BIBLE THOUGHT THIS WEEK

Blessed be the Lord my strength, which teacheth my hands to war, and my fingers to fight. Psalms 144:1.

WARTIME GOSSIP DANGEROUS

With our nation at war, idle gossip has become something more than one of the cardinal sins—it comes dangerously close to the borderline of subversive activity.

Propaganda chiefs of the enemy nations realize this quite well, and much of their efforts are directed toward the dissemination of unfounded rumors which tend to shake our faith in our war aims, final victory or the motives of our allies.

"Gossip is a disease," according to an article by Michael Drury in the February issue of Good Housekeeping magazine. "It is a disease that has become a national occupation, pervading almost every known activity from politics to baby-minding and probably consumes more of our collective time than actually than baseball or the movies.

"One searching look around you, and a few listens, will show you how widespread this ugly habit is. Try listening to your own conversation for one whole day. Really hear yourself talking and then check up on what you listen to from others—then hang your head in shame."

Not only can gossip cause serious trouble for others but indulgence in it points up serious defects in your character to observant persons and cheats you out of your full measure of happiness in life ,according to the writer, who states:

"Criticism is nine-tenths gossip and vice versa. Criticism and gossip loudly proclaim our own lack of adventure. Gossip is always a confession of either motive or inhibicility. There is no such thing as harmless gossip. It is an alarming fact that we tend to become what we criticize in others. Gossip and criticism drain off more time than it is comfortable to contemplate."

"STORM SIGNALS"

Farmers "are warily watching the economic weather-cock for signs of a nuclear deposition storm," says Roy Anderson in the Farm Journal, "and they are taking little stock in political promises of succor. Very few are counting on what the government may do, or what schemes industry and labor may come up with. They are putting their faith in themselves, and their ability to get in shape now for whatever the future may have in store."

This growing attitude is in a large measure the result of the helplessness many farmers feel under subsidy programs which are ostensibly to hold down the cost of living, but which, in reality, make the farmer depend on government as the costs of production advance, and the subsidies which the farmer must accept in lieu of the true production price for his crops, are added to the growing tax burden of the nation.

Farmers are smart enough to know that this process is but a makeshift, and that sooner or later it will leave them high and dry, or else they will become merely farm tenants under government with their income entirely subject to political manipulation.

THERE IS NO BENEVOLENT DESPOTISM

The chances of getting our labor laws amended at present so as to make them fair to labor, industry and the public, seem very remote. Instead of creating labor harmony, our laws have pitted labor against industry, when as a matter of fact, labor and industry are as dependent on each other as the heart and the stomach.

So-called "labor laws" are as much a misnomer as would be the term "industry laws." Law is law and it should apply to all alike. One of the menaces to future democracy in this nation are pressure groups which claim to control blocs of votes and, with this as a club, intimidate lawmakers into passing class legislation.

Members of Congress are interested in preserving the liberty of all labor and all the people, rather than in lending aid to leaders who have shown their defiance of government and our armed forces by their repeated disregard of no-strike pledges, and the earnest pleas of the President for uninterrupted production.

The American working man is now controlled by what may at first seem to be a benevolent labor despotism, which perhaps temporarily gives special and unfair vantages. But this despotism is becoming an evil force that is debasing almost every principle of American labor. As the Reverend Norman Vincent Peale, D.D., says, wage earners are being asked to "furnish subservient backs upon which ambitious men may climb to power over their fellows."

A JOLT TO PUBLIC CONFIDENCE

It is unfortunate that OPA saw fit to cancel without notice the ration points that housewives had been so religiously conserving. It was, in effect, the breaking of a contract. Millions of women had been saving their points not for only if needed, as they understand the points were good indefinitely. The person who saved was therefore penalized.

On top of this "gaseous suspension" orders were asked by OPA for stores alleged to have sold goods in violation of the ceiling regulation, when the only information the stores had on the sweeping changes was from news stories.

In specific cases in Portland, Oregon, the attorney for the food stores said, "Enforcement officials of the local OPA had previously advised these operators that they were not being run by the newspapers and that only their official releases were official and that no changes were to be made until official notice had been given by the OPA."

Such tactics seem to be an inexcitable part of bureaucracy which the people must endure as part and parcel of wartime control. The Congressional investigation that is suggested may in some measure restore public confidence. Facts rather than secrecy are the most potent weapons in maintaining public morale.

SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS GRANTED TO VETERANS

Life insurance companies will make second mortgage loans to war veterans, which are guaranteed in full by the government, the attorney general office at Frankfort has ruled.

The opinion was an extension of a previous one given the state insurance division to the effect that insurance companies operating under Kentucky law can not make first mortgage loans because only half the premium in this case is guaranteed by the government.

In the case of second mortgage loans—which are additional to one already placed on property a veteran is buying and usually smaller than the first mortgage loans, the government stands behind the full amount, it was pointed out. Therefore under state law insurance companies may invest their funds in them.

513 PRISONERS ARE RESCUED FROM NIPS

The daring operation cost the lives of 27 Americans and Filipinos. Two more were wounded.

"No incident of the campaign has given me such personal satisfaction," Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in his communique announcing the rescue.

To emphasize his satisfaction he awarded decorations to every member of the commando party.

Cheering doughboys of the American liberation army lined the roadway as the prisoners were driven in trucks and ambulances in an evacuation hospital for food and new clothing.

Some of the prisoners appeared dazed, unable to realize their good fortune, their return to friendly hands.

Most of them plainly showed their ebullions. A few of the officers still wore their insignia of rank. Some had managed to retain their battered Army campaign hats. Others wore overseas caps at jaunty angels.

Tears filled the eyes of many of the men when they once again saw the American flag, and the equipment and might of the new United States Army.

The dream of liberation became a staunch reality when the men were given their first breakfast under freedom.

Eggs, meat, grapefruit, coffee, biscuits and jam were the convincers. The men tackled the food with enthusiasm but on a prison diet made up mostly of rice.

Evacuated farther back, to an evacuation hospital, the men found more and better food facilities for treatment of wounds and diseases.

General MacArthur visited the hospital for a visit, and Filipinos had known on Butaan and Corregidor. Some of the men who could stand came to attention as their commanding officer entered. Some stood and saluted or removed clothing and insignias which they had concealed.

The three years in prison had not completely sapped the energy of some of the men, and they appreciated one great wish—to get back into the fight and help drive Arthur recover Manilla and Corregidor.
