TIDBITS of Kentucky Folklore

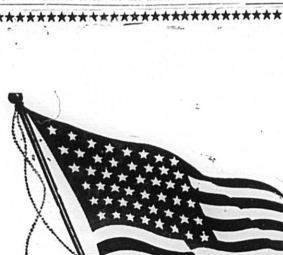
By Dr. Gordon Wilson
Western Ky. State Teachers College

"WHAT MIGHT BE YOUR NAME?"

Yesterday I was returning home from a long walk to Andy Hunt's. I saw that the electric pump at a rock quarry was running, and I wanted to see how much water had collected in the quarry because of the hundred inch magnitude rain that fell early in the morning. I approached the precipitous cliff overlooking the quarry and instantly heard a harsh, shrill whistle. Some yards away a caretaker or watchman had seen me and had suspected an enemy spy. I made a dangerous detour. Didn't I have a pair of field glasses and didn't I train them on something across the quarry? I walked rather slowly and probably looked like a spy. I told him who I was and what I was doing. He seemed quite skeptical until I told him also that I had known his boss for thirty years and a dozen of his boss's daughters. That pair of field glasses and my absolutely unkept appearance after walking in mud were two proofs for him. When I mentioned birds, he could think only of Bobwhites, and, I had no gun to kill birds, anyway. He let me off easily, though, and asked me to come back any time I wanted to study birds on that property. When I do return, I expect to look for this very man to report to, for I want him to know that I did not drop a demolition bomb on any of his machinery while I was around.

This experience makes me think of many similar ones that I have had. People just cannot get it out of their heads that a man can walk without hunting, fishing, or looking for stills. Just put on a pair of hobnailed shoes, a coat, and a slouch hat once become an object of suspicion, with every step you take. I wore my hobnailed boots I were yesterday. So I was a time I was that boots indicated 'lumberjacks' that people still cannot get used to them. In general, I must say that farmers and other landowners have been exceptionally kind to me in my hikes than thirty years of walking across their land, so much at home have I been made to feel that I rarely think about being on somebody's property, besides my own. Enough people through the years have been suspicious that I have had several funny experiences. I have never been arrested, but I have thought sometimes that I would be. Somebody studying birds? does not register in the minds of many people.

In other days we feared the ox-tongued-looking people who roved about. We had numerous stories of those wanderers and told them over and over until we believed them, but I never knew of any actual damage such travellers committed. My particular neighborhood had no reason to fear revenge officers, but we often regarded strangers, almost as hostilely as we would have regarded enemies. "What might be your name?" was common and deemed necessary for protection. Everybody was supposed to have some definite business and to be quick in stating it. We knew nothing about credentials and probably would have scoffed at such nonsense, but we asked such questions that nobody could long get by if he had no definite act. As soon as his identity was established, we felt at ease and asked him to dinner or to spend the night. If he had a pack, we knew he was just a pack peddler and would harm nobody. If he told us he was a tobacco buyer, he also was harmless. If he were a candidate, he introduced himself at once and sought our votes and influence. Anybody would recognize a preacher or a doctor. Lawyers were practically unknown, but if one came to attend magistrate's court, some one was sure to know him already. Looking at this custom of being very suspicious of strangers and then giving them the keys to the city seems a little strange. From many an experience, though, I can testify to the genuineness of the hospitality that follows the very careful establishment of one's identity.



NOW LET'S WIN THE

"PEACE"

Back in 1776, people of America fought for freedom . . . they won it hands down. In 1865 America gained freedom of another kind. In 1918 America and her allies won another war . . . that war was for World Peace . . . WE DID NOT WIN THE PEACE! And, now in 1945 freedom and Peace are here again. Our fighting men GAVE their lives for it on the battle fronts all over the world. Every American made some sacrifice during this war . . . you lent your money, you produced on the Farms and in the Factories. You backed America's fighting men during this war with everything you possessed . . . Remember—now that the fighting is over, our war-torn world must be reconstructed so that the PEACE will be a lasting one . . . so that the freedom Americans died for shall not be attacked again. NOW LET'S WIN THE PEACE!
