LETTERS FROM OUR BOYS IN SERVICE

James H. Dalzell Writes Henry Sisters

Berchtesgaden, Germany
August 10, 1945

Dear Girls,

You don't have to tell me to try to see the country. Just give me a few days rest between trips and I am gone again. I took in the town of Berchtesgaden this afternoon; not much of a place but it has some history to it. In the morning we will take Gen. Goering's electric boat for a trip. We will eat dinner at St. Bartholoma. It looks like I get Deutschland every time I turn around. I was in and out of it twice and did not know I was out of Germany. While we are here we will visit Hitler's and Goering's mountain homes. I'll take a look at the Eagles Nest. I think you girls would like the trip. The canal where we are staying is just a few miles out of Bogaden and has been built since the war from neo-dressed pine and by Prisoner of War camp labors and it is real nice. Has a basement, 12 or 15 rooms, bath, hot and cold water, a day room, radio, stand in each room, light, plenty of fire wood, good mess hall 100 yards from front door. Most of the cans were sent back into town tonight but it is rather damp and I have a little cold left over from my trip to France so I stayed in and am listening to the radio.

From the radio it looks like the Japs are kind of upset about something or other. Perhaps it is the Russians or our new bomb. We hardly give it a thought over this way or the other but we all would be glad to hear that it is all over. I would just be sure to be here in Bogaden or at Bartholoma eating roast as any where when I hear that it is all over for the Japs. They can't win so they hold just as well call it off.

You can tell Roger Womack that they have a lot of foxhounds around here and they are not mine. They can run in the orchards fairly well but when the Fox gets enough he just takes to the mountains for a while and it doesn't last long then. The dogs here are small and good ones but it is just too much for them when the fox takes a notion to go up around 8 or 9 thousand feet above sea level.

It is rather nice for a fox and a rare here. You can watch them most of the time through glasses when they are running in the orchards till a cloud comes along and shuts you out for a while. The last I saw of the fox this afternoon or you wouldn't see night for it got dark pretty soon after he went out of the orchard and got on a long bench where I was close to the snow line, turned and came back near the orchard and then set out to a small waterfall and perhaps he is over among the rocks. The dogs never did get up to where I saw him last.

I saw some fine hounds in Holland but they would be of little need in this country. They are all fine dogs, large, bold and good to hunt and were neither of our gun shy. I doubt if there is a dog in France or Germany that is not gun shy. In France they don't know the difference between a long nose and an ordinary shell. I have seen them while never from an incoming shell but they are not hysterical when it was on the way. In France it was learned that the shell was to be feared after the first had hit in the woods. You thought no fox ever left the edge of it that is clear out of it. If you see any foxes, hysterical bodies run or anything, he would be by it on the side where the shells were coming from, for he did not take him long to learn about tree bursts. The animals know as well or better about the shells and strafing planes as any one. A horse would pay little attention to a low-flying plane but the minute one peeled off in a dive they know they were in danger. Some have had to be shot to keep from their falling in foxholes on men when the field was strafed. People tell you that a horse won't run into a hole day or night. When they are being strafed they will run into anything even a 90 MM gun while it is being fired. There are many little things like that people that have not been here will never believe.
