the local politicians propose to take over the privately-owned electric plants but a main argument for so doing, they show how the city, if it owns the plant, under present laws granting tax exemption, can escape nearly 3½ million dollars a year paid in taxes by the private company to the Federal government.

Not only Louisville, but other communities are now using this tax-begging argument to promote public ownership of electric projects.

Carry this process to its logical conclusion, and where would the Federal Treasury receive its revenue to maintain the legitimate functions of government? There is only one answer—it would have to tax remaining taxpayers more heavily or tax the tax-exempt parasites. If publicly-owned plants were taxed, the main argument now advanced by bad beggars to put private enterprise out of business, would be ended.

Suppose a private electric company would ask for exemption from taxation in order that it could therefore sell its product for 20 to 25 per cent; what a howl would go up from every taxing agency in the country. And yet when the politicians of a great city advance the argument that municipal ownership means cheap electric property, the city can exempt all Federal taxes, nothing is said by the taxing agencies of government.

Why should the patrons of a municipally-owned plant be favored with lower rates through tax exemption? This is a serious one in a nation which is prohibited by law in private business. It is high time the people saw how they are being gypped by tax-begging communities and government projects which are maintained as business enterprises in competition with private industries which support government.

LOCAL RED CROSS NEWS

A report of activities of the Nicholas county chapter, American Red Cross for the months of August has been made by the secretary, Mrs. Frank Henry, as follows:

Home service clients interviewed in office, 33; Army, Navy and air service cases mentioned from last month 7; intake during month 18; continued to next month 7; furlough investigations 10; home visits 3.

Nine dozen kits were filled and packed for soldiers. The kits contained 24 pairs bed sheets, 72 bed side bags, 11 bed shirts, 17 pairs pajamas and 3 pairs socks. Forty-two sweaters were shipped out from the production rooms during the month.

A new quota of hospital supplies is to be set up, and because of the large number of casualties in Europe and the South Pacific, the Red Cross has issued an emergency call for these supplies. The sewing supervisor is anxious for the formation of groups to work in the production rooms to help fill this quota as soon as possible. These articles are simple and easy to make and by a concentrated effort the quota can soon be made. Yarn has also been shipped for knitting.

"IT HAPPENS EVERY DAY"

(Sunday Herald, $67.14 on account of man who deserted his family after his death than he had during his lifetime came out in a story whose final scenes were enacted in one of the field offices of the Social Security Board.

A woman, poorly but neatly dressed, accompanied by three small children, asked to see the manager of the office in the town where she lived. Out of her pocketbook, she drew a soiled social security card.

"My husband, Jim, sent me this from his last pay check," she said. "He told me to bring it here when I got news of his death. We received the telegram from the hospital yesterday."

She was composed and quiet as she spoke, showing no signs of grief. Asked for details, she told her story. Her husband, a carpenter, had deserted her and their two children. He had come back when the youngest was barely a year old. Penniless, she and the children had been taken in by her parents who lived on a farm.

"Sometimes he sent us checks," she said, "but never more than $5 at a time. I went to court once and the judge said Jim must send me $20 every month. But I couldn't collect it. I didn't know where Jim was most of the time, except that he didn't earn good money, but it always went through his fingers. He was a free spender; he should never have married. Now that's dead," she added, "sends me this What good is it?"

Investigation of the man's social security account showed that his widow and their three young children were entitled to benefits totaling $67.14 a month in survivors' insurance. She was explained to her on her second visit to the social security office the woman broke down.

"Now, at last, I needn't be ashamed to talk to the children about their father," she declared. "I'll tell them that he was a hero even if them until they're old enough to work."

Incidents like these are frequent in the course of a day's work in a Social Security field office. Widows, young children, dependent aged parents learn what a broadminded social security account means to them.

TOBACCO HARVEST PLANS ANNOUNCED

pose, E. M. Norsworthy, Carlisle superintendent, and W. C. Dampier county superintendent, have announced.

However, the superintendents request that parents give their consent to this plan by providing signed statements of approval and permission to be approved accordingly.

Because of the shortage of labor the thought of a holiday for school children has arisen. The school officials feel that this is unwise since a large number of children who are too small to work in tobacco would be out of school. The holiday would delay closing in the spring, too, when labor shortage may be a problem again.

Teachers have been instructed to give special attention to children who are working in tobacco and allow opportunity for them to make up work they have missed. On days unfit for tobacco harvest children are requested to attend school and to hold to a minimum the number of days out of school.

County Farm Bureau Studies War Prisoner Help—

Mr. F. E. Piper, president of the County Farm Bureau, called a meeting of the County Farm Bureau Executive Committee and Bureau director Sun. afternoon to discuss the prisoner of war problem. After determining that war prisoners could be used only in units of ten men and one guard, it is believed that very few farmers would use this help. However, if definite applications are made by farmers for prisoner help, at the County Agent's office, efforts will be made to meet this help.

The Farm Bureau committee urged greater neighborhood cooperation in the scrap of help, and asked for all possible workers to register for farm work. Farmers are facing a critical problem in housing tobacco and a shortage of help is expected through the corn harvest.

Carlisle Rotary Cooperates—

Dr. G. T. Cowan, president of Carlisle Rotary club, named a committee to work with the farm labor problem. This committee is composed of Cleary Fightmaster, Emory Clark, Paul Garrett, G. B. Pruitt, and W. T. Straw. The committee met and outlined the dependence of businessmen and farmers, and urged all possible efforts of merchants in making emergency help available to farmers.

Wm. T. Straw, county agent, reports the placement of three mountain workers on Monday, September 18. Granville Barron and Allie Mullins, of Rockcastle county, were placed with Kenneth Stephenson at East Union. Albert Ray Bussell, Bussell county, was located with S. B. Barlow at Parks. All three are sons of county laborers are available.

In meeting the farm labor shortage, primarily a problem to be solved within Nicholas county, other counties which have a shortage similar to Nicholas. By a better neighborhood cooperation in the swap of help and machinery and by more efficient use of what labor there is available, more work hours will be accomplished. As a few farmers get their entire crop in the barn they can help their neighbors who have crops left in the field.
