Germans Fall Back Behind Oder River as Red Tide Rolls On; Act for More Essential Apparel

Driving southward to Manila, Yank infantrymen trod gingerly over crude-fashioned landscape on Luzon.

EUROPE:
Red Tide

Long in the making, when Germany first envisioned the necessity of fighting by herself, the Reich's Oder river line was put to its first real test by Marshal Koney's 1st Ukraine army rolled to its ramparts on a broad front in Silesia. The "little Rabbit of the east."

As Koney's forces headed on the Oder line, Marshal Zhukov's Russian army pushed on the east-central front to the approaches to the northeastern edge of Germany's Fatherland. Premier Stalin saw in the Yanks' poised forward swing, emphasized the claims to Manila and had not yet committed the major part of his army to the Oder front. As they eased into readiness for the last drive, they were preparing to be one of the nationalities invited U. S. air forces.

In assessing to Silesia, the Russians massed a German force of great industrial value, rich in essential resources and easily reinforced from behind. Also involved was the Nazi contemplation that Russian advance through Silesia might open the way for Russia, traditionally known as U. S. ally foreign.

CLOTHING:
Plan Controls

Seeking to avoid the dislocations of essential fuel and transportation industries, which were the blame most of attacks, the government announced a new plan.

First, the War Production board given to give priority preferment for factories to manufacturers of clothing, children's apparel and underwear, with the government controlling quality to assure maximum serviceability of the garments and limiting the fabrication.

Second, the Office of Price Administration decided on fixing clothing costs on the previous single item of the new plan, the program, planned to be months proof the average level of the first half of 1942, a reduction of about 18 to 25 per cent.

Although most so-called luxury items, as American from the market since the beginning of hostilities, WPB said, better grades of clothing will be available, and the overall supply will be adequate to meet the needs.

Wallace Named

With business generally looking for the appointment of Henry A. Wallace's appointment as secretary of commerce, the senate sought to speed up action in the crisis created by considering the transfer of the secretary's earlier threat in the middle fought off sewage-handled attacks on a broad front.

Temporarily relieved by Von Rundstedt's daring thrust into Belgium streamed back into the Siegfried Line under a hail of close aerial fire, British forces to the north maintained their heavy pressure against the Roer river line defenses on the plain to Cologne.

With their Belgium bubble burst, the Germans stepped up the intensity of their suicidal struggle in Alsace, where the U. S. 7th army, forced to bear the full weight of the Nazi pressure in this area following the retirement of units to meet the enemy's earlier threat in the north, fought off savage hand-led attacks on a broad front.

Temporarily relieved by Von Rundstedt's daring thrust into Belgium, Germany's vital Ruhrland again was seriously endangered by the British operation above Arnhem, and the U. S. 1st and 3rd armies' regaining of the initiative.

Terms for Hungary

Return of territory to Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia, payment of $200,000,000 as reparations and provision of at least eight infantry divisions to help fight Germany marked the Allies' armistice terms to Hungary accepted in Moscow.

No sooner had Hungary returned Ruthenia to Czechoslovakia than the latter ceded the mountainous province to Russia, which sought it as a natural defense barrier to the west by enlarged Soviet Ukraine.

Payment of the $200,000,000 in reparations will be made in goods over a six-year period, it was revealed, with Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia sharing in $100,000,000.

From a normal 136,000,000 bushels of wheat, Australia's production was estimated to have dropped to a mere 98,000,000 bushels; while 2,900,000 of 127,500,000 sheep and thousands of head of cattle and were said to have been lost.

POLITICS:
Party Plans

Girding for the 1946 congressional and 1948 presidential elections, the Republican national committee, meeting in Indianapolis, Ind., adopted a program looking toward the active revitalization of the party.

Proposed by Chairman Harrison E. Brownell, who was reelected to the position, the program calls for the establishment of a full time organization with an enlarged staff, which, in addition to maintaining contact with state units, would work closely with GOP congressional committees and help them prepare legislation.

Originally a Dewey man, Brownell faced some opposition to his reelection as chairman chiefly because of discontent with the last campaign and the feeling that his retention might strengthen the New York governor's position. But he set at rest fears at rest by declaring that he would work for no man's candidacy but that of the party's nominee.

On the other side of the fence the Democratic national committee, with $400,000 in the kitty, revealing plans to have each state raise a certain quota of money to help defray the expenses of the party's national election publicity and educational drives.

At the same time, Chairman Hannegan announced that Democratic Jackson Day birthday banquets to be held on or about March 4 would be turned into a series of fund-raising affairs for the raising of funds for future election expenses.

CANNED VEGETABLES:
Guard Supplies

Because uncontrolled demand would have resulted in the disappearance of short stocks of canned vegetables three to five months before the new pack, rationing of these items was restricted in December, it was revealed.

Originally, OPA had removed canned vegetables from rationing in September because of the inadequate supply of canned goods and the fact that a number of

SADDLEBAGS DOCTOR

Dr. Hertzler, in HORSE-AND-BUGGY DOCTOR, has immortalized the next generation of doctors after the time of my father. Dr. Hertzler was young enough to ride the gap from the pioneer type to the most modern physician. But Fatherly barely graduated into the buggy, and that in summer only, not long before his death in 1915. Up until then he rode horseback, carrying his medicines in a pair of saddlebags. Two of his numerous horses bore him more than half of his journeys in his forty-four years of practice. One was his standby for ordinary errands. The other for eight months of every year. He would ride that same good horse, Tucker, from Jan. to Aug. 1st, and then would ride another horse, Jim, from Aug. 1st to Jan. 1st. Tucker was a dark bay, with a white star in his forehead and white hind feet. Jim was a dapple gray. Both were gaited horses, and Father liked them for their easy motion. He would ride that same old horse, Tucker, from boyhood days to the end of his career. Jim was a comparatively young horse when he bought him, and he was only eight years old when Father died.

Father was born and reared in the hill country of Todd county, Kentucky, and began his practice there. He was a graduate of Vanderbilt university medical school, Nashville, Tenn., and had taken a post-graduate course in Chicago. He was a young man when he began practicing medicine, and he was a young man when he died. He was only forty-four years old when he died, but he had already established a reputation as a skilful physician and surgeon. He had also established a reputation as a man of sterling character, and as a citizen who was interested in the welfare of his community.

Father was a tall man, and he was a handsome man. He had dark hair and dark eyes, and a dark complexion. He was a man of dignified bearing, and he was a man of quiet manners. He was a man of few words, and he was a man of deep thought. He was a man of strong convictions, and he was a man of high principles. He was a man of great courage, and he was a man of great faith. He was a man of great love, and he was a man of great sorrow. He was a man of great joy, and he was a man of great peace. He was a man of great wisdom, and he was a man of great understanding. He was a man of great compassion, and he was a man of great mercy. He was a man of great humility, and he was a man of great meekness. He was a man of great patience, and he was a man of great endurance. He was a man of great perseverance, and he was a man of great determination. He was a man of great resolution, and he was a man of great courage. He was a man of great faith, and he was a man of great hope. He was a man of great love, and he was a man of great charity. He was a man of great humility, and he was a man of great meekness. He was a man of great patience, and he was a man of great endurance. He was a man of great perseverance, and he was a man of great determination. He was a man of great resolution, and he was a man of great courage. He was a man of great faith, and he was a man of great hope. He was a man of great love, and he was a man of great charity.

WAR PRODUCTION:
Further Boosts

Further increases in the production efforts to meet the output, production of critical war materials, with further increases for rockets, tires and trucks, planes, light artillery and weapons, was announced by the War Production board.

In addition to these items, it was announced that production of rolls for greater output of military equipment, aircraft engines, ammunition, cotton duck, communications wire and tanks.

ARMIES:
Duped

Germany's half-million men behind the 15 and 20, who have voluntarily entered the service, have fallen on the task of cleaning out the Japanese pockets of resistance in the South Pacific, felt far behind the front lines by General MacArthur's leapfrogging tactics.

Left to wither away, 300,000 Japs, supplied by submarine, have remained to maintain their positions in a great arc extending from the Solomons to New Guinea.

By plotting troops behind these Jap garrisons to coop them up while support of U. S. aerial and naval forces reduced their communications to a minimum, General MacArthur avoided the necessity of committing his own units in long and costly all-out battle to storm them one by one, thus delaying his whole offensive schedule.

RAIL TRAFFIC

Railroads in 1944 handled the greatest volume of freight traffic, measured in ton miles of revenue freight, for any year on record. Total traffic amounted to approximately 737,000,000,000 revenue ton-miles, according to preliminary estimates based on reports from Class I railroads. 1.4 per cent above the previous record.

The volume of freight traffic carried by the railroads in 1944 was an increase of 121 per cent compared with 1939.

CARLISLE YOUTH RACING NORTH ATLANTIC HUNS

Aboard a Destroyer Escort at sea, Jesse W. Mann, of Carlisle, is busily bracing the timers of North Atlantic convoy duty after a long tour of duty on a cruiser in the South Pacific.

Mann, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Mann, 25 West Main street, is an electrician's mate, 2nd class, aboard a DE. He has been in the Navy nearly three and one half years. His training started at Great Lakes, after which he put in two months at an electrician's school at Dearborn, Mich. He was then sent to the Pacific, where he saw action in 15 months, during which time he was promoted from seaman to sailor.

Before the war he worked on a farm, after the fighting stops he intends to get into some sort of electrical work. His job aboard the DE is to keep the electrical equipment in top working order, a job his fresh enough to like.

While at home he put in much of his spare time hunting, fishing and swimming. Aboard ship he finds himself confined and fresh air is a major treat.

EIGHT INFANTILE PARALYSIS

As the season is here, when parents question whether to take their children to the theatre, it will say how much the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis has done to help. The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc., was founded by Mr. Major General Hugh S. Johnson, Chairman of the Persian Gulf Command.

One of the greatest needs that the Foundation has met is the need for expert medical care. Many children have suffered in the past because they could not afford the proper medical attention. The Foundation has made it possible for these children to receive the best medical care available.

The Foundation has also done much to help the families of these children. It has provided them with financial assistance, and has helped them to find employment.

FINDING LIFE

Dr. Edward Lee G. LE GORMAN SILER and sister Miss Ruth Siler, are now home.

CAPT. EUGENE J. SILER

Has returned from the war zone. Glad to see you back.

That boyhood youth, your pride for fun and play,
Though measure came and cast it all away,
Those souls were lies — I know they're wrong.

A flag that flew from mast on high
Spoke out to me as I passed by.
With bones so clean, like a well known song.
Those words were lies — I know they're wrong.

Some homes were talking too today
They made me stop to hear them say,
"Because he went our fires burn strong."
Those words were lies — we know they're wrong.

Columbia beer-If came in last night
The boy is mine, I rode that flight.
As God still lives and rules His world
Those words were lies — I know they're wrong.

Then up spake He whose life was of cost.
"A life may be found if it is lost,
My people shall know as time grows long.
Those words were lies — of course they're wrong."

The first really catastrophic flood in American history was the Johnstown flood of 1889 which destroyed more than 2,200 lives and swept away $10,000,000 worth of property.

The Patriot Or I Didn't Have A Job Before The War But I'm A Big Shot Now

Let me remind in prose and verse
The well known fact: war is a curse.

Our men are killed, our cities burned
And culture's wheels are back-ward turned.

Yet in the midst of present woe
A smiling visage I can show
Since I am not a "draft dodger"
Destined to stab or bomb or shoot
The enemy. I must remain
At home and work, my task is great
So day by day I take my place
Cursed monkey men and mule re-rate!
And all me weekly hours fill
(Full eight and forty, it would kill
Less patriotic men I know)
With honest toil. Meanwhile I grow
In bank account and credit house
And though I am not one to carouse
Taxes -dmittedly are high
And wages rise, I know not why
Too, coffee is such a bore
I find from half-empty store
And the cigarettes and rye
So
