BIBLE THOUGHT
THIS WEEK

Ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart.—Jeremiah 29:13.

EDITORIALS

A rate-card to be distributed among advertising agencies in description of merit of The Carlisle Mercury as an advertising medium bears the following statement: Nicholas county, the best all-around county in Kentucky, is the home of the Carlisle Mercury, long a prominent factor in the Commonwealth as one of its best-read newspapers. Carlisle, thriving center of a county population of 8,500, is its address.

And who would there be to belie the statement that Nicholas county is the best all-around county in Kentucky? Who would there be to gainsay the statement that Carlisle is a thriving center of population?

The statement could have gone much further, of course, by saying that Carlisle is not only a thriving center of population but is the thriving center of a population of just about the best people in Kentucky but such an additional tact may have brought about a challenge from some few other counties which the editor would not have time to accept until after the busy days of the election campaigns are over. For now time is at a premium because of the amount of printing required by the candidates for office, the printing of ballots and other tasks.

Suffice it to say for the moment that, in the opinion of the Mercury, Nicholas county is the best all-around county in Kentucky; that there is ample evidence to bear out this claim and that as time goes on, this evidence will be presented in these columns.

Isn't it the Chinese who have developed a barkless dog? Whoever it is, many residents of Carlisle would like to make the acquaintance of someone who could make mute the dogs which make each night hideous with yelping and yammering just when most people are trying to get a little hard-earned rest. According to informants, this unnecessary and provoking condition is felt all over Carlisle and is a nuisance which dog owners should try to correct.

Dogs, like most things, are all right in their place but their place is certainly not keeping people awake all night who could otherwise get some sleep.

GLANCES HERE AND THERE
By I. D. Zern

Mrs. Byra Snapp, of this county, is authority for the following rather remarkable incident. She relates that several years ago Mrs. Bruce Mattox, of near Bald Hill, visited the cemetery there and broke a limb from a sycamore tree which she sharpened and drove into the ground at her home.

In spite of her husband's declaring that the limb would not grow, she insisted that it would and it did, according to Mrs. Snapp. Upon Mrs. Mattox's death about three years ago, the tree which had grown from the transplanted limb was noticed to begin to wither and now is dead, neighbors have told Mrs. Snapp. Mr. Mattox still resides at the place which he owns.

On a business mission to Louisville last week in a rather successful effort to interest commercial advertising agencies in the value of the Carlisle Mercury, and incidentally rubbing elbows with many fine things said about the newspaper and the people of this county.

One bit of comment I would like to relate here came from Jim Donahue, with whom I talked on the tenth floor of the big building housing the general offices of the L. and N. Railroad Company.

In charge of personnel over the entire system, he recalled happy days spent in Carlisle a good many years ago and asked to be remembered to those who knew him here and in particular to Howard Dorsey.

The big, genial executive, in whose voice can be detected a trace of a brogue and in whose eyes there is a tell-tale twinkle, is one the like of whom is met with but seldom, being an Irishman—and a Republican.

Visited the new and swank Democratic headquarters on the mezzanine floor of the Seelbach and found the suite to be ornate and sumptuous but unoccupied except for Clyde Hockerson, who is acting as sort of major-domo.

Harry Lee Waterfield had just left for his home in western Kentucky, after being engaged in the headquarters in his work of organization of the party against the fall elections, Clyde told me.

While there I procured a number of fine framable protographs of the late President and the present one, which will be given to first callers at the Mercury office as long as they last.

Ran in to Zellner Peale, secretary to the Governor during the Johnson administration. He told me something that few Kentuckians know; that Keen had been wounded in action while serving overseas in World War I, as a lieutenant in the infantry.

Saw Dan Talbot standing in front of the Kentucky hotel and while talking to him was reminded again that he epitomizes more than any one I know Henley's poem and the lines: "My head is bloody, but unbowed."

A valiant fighter, I am convinced that the passage of years will reveal him as a statesman who has performed a lasting service to the people rather than the political ogre his enemies have tried to make of him.

Even those who have fought him hardest have never accused him of a falsehood, of evading an issue or of ever failing a friend.

In Lexington, the lady at home, told me, among other things, that she had been invited on a picnic a few days ago but had not gone.

"What I want to be invited on," she declared, "is a square meal. I've been picnicking for weeks."

While there a letter came from the jimmie who was the subject of a recent editorial in these columns. He said that he had been "scratched" when the Japs broke through the lines the other night and threw a number of grenades.

We have presumed from his sketchy letter that he was scratched in diving for cover and not as the effect of more intimate contact with the explosive.

A few days ago "Spike" Colliver and I were relating to each other our separate exploits in France during the last war and were going pretty good when I happened to notice we were being overheard by a veteran of the present war, service-striped and with a chest-full of vari-colored bars.

I was somewhat pleased to note that he was listening intently and had reached the open-mouthed stage while "Spike" continued a yarn. Of course, I had been telling the truth but I can't, naturally, answer for "Spike."

Recently promoted to the rank of staff sergeant as a member of an air flight group, Warren R. Fisher, Jr., former pilot of the Mercury, has written from a base in the far Pacific to Jim Henry relaking some of his experiences and stating that he is pleased with the present management. So here's thanks to Warren, best wishes for his safety and an early voyage home.

Walter Wyrick, of the Lyric theater, reported today that someone had swiped the display poster advertising the showing of Salome this week, which would have been all right, he said, if the culprits had not taken the valuable thumb tacks used to hold the lady in place.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

DON'T KNOW THERE'S A WAR

The other day a returned soldier, strolling around New York after having lived the grim realities of a shell-torn, filthy, fly-infested world upon which those windows, upon the thronged restaurants, upon the motor traffic which filled the avenue, and upon the well-groomed people who heard to pay: "They don't know there's a war."

But those thousands of people going about their business or pleasure had sons, husbands, fathers, relatives, cousins and close friends in the Army and Navy. Many of them had suffered the loss of loved ones. Few were without a nagging, constant anxiety. They, too, were in the war, for the home front must be kept humming, the factories ready be manned, business must go on in order that those who are in and beyond must receive the home front support which they would be able to battle from.

What did he expect to see, or want to see? Would it have relieved his mind if the shops had been empty, if traffic had ceased, if the people, he seemed to have regard, hungry-looking, and depressed? Isn't it better to dress well as possible, to go on with the business of living, to maintain physical and mental strength and balance, and to make whatever burden has to be borne?

It is one of the silliest of remarks to say: "They don't know a war is going on." It would be hard, indeed, to find an American who isn't conscious all the time that the country is engaged in a desperate struggle. It would be hard to find a home that isn't in one way or another bent for a long while under the cloud of the world tragedy.

What do the soldiers want to come home to? Is it to a nation of sackcloth and ashes, with silent streets, with darkened houses, and with bombed cities? Or will there prefer to find America strong, vigorous, prosperous, able to recover from the great strain, to pay its debts, revive its normal life, and offer jobs and opportunities to the returning veterans, the burden and heart of the day?"—The Lexington Herald-Leader.

NO 'TOWEL' PLAY

A committee of chicken breeders at Mayfield has been at work a week offered a reward of $5,000 to the person who could produce a breed that would be meat bird within three years. The reward was offered because it was stated that the public has demanded more white meat on its dinner chicken. Efforts are made for a white meat campaign to match one put on by turkey growers, who evolved the Broad-Breasted Bronze breed which carries virtually all white meat.

It would seem that the chicken breeders are going to have a hard job with the competition offered by the turkey raisers. But why not have fun with competition? Why not follow the good old democratic principle of "May the competition one better? If the turkey people have a fowl which has virtually all white meat," why not produce a chicken that is entirely white meat?

We'll bet a Gallup pole would show the public nearly 100 per cent in favor of a chicken with out wings, or back, or head or feet. Wouldn't that be putting one over on the turkey guys?

Imagine a fowl with a tender white meat zigzard with the flavor of shrimp, or lobster, or crab. Yes sir, this thing of flavor is something not even the progressive turkey people have thought of, and no doubt it could revolutionize the entire food industry. They could compete with the big fishers with drumsticks as big around as your thigh and naturally flavored like two-year-old chicken. Kentucky country-cured and hickory-smoked, at that. And chicken with a taste even more delicate and delectable than the flesh of the first would-be cowboy who had a ready sale. And what is to prohibit them from going even beyond the bounds of fish and animal for flavors? Cinnamon and mint, clove and carraparish, pine olive and avocado, rhubarb and strawberry—these are realms to be explored.

Yes possibilities unlimited await the chicken breeders in their search. But if they don't do something more than merely increase the size of the chicken breast we fear the turkey people with their head start will have the best of it.—Paducah Sun-Democrat.

ON THE FARM

On Kentucky Farms

From a two-acre patch of Aroma strawberries sat in 1944, N. P. Paschall of Calloway county this year sold 426 crates of berries at the ceiling price of $7.80 per crate.

On 20 acres of rye and vetch, William O. Gilbreath of McCreary county has pastured 25 head of cattle since February.

More than 100,000 acres of forest land in Muhlenberg county are now under protection against forest fires.

Ed Leick of Campbell county realized a net profit of $66.60 from his flock of 132 White Leghorn hens last month, when they averaged 23 eggs per hen.

A pond-digging bull-dozer outfit is operating every day in Robertson county for farmers who have had rough-water ponds.

From 500 to 700 acres of lima beans and 50 acres of cucumbers are being grown in Fulton county for the Stokley Carolina Company.

Approximately 11,000 strawberry plants have been planted in Wayne county this year.

Claude Tandy of Carroll county reports good results from treating his hogs with phenothiazine.

George Midden of Harrison county paid $1,010 for an Aberdeen-Angus herd sire purchased from Huston Bell of Winchester, Ky.

Dosnage to the wheat crop by the Hessian fly in Logan county is estimated at $375,000.

The strawberry association serving the Purchase district shipped 153 cars of berries this spring, the crop bringing around a half-million dollars.

Approximately 150 acres of land have been terraced on the farm of W. W. Daniels in Franklin county.

A total of 8,174 bags of milkweed pods were shipped from Union county last year, school children receiving 20 cents per bag for gathering them.

Because Robert Jackson of Knox county produced 80 bushels per acre of hybrid corn to the acre in 1944, he is planting it again this year. He has seven acres of Ky. 103 and three acres of 72 B.

Recipe Of The Week

Despite the sugar shortage, frozen desserts may be made at home as syrup substitutes quite satisfactorily in them, according to food specialists at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. This is particularly true when tree-ripened peaches are used. The addition of a pinch of salt further brings out the natural sweetness of the fruit.

Frozen Peach Dessert

1 cup crushed peaches
1-4 cup sugar or 1-2 cup white corn syrup
1 cup cream or evaporated milk
2 egg whites
1-8 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons lemon juice or 1-2 teaspoon almond flavoring

Combine the crushed peaches with the syrup and stir until well blended. Fold the sweetened fruit into the whipped cream, and then add the beaten egg whites which the salt has been added. Add lemon juice or almond flavoring. Freeze without stirring in a mechanical refrigerator or pack in an ice cream freezer.

Evaporated milk may be whipped satisfactorily if it is thoroughly chilled and if the bowl and beater are also cold.

Menu: Chicken pie, buttered new peas, harvard beets, combination vegetable salad, biscuits and butter and frozen peach dessert.

Four-H'ers Urged To Check Farm Accidents

Four-H Club boys and girls are urged to put a limit on checking accident hazards on their farms this year. Authorities emphasize that due to labor shortage, farm families must work extra hours and the resulting fatigue makes them less alert. Also, farmers must employ as helpers young people with no previous experience in farm hazards.

Preventable accidents on farms result in the death of 17,000 members of farm households and injury to 1,500,000 others. This toll seriously affects production of farm food. In one county 4-H safety records, General Motors offers merit awards. They include silver medals to five winners in each county and $25 War Bonds to the ten top ranking county champions in each state. National 4-H Club Congress boys and girls at the close of the year highest rating state champions in each of the four extension sections and four at large. Twelve of the sectional winners will be selected to receive $200 college scholarships.

In addition, the county in each state reporting the most outstanding 4-H safety program in 1945 will receive a special plaque designating the honor. Full information concerning the activity, which is conducted under the direction of the Extension Service, may be obtained from county extension agents.

Last year in Kentucky, county winners were named in Bath, Butler, Gallati, Henry and Marin counties.

Clipping Controls Sweet Corn Worms

The Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station recommends clipping the ends of ears to control earworms in sweet corn. Here is the way it is done:

1. Watch for the silks of the corn. When about two-thirds of them have started to dry and brown, prepare for action. Get a pair of sharp pruning shears; or for small plantings, a sharp knife. Also get a container which may be easily carried to collect clippings.

2. On the fourth day after twothirds of the silks have browned, clip off the end of the shuck about 1-2 inch from the tip of the ear. Ears without brownclipped surface. If it is discolored brown, the worm is below the cut. Clip further down on the ear until the worm is removed. If the end of the ear is clipped off little or no harm is done. At this stage in the growth of the corn the cut heals readily. Put all clippings into the container. Ears without brown silks also should be clipped at this time.

3. As soon as the clipping is done, destroy the worms by burying, submerging in water, burning, or by any other thoroughgoing method.

4. If worms are numerous, a re-clip in the same way, 4 to 6 days later, will be worth-while if the grower has time to do it. At this time do not clip off the ends of the ears since they may not heal. This condition invites injury from birds and may cause rot. The first clipping is the more important and usually gives satisfactory protection from worm damage.

Kentucky Peaches For Home Canning

Kentucky has a good peach crop for home canning, says the State College of Agriculture and Home Economics. While some of the early varieties already are on the market, the main run will be from about July 20 to Aug. 15. Not only is Kentucky's peach crop of good size, but the peaches are of good quality, says the college. The set was so heavy that thinning was done in practically all commercial orchards. There was little damage from disease or worms this season.

Early peaches, especially small varieties, are often used for spicing or pickling. To reduce the amount of sugar in a favorite recipe, a third of the sugar called for may be substituted with white corn syrup, according to canning specialists at the college.

Spiced Peaches

6 pounds peaches
(about 1 gal.)
1-3 cups corn syrup
2 2-3 cups sugar
1 tablespoon whole cloves
4 or 5 sticks cinnamon
1 small piece ginger root

Make a syrup of the sugar, corn syrup and vinegar. Add the spices which have been tied in a bag and boil for 5 minutes. Drop a few of the peeled peaches at a time into the syrup and simmer until they can be pierced with a straw. Remove from the fire and let stand over night. Pack peaches into sterilized jars and cover with the syrup which has been boiled for about 10 minutes. Seal immediately. Process 5 minutes in the hot water bath.

Conference In Breathitt

About 75 men and women discussed "A More Beautiful Breathitt" at a conference at the Robinson Experiment Substation at Quicksand. Group discussed the use of flowers, native shrubbery, bluegrass and trees in the beautification of home, school and church grounds. Sponsored by the Breathitt County 4-H Council, the conference was attended by farm men and women, school teachers, church leaders and the county and home agent.

4-H Clubs Hold Recreation Day

A Letcher county 4-H club recreation day was attended about 225 boys and girls and leaders at the Whitesburg golf course near Whitesburg, the program included folk games, soft ball, volley ball, horse shoe pitching and other forms of recreation. A special feature was a demonstration in folk games given by members of the Oscaloosa club which used its own string band. The program was sponsored by the Letcher county 4-H council.

Kentucky Farmers Work Long Days

Kentucky farm operators are working over 12 hours a day, according to the State College of Agriculture at Lexington. Hired men are averaging slightly over 10 hours.

Monthly farm wages in Kentucky averaged $49 on June 1, plus board, or $2.50 a day, plus board. For the country as a whole, farm wages were $81.30, with board, or $3.65 a day. Highest wages were reported in the state of Washington, $144 a month.

The average farm wage in the United States has doubled in three years.

New Leaf Disease Found Increasing

The Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station says that a barley tobacco disease called Streak has been increasing in Owen, Grant, Pendleton, Bracken and neighboring counties. Add to that Brown-eye spot and the disease causes the stalk to be weak and to break when the plant must die, and growers often top the plant back to healthy leaves, thus causing a considerable loss in the final yield. Uptopped plants, even though severely injured, will gradually resume normal growth and make a fair crop. Growers also state that
